Red Attackers May Face U.S. Air Chase Over China Border

No 'Privileged Sanctuary'
Will be Certain for Enemy

BY JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson reportedly has decided that if Communist planes attack U.S. naval forces operating off Viet Nam, American fighters can chase them across the Red China frontier if necessary.

The decision to provide more precise authority for U.S. pilots to apply the principle of "hot pursuit" and deny the Communist "privileged sanctuary" reportedly was prompted by the Red Chinese movement of Soviet-built jet warplanes into Communist Viet Nam early in August.

The aircraft were introduced into the area after American planes blasted torpedo boats and other installations in North Viet Nam following attacks on American destroyers in the Tonkin Gulf.

Tension May Grow
The sequence of events indicates a slow and cautious escalation of the danger of direct U.S.-Chinese clashes in south-east Asia.

This situation is likely to become more tense, and probably much more serious, if deteriorating political conditions inside South Viet Nam tempt the Communists to exploit the disorder and political instability.

A buildup of military pressures inside South Viet Nam by increased Red guerrilla strikes and parallel external actions could produce a very grave crisis in short order.

Hope for Calm

From Washington's point of view, however, the South Vietnamese situation is subject to so many unpredictable developments that no one here can say whether the worst possibilities of increasing danger are likely to be realized or not. What is said authoritatively is that administration leaders, deeply occupied at home with the American political campaigns, would like to do what they can within the limits of U.S. policy to keep the situation as quiet as possible.

Guard Sea Flank
The last major military crisis for U.S. forces began developing Aug. 2 when Communist torpedo boats from North Vietnamese bases struck at American destroyers in the Tonkin Gulf.

Youth Shot Critically In Hunting Accident

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A Dunn County youth was wounded critically in a shooting accident Saturday, the opening day of Wisconsin's small game and upland bird hunting seasons.

Willis Woodbeck, 18, of Elk Mound was in critical condition after emergency surgery at Luther Hospital in Eau Claire. Hospital authorities said his spleen, liver and diaphragm were pierced by a .22 caliber rifle slug.

Woodbeck, who walked about a quarter mile after he was shot, had been hunting squirrels with two companions about 15 miles north of Eau Claire. Authorities related that one of the party wounded a squirrel and two of the hunters were attempting to club it as it came down a tree. The third member of the group was standing a short distance away when his rifle discharged and Woodbeck was hit.

The Weather Bureau said the river level was 36.18 feet at noon. Official flood stage is 30 feet. Immediately after the peak, the raging stream began receding.

Water went into several homes in Laredo, but there was no accurate count or damage estimate.

Cypriot Minister
Pact With Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — Cypriot Foreign Minister Spyros Kyprianou said Saturday he hopes to sign a military aid agreement with the Soviet Union within the next few days.

Kyprianou made the statement on arriving from the UN Security Council debate on Cyprus. Two other Greek Cypriot officials have been here more than a week discussing arms aid.

Andreas Aratzos, minister of trade and industry, said a week ago after meeting Soviet Premier Khrushchev that the premier had agreed to give military and other assistance.

Kyprianou told newsmen: "I am quite convinced that the talks will be crowned with success."

Asked about details of aid, he said, "We will give details when the talks are concluded."

His sensitive reports on nature and the countryside have made the annual series one of the most popular to appear in the Wisconsin press.

This year, House's long walk will be reported exclusively for the Post-Crescent.

Hoover Says Race Issue Not Cause of 9 Northern Riots

A Handshake of Hope came in South Viet Nam when Maj. Edwin E. Brooks of Grand Rapids, Mich., right foreground, shook hands with a Montagnard rebel Saturday in the jungle hamlet of Buon Mo Prong. Brooks led three U.S. enlisted soldiers into the village to try and persuade the rebels, trained by the Americans to fight the Communist Viet Cong, to stop their revolt against the South Vietnamese central government. Rebels are seated in a U.S. military vehicle, while a U.S. special forces sergeant stands at right. ## Nation Waits for Official Findings on Assassination

Examined, Scores Questioned

Young Military Officers Want
Generals Ousted

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — Young military officers Saturday demanded a purge of six older generals, and a high government source said a coup is possible at any time.

Troops are up guard posts at strategic areas and set up barbed wire barricades and gun positions outside navy and air force installations.

Maj. Gen. Nguyen Khanh, premier for nine months, was out of town to deal with a tribal uprising in the central mountains.

The spate of military activity in Saigon came after nightfall.

BY LEWIS HAWKINS
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation awaited Saturday the imminent disclosure of official conclusions on the how and why of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

A seven-man commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, was charged by President Johnson last Nov. 29 with finding and disclosing "the truth . . . as far as it can be discovered" about the tragic events of last Nov. 22-24 in Dallas.

Scores Questioned
On Thursday, the commission delivered to the President the digest of its findings — a 4-inch-thick book. Later, the White House announced that the report will be made public Sunday at 5:30 p.m. EST.

The book is the fruit of the questioning of scores of persons, many on-the-scene studies in Dallas, the examination of scores of reports, photos and other exhibits prepared by the FBI and other police agencies.

It is expected to tell whether the commission is convinced, beyond doubt, that the rifle shots which killed Kennedy were fired by Lee Harvey Oswald, a 24-year-old, unstable ex-Marine and avowed Marxist.

And it is expected also to express the commission's conclusions on whether Oswald acted alone or was a part of some sort of conspiracy.

The report is to cover also the killing of Oswald by Jack Ruby, a Dallas night club operator, two days after the president was slain.

There's no question that Ruby committed this act — for which he now is under death sentence.

Man Who Refused to Give Negroes Service

ATLANTA (AP) — Lester Maddox, who closed his restaurant to avoid serving Negroes, was back in business at the same old stand Saturday — this time with a cafeteria operation.

Several hundred white persons went through the cafeteria lines, and it was obvious that most of them were old friends and customers.

What would happen if Negroes sought service in the cafeteria as they did in the former Pickrick restaurant?

"We will just have to wait and see," Maddox said. "I hope they will leave us alone, though, and let us operate as a free enterprise."

Maddox was enjoined permanently under provisions of the new Civil Rights Act from operating the Pickrick on a segregated basis.

President of Colombia Sees Decline of Reds

Says Cooperation,
Progress Alliance
Principal Reasons

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — "Communism has lost its appeal as an easy solution to economic difficulty," President Guillermo Leon Valencia said Saturday.

In an exclusive interview at 300-year-old San Carlos Palace, the president said the Alliance for Progress and increasing economic cooperation are the main hopes for peaceful development of Latin America.

"In Cuba we have watched with anxiety as (Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro) abandoned his promises of social reform to become the subjugator of his own people," Valencia said. "His following has largely disappeared, for in America we want bread without the execution wall."

Economic Problems
President Valencia acknowledged that his own country remains best by economic difficulties, including soaring cost of living, shortage of primary products and speculation.

He said his government is trying to improve the situation by offering credits to farmers and special advantages to certain types of industries.

"It is impossible to control the prices of primary products when these products are in short supply or even unavailable," he added. "What we are doing is to try and get our people to produce these products for themselves. That is the only hope for lowering the cost of living, and we are beginning to

Not Organized by Reds or Other Group, FBI Chief Reports to Chief Executive

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said that while racial tensions were a contributing factor in most, none of the nine occurrences was a "race riot" in the accepted meaning of the phrase. They were not riots of Negroes against whites or whites against Negroes. And they were not a direct outgrowth of conventional civil rights protest.

In a 19-page report, ordered by President Johnson, Hoover said

Hoover said "no evidence was found that the riots were organized on a national basis by any single person, group of persons, or organization."

He said the Communist Party in this country "does not appear to have officially instigated" July rioting in the Negro areas of New York City "though its members were observed taking part in some, and its former members are leaders" of groups seeking to exploit Negro unrest.

Among these groups the report mentioned were the Progressive Labor Movement and the Labor Vanguard.

Johnson responded to one of Hoover's recommendations by ordering the FBI to make riot control training available to all police departments in the country. The President also directed the Defense Department to increase National Guard riot control training throughout the country and to make that training available to local police forces.

The report covered the FBI's probes of rioting between July 18 and Sept. 7 in New York City and Rochester, N.Y.; Jersey City, Elizabeth and Paterson, N.J.

2 Injured in Zoo Rampage
By Bull Elk

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — Two men were injured, one critically, Saturday when a bull elk went on a rampage at the Nay Aug Park Zoo.

Jerome Leccese, 75, assistant zoo keeper, was buffeted by the animal's massive antlers for ten minutes before being rescued in the paddock.

George Lowery Jr., 29, director of exhibits at the zoo, was injured by the elk as he battled to drive the animal away from Leccese.

Thirty spectators outside the paddock fence screamed and pounded on the steel fence, to attract the elk's attention from Lowery.

Police and firemen who had arrived cut a hole through the fence and removed Leccese to an ambulance. Surgeons found his chest crushed and both lungs punctured by the animal's antlers. His condition was critical.

Lowery suffered cuts and bruises of both arms and was admitted to the hospital for observation.

For some time after arrival of police and firemen the rampaging elk walked around the paddock with the trousers and undershirt of Leccese dangling on its antlers.

Lost $15,000 Returned To Green Bay Woman

Maryland Waitress Finds Pocketbook
And Turns It Over to State Police

FROSTBURG, Md. (AP) — A pocketbook containing more than $15,000 was left in a restaurant Saturday. The owner returned within 30 minutes, in tears, to find the money safe and state police already on the scene.

Mrs. Mary Durst, a waitress, found the purse soon after Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Pomprowitz of Green Bay, Wis., left the establishment west of Frostburg.

"The more I looked, the more I found," said Mrs. Durst, who manages the Happy Hills Restaurant. "The bills were mostly 20s and 10s, and held together with gum bands."

Called Police
"I called state police, and just after they arrived, the woman came back. She was very much worked up, and crying."

State police in Cumberland said Mrs. Durst was "so excited, she could hardly talk," when she telephoned shortly before noon.

Seven hours after the experience, Mrs. Durst was still nervous.

"I'm still shaky, I'll have to admit," she said. "That's the most money I ever saw at one time, and the most I ever expect to have in my hands."

Gets $40 Reward
Not all of the money passed through Mrs. Durst's hands. She was given a $40 reward by Mrs. Pomprowitz.

Mrs. Durst said she understood the Wisconsin couple owned a business in the area.

Trooper C. R. Harbaugh of the Maryland State Police said Mrs. Pomprowitz told him she was a retired school teacher and the money represented her life's savings.

He said there was no detailed explanation of why the cash was

House

Charles House will depart Thursday on a 1964 version of his annual "into autumn," a march this year of about 125 miles from Oshkosh to Seymour.

table, the rambling reporter walks, he said, "for the fun of it."

No Schedule
He set no schedule for the time of his arrival in Seymour, an Outagamie city of some 2,000 persons, although the walking reporter estimates his hiking speed at a brisk five miles per hour. He moves, however, as casually as possible, he pointed out, "because if I go on a schedule, it spoils all the fun."

The walking reporter took his first such hike in 1950 to call attention to the beauties of Wisconsin's beautiful autumn season.

His series so graphically reported the subtle changes of nature at that time of the year and the adventures which come to a hiking man, it has been continued from year to year.

Hike Route
This season, his route will take him from Oshkosh through Butte

des Morts, Zittau, Fremont,

Weyauwega, Northport, New London, Sugar Bush, Bear Creek, Shotton, Black Creek, and into Seymour, the terminal community on his 125-mile trek.

The Post-Crescent writer seeks the small by-roads and country lanes wherever possible, hiking, he said, "until I walk into a story."

The articles he assembles as he wanders over the rural countryside are small ones which scarcely if ever would appear in a daily newspaper, but they are fresh and literary and informed. In past years he has written stories of a unique frog migration, about woolly bear caterpillars, about catching a turtle in a meandering brook and trading it "to a kid" for an apple.

He may choose to write about a small cheese factory, an abandoned farmhouse, a farmer, a salesman, a little boy, a grocer or whatever strikes his fancy. These are articles editors do not

State Republicans Take Dim Look at Goldwater Odds

Candidates Cut Themselves Loose From National Ticket

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON — The Republican presidential campaign in Wisconsin is sagging.

Republican politicians who earlier in the year believed they had a fair to good chance to roll up a majority of votes in this state for their national ticket are now more cautious in their predictions, public and private.

Local Republican candidates including some on the state GOP ticket, are tending to isolate themselves in their own vote-seeking drives, and associating their work and their goals with the national ticket only when it cannot be avoided gracefully.

It is not pessimism, accurately appraised. But the Republican professionals are beginning to realize that they may lose, in spite of their most strenuous efforts.

All of which is a change from the frame of mind of the typical Republican professional of maturity and experience earlier in the summer. One of the top leaders of the party put it this way in a private comment to a reporter:

"I thought in July that Lyndon Johnson would have to defeat Goldwater here. But now I'm inclined to think that it is up to the senator to beat Johnson."

Close Margin

These are the men who are as familiar with the election tables as others are with the baseball batting averages. They know that in four of the last five presidential elections this state has provided a majority of its votes for the Republican nominees, as they often say in their speeches. But they also know, and they refer to the fact less frequently in public, that the margins have been close, except in the Eisenhower years. The margin will almost surely be close again, in the most optimistic current interpretation among Republican realists.

Another commanding figure in the organization who felt throughout the pre-convention competition that Sen. Goldwater was his favorite candidate, and the most effective in Wisconsin terms, has

Women's Group Of Hospital to Name Officers

KAUKAUNA—Election and installation of officers will be held at a quarterly meeting of the Community Hospital Auxiliary at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the hospital meeting room.

The meeting was postponed from Monday due to the Packer-Lion football game. Respective chairmen will report on Baby Day, the Supperette and the area auxiliary meeting at Algoma.

Dues for the year will be accepted by Mrs. Eugene Haen, membership chairman, and refreshments will be served by the hospitality committee under the direction of Miss Marie Wodjenski.

also admitted that he has revised his views.

"It's a toss-up", he responded with unusual brevity to an inquiry from a friend last week.

There are some visible signs of disaffection among Republicans.

One of them is the apparent reluctance of editors and publishers of Wisconsin newspapers who in the past tended to endorse Republican nominees to do so this year. It is already evident that Sen. Goldwater will have fewer declarations of preference for him among editors than any Republican has had in many years, a fact to which Democratic publicists are referring with scarcely concealed glee.

Challenges

Democrats also have kept up a chorus of challenges of local Republican candidates to divorce themselves from the Goldwater banner, with evidently some embarrassing results. Wilbur Renk, the Republican nominee for U.S. Senator, insists upon describing himself as a "moderate" and has been the particular target of Democratic jabs as a consequence. At some of his campaign meetings recently, he has spent more time describing his differences with Goldwater positions than in detailing his views and purposes as a candidate for a seat in the senate. The incidents also have had abundant publicity.

Other Republican office aspirants apparently feel they have better prospects for attracting the votes of Wisconsin residents than has the party's presidential nominee, and are accordingly going their own way with as little reference to national affairs or the national platform or the issues enunciated by the presidential candidate as possible.

To the professional Democratic campaign managers and their candidates the profitable opportunity to campaign against the Republican presidential candidate seems so obvious that some of them are tempted to use it to the exclusion of local issue discussion.

Coat Tail

Gov. John W. Reynolds, titular leader of the Democratic party and nominee for a second term who confessed a month ago that he was "in trouble", obviously feels that his own best tactic is to run under the banner of President Johnson, with a daily stream of ridicule and attack of the Republican standard-bearer. Lesser candidates have followed suit.

The first of two Goldwater rallies scheduled in Wisconsin, held on Capitol square this week, provided a mixed reaction among Republicans. The crowd turn-out of more than 10,000 was exceptionally high. But the crowd included many bitter opponents of the senator and his beliefs and positions. Older residents could not remember in this politically conscious capital city another instance of such violently expressed opposition to a major political leader.

"I've Been Misquoted", jibed one huge placard carried in a student picket parade. "Bring the Bomb", announced another that greeted the Republican standard-bearer whose alleged unsoundness on foreign affairs and belligerence in military policy have made him the most controversial nominee of modern times.

Detroit Decides To Hold Line on New Car Prices

Materials Are Marked Up but Auto Makers Absorb Increase

BY ROGER LANE
NEW YORK (AP) — A Detroit decision to stay basically flat on new car prices with 1964 prices on 1965 models was hailed this week as an important restraint on inflationary forces in the economy.

The new models are just going on sale. Price markups on copper, auto and truck tires and some other materials worked in the opposite direction, although much less strongly.

While events relating to inflation dominated the business scene, tense wage contract negotiations in the auto industry kept alive the possibility of a strike despite settlements by Chrysler and Ford.

As a Friday strike deadline neared, Walter P. Reuther's General Motors urged "guidelines" on inflation wage increases as "unworkable and inequitable" without effective restraint on prices.

Price Stability
A GM announcement proclaiming a seventh straight year of price stability for its cars, even as wage talks continued unresolved, came at a time when prices of industrial raw materials were bobbing steadily higher. It was regarded as very significant.

GM's pricing decisions usually are pattern-setting in an industry that consumes 60 percent of the nation's rubber output, 23 percent of steel, 50 percent of lead, 38 percent of zinc and large quantities of aluminum and copper.

Thus, if all automakers held the line, pressure would be exerted on these other industries, admittedly less profitable, to tighten their belts a notch rather than raise prices.

Chrysler's settlement, for example, has been said to carry a cost tag of as much as $90 million over three years — although steadily rising volume, with reduced unit expenses, might make the effective impact considerably less.

Muffled talk of higher prices for steel has been heard. Only the day before GM's price decision, a 2-cent-a-pound increase in the price of copper spread through that industry, and Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. hiked prices on passenger car tires up to 3.5 percent, and on truck tires as much as 5 percent.

Jump in Copper
The jump in copper, second of the year, put the price at 34 cents a pound and left The Associated Press index of nonferrous metals prices at a level 15 percent higher than a year ago.

A government index of industrial raw materials prices was up 14 percent from a year earlier. Actually, there has been some upward creep in auto prices — and undoubtedly will be on 1965 models — through addition of previously optional equipment as standard (obligatory for the buyer).

In another development bearing on the inflation problem, a United Steelworkers Union convention spelled out a wage contract bargaining policy sighted on major economic gains. The union resolved, among other things, to seek salaries for workers displaced by automation.

David J. McDonald, USW president, scoffed at Kennedy-Johnson administration "guidelines" on inflation wage increases as "unworkable and inequitable" without effective restraint on prices.

Sales Zooming
Meantime, pivotal auto sales raced ahead, steel industry production after seven consecutive weekly gains presumably hit a new high for the year and two separate threats of a nationwide railroad strike evaporated — temporarily, at least.

In the middle third of September, car sales ran 15 percent ahead of a year earlier. A new bulge in orders for steel pointed to the busiest autumn in many years as the industry roared toward an all-time production record of 120 million tons or more.

The stock market danced upward, stock setting all-time highs in the popular averages. Airline traffic held to its booming pace, with passenger volume for the first eight months of 1964 up 15 percent over the same period of the 1963 like period, and freight shipping experts predicted heavy fourth quarter rail loadings mainly on the strength of iron, steel and auto prospects.

New reports put dividends and personal income at peak levels. However, new factory orders for durable goods tumbled 9 percent in August, the government reported.

On the merger front, the Chicago and North Western Railway and the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad proposed to unite into a 21,000-mile system generating $450 million annual revenues.

The combine, if consummated, might eventually be expanded into a 30,000-mile network without parallel by addition of other partners.

They say our cars are too expensive...

TOO EXPENSIVE TO BUY? A new Mercedes-Benz sedan costs as little as $3,844*, yet has features that are extra on other cars: arm rests on all doors, ashtrays front and rear, heater, defroster, rear bumper guards, outside mirror, bucket seats, windshield washer, safety-padding (visors, dash and interior).

TOO EXPENSIVE TO OPERATE? A stock Mercedes-Benz Diesel went across the U.S. for only $34.64. Even the luxurious Mercedes-Benz 220 S has averaged 21.5 miles per gallon. But a Mercedes-Benz offers you much more than just economy. A built-in "Zone of Safety" protects you and your family. An exclusive racing-proved swing axle gives extraordinary roadability. There's even a shock absorber on the steering mechanism for safe, dependable control at any speed. There are many other reasons a Mercedes-Benz is better, safer, longer-lasting, more luxurious. But they all make this great car pay handsome dividends in prestige, satisfaction and dependability. And the years will prove it to be the least expensive car you'll ever own.

Manufacturers Taking Giant Strides in Improving Performance of Color TV Sets

Color television has come a long way in the last two years—a long way toward meeting the budget of the average family and a long way towards diminishing the need for an engineering degree to operate a set. Just 10 years ago, in 1954, $400 was not an exceptionally high price to pay for black-and-white television. Today it will buy a good color set.

As little as five years ago, color TV required almost a training program before purchase or a month of practice to learn to adjust a set properly.

Easy to Tune

Electronic improvements since have solved most of these problems. Most of the difficult adjustments that once had to be made by turning one or any number of knobs that had to be selected from a maze of controls now are performed by electronics circuits within the set.

And these "miracle" circuits work — giving much better color fidelity than the average person could get with the old hand adjustments. Naturally, some buyers are skeptical, but people also were skeptical when manufacturers introduced AFC, the circuit built into all radios today that keeps nearby stations from blaring at maximum volume when tuning away from a distant station.

A hidden advantage to new color sets is their reliability. Many buyers don't consider maintenance of color TV when buying. Color sets used to need repairs much more frequently than a black-and-white receiver, but technical improvements have put color sets in almost the same category as black-and-white.

Reception Better

Another problem with color TV that has been corrected to some extent is poor reception capability. Sensitivity of color receivers has been improved considerably. If an area gives snow-free reception, it's also a safe bet color reception will be good.

However, if an antenna system produces ghosts with a black-and-white set, the antenna system will have to be changed for good color reception. Color ghosts are much less tolerable than the black-and-white version.

Availability of color programming no longer is a problem for Fox Cities viewers. WFRV, channel 5, will have 2,200 hours of color this year. WLUX, channel 11, will offer 270 hours. WBAY, channel 2, will have color specials. For those who seek "local" color, special antennas will bring in good reception from WTMJ, channel 4, and WITI, channel 6, both in Milwaukee, who have studio and network color.

Emphasis on Fine Furniture in color television consoles includes authentic period styling and the use of fine and exotic woods including Honduras mahogany and Carpathian elm. Styles include early American, French provincial, Italian provincial, traditional and Danish modern.

Peter Gunn's Policeman Friend Has Many Irons (Voices) in the Fire

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — There's a lot more to television than meets the eye. In the case of the weary, cynical and soft-hearted actor Herschel Bernardi, it adds up to an annual income of around $100,000. Bernardi, who has been a guest star in television series ranging from "Bonanza" to

"Dr. Kildare," is particularly remembered for his portrait of the weary, cynical and soft-hearted Lieut. Jacoby of 114 "Peter Gunn" adventures.

His semi-secret career, a profitable one, started about eight years ago when he learned there was a demand for "char-

"I made a tape recording of some material I'd developed for a comedy routine that used 22 different voices," he recalled. "Then I jumped on my motor scooter and went from agency to agency selling myself." The "gag voices," as Bernardi calls them, started a whole new sideline. His face never is used. He has produced the voices of a rejected tuna, a

Decorators Add Furniture Lines To TV Consoles

Many Styles Lend Wide Choice in Matching Motifs

One of the main advantages of package hi-fi and stereo systems, sold in most stores, over specialized component equipment is the wide range of fine furniture stylings available in cabinetry.

Package system manufacturers promise a wider range of decorative styling in their hi-fi and stereo sets as well as in black and white and color television models this year.

Mahogany, maple, cherry and walnut are the main woods being used this year, traditional, early American, French provincial, Mediterranean and Danish modern the leading styles. To add to the appearance of their products, many manufacturers this year are commissioning textile mills to produce special grille cloths (the material covering speakers) that blend in with the wood and styling.

Traditional furniture styling often is in dark mahogany, adapted in the style of early English furniture. Earmarks of good traditional styling are restrained use of carving and sculpturing, recessed paneling, ornate brass hardware and wood trim.

'Pioneer' Look

A 'pioneer' look characterizes early American styling. Earmarks of a good model are turned or bracket foot legs, galleries and shaped trim strips, batwing handles and occasional wooden knobs. Maple is the ba-service station, a candy bar, a sick automobile and a squirrel, among others.

"This turned into my freedom crusade," said Bernardi. "It made me free to do the things I really wanted to do as an actor."

Type-Casting

But after a time, fashions in commercials started to change — gag voices, even 22 of them, were no longer in such great demand. Bernardi's voice was caught in that deadly theatrical trap: type-casting.

"I invested about $300 in another tape. Still a comedy sketch, and did a lot of other voices with a 'soft sex sell,' the new big thing," he said. That worked, too: "It's a joy to go to the mailbox and see it stuffed with those lovely residual checks."

Meanwhile he has been working steadily in featured movie roles, many television assignments and has even found time for summer stock.

French provincial is quite similar to early American in styling, but generally has a more delicate appearance. Frequently finished in white with gold trim, cherry and other fruitwood models also are available. Simple, classic, rectangular lines mark Mediterranean cabinetry. Usually in light shades of mahogany and walnut, early American styling follows the patterns of contemporary Scandinavian design. Its main earmark is simplicity of design and a sculptured look, particularly in the leg forms. Danish modern and walnut are almost synonymous.

Rehearsals Add to Humor Writer Puts Into Scripts

BY CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Not all the humor that turns up in television's situation comedies is injected by the writers. Sometimes it is added by collaboration during rehearsals.

The other day on the "Andy Griffith Show" set, the sheriff of Mayberry and his new love, played by Anita Corsaut, were walking through a rehearsal, scripts in hand. The scene required Andy to take lingering leave of the girl in front of his office, to be joined inside by his deputy, played by Don Knotts.

The script had Andy leaning forward to kiss the girl, then turning away to enter the building.

"That's a little too much," frowned Griffith. "Wouldn't it be better if we sort of made love with our eyes a little bit? I just don't think we'd make physical love in public."

Director Al Rafkin agreed.

Griffith thought for a minute, then added: "Wouldn't it be funnier if Don broke it up by walking between us? Let's try that."

"They rehearsed the short scene again. Knotts rushed across the set, cut between the pair and disappeared into the building."

"Boy, that works better," said Griffith with a smile. "That felt wonderful. It's in character, because that's the sort of thing he would do, rush through like that to attract attention."

Each television series has worked out its own special techniques, and CBS' "Andy Griffith Show" during the past four seasons has learned what is best for its players.

Check List of Elements for Testing Could Save Later Trouble With Set

BY MARK OLIVA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Purchasing a hi-fi stereo system in many ways is like buying an auto or any other piece of expensive merchandise. Some of the prettiest models finish last in the road tests and vice versa.

Many of the do-it-yourselfers look in scorn upon pre-built systems and defend their models with what's become almost a motto — "I wanted a hi-fi system, not a piece of furniture."

In some ways their arguments are just as justified as they are unjustified in other ways. There are stereo systems on the market that come in beautiful cabinets, but feature the same electronics as a $15.95 kitchen table radio, speakers that sell for less than $10 and a record changer that may need repairs a week after the warranty expires.

Beware!

If a dealer says his system has a diamond needle, four-speed record changer, AM, stereo FM and four speakers, but has no further specifications than a $400 price tag — BEWARE!

The average diamond needle can be purchased today for $6. Four-speed changers for less than $20 are available. AM-Stereo FM tuners with amplifiers can be purchased for as little as $25. Many of the speakers in poor but expensive systems would retail for as little as $8 for all four. This totals less than $60. With a second look at this mystery system, is the cabinet worth $340?

Any honest and reliable dealer will be more than willing to give the buyer a personal sound test as well as the manufacturer's specifications for his product.

First Test

The first test is in the listening. Have the dealer put on a good stereo record with a lot of directionality, strong bass and clear treble. Adjust the volume. Does the system play as loud as you wish, still maintaining its quality of sound?

Adjust the bass and treble controls (On any console model, these controls definitely should be separate.) Does the bass come out with a clean boom or a flat thud at the volume you like? Does the system give you as loud or weak a balance of bass as you like? Are the treble sounds, especially violins, clean and clear or do they sound harsh and scratchy. Does a singer's voice have a living crispness to it or a smooth, glossed-over sound?

Perry Mason Fans Counter Rumors Of Burr's Retirement With Mail

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Perry Mason's" fans turned around and accidentally nipped star Raymond Burr recently. Mr. Burr was in no position to complain.

For the past three or four years, the actor has suggested about this time that it will be his final season. He is interested in other pursuits, he says, including his art galleries, motion pictures and a stage career. There follows a period of considerable excitement at CBS but ultimately comes the news that "Perry Mason" will continue for another season or so.

This year, however, Burr started grumbling in print ahead of his usual schedule. This led television innocents to believe that the summer re-runs from 1961 and 1962 shows were to be Perry's swan-song. They wrote in, declaring their undying affection.

Prediction

For the first time in the seven-year history of the program, however, Burr's prediction of the end to the successful television career of Erle Stanley Gardner's most popular character may be accurate.

Gail Patrick Jackson, producer of the series and Gardner's partner in Paisano Productions, says: "I feel that Ray means it this year."

"This year" means, however, that there will be the usual quota of that unstable world of television shows to run from September to April or May.

Contract Expires

Burr's contract expires at the end of the 1964-65 season and CBS has made no move as yet to renew the series or star. This situation could change suddenly, should the venerable program — in its new, earlier time slot on Thursdays — nab a high audience rating.

Mrs. Jackson and her Paisano partners are preparing other Gardner literary properties for conversion to television. Topping the list is one they will not even discuss, lest the idea be swiped. Another is a series on Donald Lamm-Bertha Cool, private eye characters in many a Gardner book. Mrs. Jackson has her eye on Joan Blondell for Bertha.

Also under consideration are the prolific author's Doug Selby stories about a district attorney.

No Changes

"But as far as 'Perry Mason' is concerned, we're old-fashioned and I think our fans are," said Mrs. Jackson. "They like the show the way it is and they don't like change. We know. We tried adding new characters here and there — and went back to our original form."

So — for the time being at least — "Perry Mason" will still be winning his weekly case in the courtroom. It sure gives a warm comfortable feeling to know that something is stable in

Clash Expected on Officers' Training

Could Swing South Negro Vote Expected to Give Johnson Big Boost

ATLANTA (AP) — Simple arithmetic gives President Johnson a strong hand in most of the South on the basis of a Negro vote which is nearly twice the size it was four years ago.

Registration of both white and Negro voters has been heavy in the 11 southern states, and particularly during the past two years.

Negro voters now number more than 2 million, compared to 1.1 million four years ago. White voters total about 13.6 million in the 11 states from Virginia to Texas.

May Be Big Factor

With the exception of Mississippi and Alabama, the Negro vote might strongly influence election results in the South. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., a Negro leader, has said few if any Negroes will vote Republican this year.

If the Negro vote, now comprising about 13 per cent of the electorate, goes solidly Democratic as expected, Johnson will need to pull only 40 to 45 per cent of the white vote to carry such pivotal states as Georgia, Florida, North Carolina and South Carolina.

Republican strategy aims at carrying the South's 27 per cent of the electoral college votes as the nucleus of victory against the Democrats. Thus, the Negro vote looms as a possible obstacle to this.

Not Listed by Race

The problem of analyzing voter registration is hampered by the lack of official bookkeeping: most of the states no longer list voters by race, and estimates often vary by several percentage points.

Georgia, for example, has no official central compilation of voters. The secretary of the state estimated registration at 1.5 million; it might be well above that because of the heavy registration this year alone, especially by Negroes.

Negro leaders estimate the Negro vote in Georgia from 250,000 to 275,000, or 16 to 18 per cent — the highest of any southern state. It is a huge jump over the estimated 9 per cent of 1960 when the Democrats carried Georgia by a conclusive margin.

Reserve Group Terms GAO's Report False

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reserve Officers Association disputed Saturday a government report that the Navy's special "surface program" is filled with raw recruits and high school students some of whom lack the required mental qualifications.

The General Accounting Office, watchdog agency for Congress, reported Friday that in the event of war the program could not do its job of immediately providing trained forces.

Rear Adm. Edgar H. Reeder of Helena, Mont., national ROA president, issued a statement declaring: "We deplore the sensation-seeking and inaccurate report made by the General Accounting Office, based on a superficial study by personnel in that agency."

Reeder described as "obviously false" a statement that the forces "are principally raw recruits in high school." He said that of 132,000 in the selective Reserve less than one-fourth are recruits.

Issue Comes Up Monday In Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A head-on clash between Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara and Congress over plans for training future military officers is scheduled Monday on the Senate floor.

All advance signs indicate that the Senate will join the House in overriding McNamara's proposals and thus give the defense secretary an unusual congressional rebuff. McNamara has had frequent differences of opinion with individual members but usually has won approval for his basic aims.

Junior Reserve

Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate armed services committee, said he expects approval for:

1. A plan to expand the Junior Reserve Officers Training Course now operating in 254 high and preparatory schools to 1,200 over the next five years.
2. McNamara opposes expansion of the high school units, saying there "is no present military requirement" to step up the program which now costs about $5 million annually. Russell estimates the expanded operations would cost about $21 million a year.
3. Continuation of the present four-year senior ROTC system in many colleges and universities with an increase in the $27 a-month pay for participants to $40 or even $50 in the last two years.
4. Year Scholarship
5. A system of four-year paid scholarships for up to 5,500 future officers annually for both army and air force. A similar program is in effect now for training reserve naval officers.

In contrast to these two proposals, McNamara has asked a drastic revision in the over-all college officer-training program with a cutback to two years under a tuition and scholarship plan.

The college ROTC programs now provide most of the 25,000 new officers needed each year by the armed services. The service academies turn out about 2,000.

The Senate test will come under an amendment by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., which would revise the House and Senate proposals in line with McNamara's recommendations on the junior ROTC units.

But Russell's committee unanimously approved the essentials of the broad new mandatory program passed by the House.

Blaze Being Controlled at Santa Barbara

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Fire fighters' hopes lifted slightly Saturday as a lowering fog retarded the voracious 5-day-old Santa Barbara fire.

The U.S. Forest Service said the 88,000-acre blaze was 50 per cent contained early Saturday. No estimate was made on when it would be fully contained.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown and Edward A. McDermott, director of the President's Office of Emergency Planning, inspected the disaster area by helicopter to see how much of the devastated area might be eligible for federal aid.

Key to the hopes of 2,000 men still struggling on a 20-mile-wide fire line was the weather — which took a sharp, favorable turn Friday night.

Temperatures Drop

Since the fire began last Tuesday, temperatures in the upper 80s and 90s and hot, dry winds from inland deserts — California's legendary "devil winds" — kept the fire racing back and forth. Three times the winds drove the fire to the perimeter of Santa Barbara.

But Friday night a deep fog bank rolled in off the Pacific and into the steep canyons of the charred Santa Ynez Mountains behind the city. Light drizzles hit the lower slopes, not extinguishing the flames but cooling the area enough to let fire fighters work closer to the blaze.

Glancing Over Some of the hundreds of letters of cheer he has received, 7-year-old James (Bucky) Welch is reported making a rapid recovery from an accident that claimed both of his arms. A Louisville, Ky., hospital reports he is "adapting wonderfully" to his plight. The boy reached beneath the wheels of a train to get a puppy when the train lurched forward. ## Manitowoc Policeman Investigates Crash In His Front Yard

MANITOWOC (AP) — Patrolman Earl Raduenz got a surprise early Saturday when he was sent to investigate a report that a motorist had driven his car across several lawns and into a tree.

When Raduenz arrived on the scene he found that the car had indeed left its tire tracks etched across two lawns in the residential neighborhood. One of the lawns was in front of Raduenz' home.

Goldwater Calls For Tax Reduction Says Added Spending Would Be Justified if Need Arises

DETROIT (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater called again Saturday night for a tax cut, but also endorsed more spending — "if the need arises" — and to "maintain our defensive strength and preparedness."

"But unfortunately in the present state of the world, military expenses are and must remain high," the Republican said.

Presidential nominee said in a prepared speech, adding: "Of course we must have economy in defense but we cannot afford the false economy of weakened defenses."

Speaks at Rally

Goldwater spoke at a night rally after a day of campaigning in Michigan. He repeatedly urged party unity and the election of Gov. George Romney.

Romney, who opposed Goldwater's nomination, has remained cool to the Arizona senator.

The Michigan governor was scheduled to introduce Goldwater at Saturday night's rally. In his speech, Goldwater re-edit, do not cut and do not change.

"It isn't possible," House said, "to walk ten feet without seeing something of interest if we only look. Every pebble has a history and every wayside weed has a story to tell if we can only know it."

The newsman believes the unusual success of the autumn series and the high ratio of readership they command is because everybody would like to do the same thing.

"I think most people would like to go on such a long hike, but they don't have the time or the incentive to put on a pack and move out," he said. "It seems to me that, in effect, they are walking along with me as I walk and as they read."

"I also think almost any healthful person could walk 125 miles if they did it in a spirit of real pleasure with virtually every step," he said.

Light Pack

The newsman carries a light pack with rain gear, woolen socks, spare pair of shoes, toilet articles, "a book to read in the shade," food for emergency rations.

Seldom hungry on his hikes, he peated his call for deep cuts in non-defense spending which he said rose more than twice as much as defense spending in the past four years.

"If spending is held in check — and believe me a Republican administration will hold it in check — we can cut taxes and still balance revenue against spending," he said. "We can not only keep the national debt from rising — we can reduce it."

The Arizona senator also called again for:

- An end to the draft, which he said was costly and unfair.
- An end to federal grants to state and local governments for specific purposes. Instead, he proposed returning to the states a portion of the income taxes collected within the state.

he is not above "swiping an apple or a cucumber or a head of cabbage" for his dinner, he said. Farmers and townsfolk never let him go hungry for he is recognized and one of the best known reporters in Wisconsin.

He avers that he looks forward to the long hikes each year.

"I don't think I could convince anybody how friendly people have been," he said. "On these hikes I have met the most wonderful friends I have. And if I didn't hike and if I didn't enjoy myself while I was doing it, I'm pretty sure people simply wouldn't be friendly to me. But I do and they are."

House will depart from Oshkosh early Wednesday morning. Refusing to set a schedule for his hike, he said he expects to arrive in Seymour "sometime in 1964, with luck."

Shotguns Bring Biplane Quarry

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Two Oxnard men can claim the season's largest prize taken with shotguns: a Stearman biplane.

Leon Coronas, a crop-dusting pilot, started the plane's motor Wednesday in the usual manner — spinning the prop from outside. Before he could get back in the cockpit, one brake failed and the craft started taxiing around Ventura County Airport in wild circles.

E. L. Vanegas, manager of the crop-dusting service which owns the plane, ran out with two shotguns, gave Coronas one, and they started banging away at the plane.

After 10 minutes one or the other nipped a fuel line and the engine sputtered to a halt, out of gasoline.

Country Church Brings Simplicity Of Old-Time Religion to Hollywood

BY BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — For 30 years the Country Church of Hollywood has dispensed its old-time religion, and it's still going strong.

You'll find it not many steps from Hollywood and Vine, yet when you enter its grounds, shaded by tall jacaranda, camphor and pine trees, the din of the city seems far away. And as you enter the white-steeped church, you are transported to another, simpler era.

At services on Sunday morning and evening and at prayer meetings Wednesday night, the rafters ring with the sounds of gospel singing and the word of the Lord as spoken by the Rev. Rudy Atwood. Thus, the vision of the "Goose Creek parson" is carried on many years after his death.

Founder's Daughter

Martha Hogg daughter of the founder and member of the board of trustees, talks proudly of the building, modeled after a small church in Ashland City, Tenn., that her father had visited as a circuit rider.

He was William Bennett Hogg, a high school principal in Mississippi until he received the call to enter the service of God. He became a Methodist minister, served as chaplain in World War I and was on General Pershing's staff in Germany during the occupation.

The Rev. Mr. Hogg returned to the ministry, but in 1928 he suffered a nervous breakdown.

"Doctors said it was the strain of having to bury 3,000 young men during the war," his daughter explained.

Evangelism

After his recovery, he prayed to determine whether he should return to preaching. The answer seemed to be yes, and he turned to evangelism. He appeared at large tabernacles in Chicago and Los Angeles.

It was here that he found himself without a job, and he suggested to radio station KFAC a program about a country parson.

The minister and his wife became known as Josiah and Sarah Hopkins, and their program was a local favorite. Through it he saw the fulfillment of a dream.

"Hollywood is the most preposterous place to build a country church," he said. "That's why I want to build it here. I want a church with none of the high pressure of today's religion. A little church we don't have to fill, one which people don't feel they have to come to or contribute to."

And so the country church rose on Argyle Street. "It was a miracle church," said Miss Hogg. "Everyone contributed to building it; the architect was the only person paid."

But the church didn't remain as simple as her father had hoped. Prayer meetings were held five times a week next door in a tent seating 3,000. He became a national celebrity with his sponsored radio show, "Goose Creek Parson." The Rev. Mr. Hogg died in 1937, three years after the country church was built. His wife carried on the local simple refuge for the soul in today's complicated world.

The New TV Season has returned Shirley Booth to her popular serial, "Hazel," holding forth on Channels 4 and 5 on Thursday nights.

Official Party Platform Units Meet Tuesday

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The official political party platforms of Wisconsin Republicans and Democrats will be composed here Tuesday when the nominees for state office and legislative seats hold their statutory platform conventions.

Hold-over state senators will also participate in the deliberations, under the law.

Confusing

Party leaders expect few new issues to be developed at the meetings, which are likely to incorporate in somewhat condensed form into the statutory platforms the unofficial declarations of their voluntary party conventions earlier in the year.

The platform proceedings of the parties are sometimes confusing to the public because of the duplication of the documents.

The legal requirements date from earlier times in state politics, before the evolution of the voluntary organizations which during recent decades have virtually superseded the statutory framework of the parties. One of the incidental functions of the conventions of the nominees Tuesday will be the selection of members of the statutory state central committees, which are virtually inoperative because of the preference of both parties for working through the less restrictive voluntary machinery.

By tradition, the convention of the nominees defer to their titular ticket leaders, the nominees for the governorship, in the selection of platform issues and in the emphasis given them. That custom is expected to be followed Tuesday, when Warren P. Knowles for the Republicans and Gov. John W. Reynolds for the Democrats, are likely to have tentative drafts prepared for the delegates.

Residents at Peabody Manor, Appleton, enjoy one of the television sets which have been given to the retirement home as a gift or purchased through a combination of several donations. Many pieces of equipment have been supplied to the manor through donations. (Post-Crescent Photos)

Retirement Home

Peabody Manor Received Many Donations, but Need Not Ended

Peabody Manor, during its 2½-year existence as an Appleton retirement home, has received much needed equipment, but the need has not stopped.

Its board of directors has renewed continuing appeal for donations of money or items to help provide the home's 48 residents with equipment which will allow them to continue to lead normal lives.

As a non-profit organization, the board finds its income is little more than its outgo at the end of every fiscal year.

Because of this it solicits and accepts gifts of almost any kind in attempting to fulfill its goal of making Peabody Manor, as a former board president put it, a place where elderly people can live a perfectly normal life and have normal activities.

Dollar Value Unknown
No total dollar value on the gifts has been placed, but it undoubtedly runs into the thousands—perhaps tens of thousands—when a partial list of the equipment given and purchased through donations is considered.

Physical therapy equipment, a hand massage unit, refrigerator, a solarium, two television sets, numerous pictures, an indoor garden, a motion picture projector and screen, fireplace equipment and book cases.

Besides these items can be included an undetermined amount donated to the manor's building and general funds.

In a current campaign—a continuation of a campaign started even before the doors of the manor were opened for the first time in December, 1961—the board is seeking these items:

A hairdryer, medicine cabinets, a linen cart, a drinking fountain, a kiln, potter's wheel, hand loom, television set, aquarium, a dart board, books and records—particularly those "old favorites" which the residents remember from 30 and 40 years ago.

Donating Is Easy

It's very easy to make a donation to the home, Peabody Manor board president Mrs. Joseph Foley says. Donors "can just hand it to us," she says.

There are no formal restrictions, she adds, for prospective donors in the past always have contacted the home to see what was needed or could be used.

Gifts may be made anonymously, in memory of someone or in the donor's name. Each gift and the donor is listed in a book—a gift in itself, since the work and cost of its preparation was donated—kept in the main entrance of the manor.

Information about making donations can be had by calling the manor, Mrs. Foley or the board's memorials committee. Members of that committee are Mrs. Harold Ornstein and Mrs. George Cameron, both of Appleton.

A Resident of Peabody Manor looks over a book listing gifts and memorials the retirement home has received. In the background are three of these gifts: the fireplace, the fireplace equipment and the picture.

THESE NEWLY DESIGNED TRANSISTOR and clock radios, the most extensive group offered by any company, seem almost light enough to float in air, according to Mr. Floyd Erickson, manager of the Appleton Montgomery Ward store. He said transistor clock radios now on display in the store have new, attractive designs not possible in tube-type sets, a greater sensitivity to receive more stations, greater output for sound clarity and low heat for longer life. "Last year's 'big box' look in table radios is becoming as obsolete as the crystal set became when radio tubes were introduced," he said.

Stereo Buffs Help Sustain Business In Fox Valley

Do-It-Yourself Set Makers Want Selection of Components, Kits

One of the new businesses springing up here and there in the Fox Valley area is a direct product of growing interest in hi-fi stereo — the component hi-fi shop.

While most people prefer to buy ready-built package stereo sets sold in most appliance stores, a growing minority, the "hi-fi stereo bugs," prefers to assemble its own system with each separate component selected on its own merits.

A better system for the money usually is the result of component building but to be successful, the component fan needs to have a fairly good knowledge of how his system operates and what the capabilities of individual parts should be.

Components

The average component system consists of a broadcast turntable, or a record changer, stereo power amplifier with built-in or separate preamplifiers, two speaker systems and as extras a stereo tape deck, AM tuner or stereo FM tuner.

Total cost of a good component system, dependent on just how high a quality the builder desires and whether he wants kits or ready-built parts can range in price from less than $100 to well over $10,000.

The component fan interested in a truly high fidelity system often will shun record changers for FM-broadcast quality manual turntables, ranging in price from $60 to $300. Those who prefer changers generally will spend $40 to $100, with some of the higher-priced models nearing the quality of lower-priced turntables.

Wide Range

In the Fox Valley, the component buyer has a wide range when it comes to choosing the heart of his system — the power amplifier. He may prefer what is known as an integrated stereo amplifier, a real combination package, including two power amplifiers and two preamplifiers — one of each for each channel and all on one chassis.

With a little higher quality system, he may use a stereo preamplifier — two in one — with a separate stereo power amplifier hidden from sight. With no expense barred and as little lack of fidelity as possible, the component buyer may purchase a stereo preamplifier, and tucked away in a closet somewhere, use two separate monophonic power amplifiers, one for each stereo channel.

Integrated stereo amplifiers range in price from $30 to nearly $600. Stereo preamplifiers are available for $19 to $350. Stereo power amplifiers can be purchased for $50 to $600. Separate monophonic amplifiers may run from $30 to $400 each. Transistorized and tube models of all are available.

Receivers

For receiving broadcasts through his system, the component fan has several alternatives: AM tuner, $19 to $180; stereo FM tuner, $40 to $375; and combination AM-stereo FM tuner, $50 to $450.

There also are several combinations of amplifiers, preamplifiers and tuners called stereo receivers and they can cost from $70 to $400 without AM and from $80 to $800 with AM. Some companies also build stereo preamplifier-stereo FM combinations ranging from $125 to $400.

Next to the amplifiers, the most important link in a hi-fi stereo set is the speaker systems. Dependent on quality and volume capabilities, they range in price from $10 to $600 per speaker system.

FM Antenna

Another accessory that's often added to stereo sets and most frequently found with component systems is the outdoor FM

The "Girl's Best Friends" attracting Nita Von Behren aren't for her finger. They are Man-Made diamonds for GE phonograph styli. antenna. These can range from the simplest and weakest model, a folded dipole available for as little as $2, to the most expensive and efficient, the high-power, highly-directional yagi, selling for up to $60.

With an expensive antenna system and a good receiver, amazing FM reception is possible. A stereo enthusiast with four high-priced yagis on his rooftop conceivably could receive Chicago stereocasts consistently and with the same quality as he would pick up a local station. However, such an antenna system could cost well over $200 to install.

(Television yagis also are available and capable of producing the same result for distant TV reception.)

New Effort in Council for Stronger Declaration on Jews

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The vice president of the Vatican Christian Unity Secretariat said new efforts will be made to strengthen the Roman Catholic Ecumenical Council declaration on Jews.

Archbishop John Carmel Heenan of Westminster, England, said "all the members of the secretariat are determined to produce a document that will be satisfactory to our Jewish brothers."

He stressed that the revised document coming up for debate by the 2,500 council fathers in St. Peter's Basilica Monday is not the final text. This new version omits a statement, contained in the original text introduced in the council a year ago, that Jews could not be considered "deicides" and that all mankind shared in the responsibility for the crucifixion of Christ.

One of the Fastest Growing Success Stories Being Unfolded by Acceptance of FM Radio

The least-known and perhaps finest of broadcasting's three media—FM radio—is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year.

In its first 25 years, FM has survived one near-fatal blow and grown to the point where it is rivaling its sister service—the much older standard broadcast AM—for the adult audience in metropolitan areas.

FM's voice in only the last five years has begun spreading into the nation's urban and rural areas and winning new popularity there too.

For broadcasting purposes and the average adult listener, FM is the "color TV of radio." It has its AM counterpart beat on almost every score.

Holds Audience

Stations going into FM not only consider it a new concept in broadcasting, but it also has proved an excellent new ground in programming where radio once again has reached and held a sophisticated adult audience.

In addition, FM, unlike AM, can broadcast stereo over a single station and has full high fidelity, delivering a sound to the receiver that matches music direct from records, unachievable in AM. FM, also unlike AM, is completely static-free and interference free on anything but the weakest of signals.

When all FM's advantages are combined, the result usually is a station broadcasting fine music with little commercial interruption and a right-from-the-record sound. Or one can listen to an opera in stereo or a lecture from a British university on social and moral evils. A choice between all is at the listener's fingertips.

'40 Failure

Many people question why FM failed so thoroughly when first introduced in the late 1940s. Broadcasters generally feel the failure was due mainly to the advent of television and radio listening patterns of the day.

With the television field coming of age, broadcasters say many who might have purchased FM receivers for their static-free qualities possibly reconsidered when they looked at TV and saw FM as what appeared to be a new entry in the radio field with a doubtful future.

Radio listeners also were not background music fans, as they are today. People in the Fox Cities tuned nightly to Milwaukee and Chicago stations for entertainment. FM, on the same band as television, could not be received over long distances without expensive rooftop antennas.

Fox Valley

This situation has been reversed today. Added stations on the AM band have made most Milwaukee and Chicago AM reception impossible, but a number of Fox Valley hi-fi enthusiasts are purchasing outdoor antennas for long-range FM reception, according to local dealers.

The age also made other FM advantages irrelevant. The added high fidelity of FM over AM was unimportant, because receivers of the day were of too low fidelity to discern the difference. Stereo was still in the discussion stage. FM was a luxury no one had much need for and few people wanted. Television was the coming thing.

But in the 1950s, three big breaks developed for FM: high fidelity systems and records, television's impact on radio, changing the market from dramatic entertainment and programming to mostly records, and, finally, in the late 1950s, introduction of home stereo systems.

By the mid-1950's broadcasters in metropolitan markets who had given FM up as a lost cause only a few years before, were returning to it as a means of capturing part of the advertising dollar beamed at the medium and high income markets purchasing hi-fi systems.

New Approach

While "Happy Harrys" were introducing rock and roll over the AM airwaves, FM broadcasters were playing the classics, jazz and fine light music with little talk over the new media, FM.

When stereo records first started becoming popular in 1957, broadcasters with stations on both bands began carrying one stereo channel over AM and the other over FM in experimental programs. Lawrence College's WLFM and WNAM Radio, Neenah, took part in such broadcasts for awhile.

At the same time, electronics companies were busy developing a "multiplex" system to allow broadcasting of both stereo channels over a single FM station, impossible with AM. In June, 1960, the Federal Communications Commission authorized use of the Zenith Co. system for stereo broadcasting, and FM stations around the country went "multiplex."

Reception of FM stereo requires only a multiplex adapter for the FM receiver. Most stereo systems with FM include this unit built-in. Adapters can be purchased and installed for any FM receiver without multiplex.

Local Outlets

Stereo FM can be heard throughout the entire Fox Valley area daily. WBAY-FM, 101.1, Green Bay, broadcasts in stereo every night from 7 to 10 p.m., including a classical concert at 9 p.m. The state's most powerful FM station, WBAY can be heard throughout the entire Fox Valley area.

Listeners in parts of Winnebago, Calumet and Fond du Lac counties can hear stereo over WBKV-FM, 92.5, West Bend. In parts of Waupaca and Shawano counties, stereocasts are aired over WSAU-FM, 95.5, Wausau. Good rooftop FM antennas also will bring in stereo from Milwaukee and Madison stations.

For the Fox Valley, FM's future looks even brighter. WAPL, Appleton; WNAM, Neenah, and WOSH, Oshkosh, all have filed applications with the FCC for permits to build new FM stations. WAPL and WOSH said they would include stereo from the start.

More Stereo

WKHW, 89.3, Chilton, a state owned educational station, is in line for addition of stereo equipment soon. WLFM, 91.1, Appleton, the Lawrence University station, has been purchasing stereo equipment and hopes to convert to stereo soon. WCWC Radio, Ripon, is in the process of building a new FM station and hopes to be on the air at 95.9 by Nov. 1.

Listeners in the Fox Cities are quite fortunate in their FM status. WBAY-FM is tailor-made to its listeners. According to Greg McElrone, manager, the station's program format is based mainly upon listener response.

The station, in trying to learn if listeners wanted record titles announced, experimented for a brief period with announcing, and response was strictly thumbs-down. McElrone says the station also is considering adding more news, possibly a short local newscast, stock markets once daily, and some "talk" programs, but all strictly dependent on listener response.

Currently, WBAY's test case is its stereo. The station is equipped to broadcast in stereo fulltime, and is willing to increase its stereo time. But McElrone said increases would depend on the number of letters received asking for more stereo.

The Dim-Eyed Mr. Magoo has a program all to himself this season. With Jim Backus still supplying the voice, the cartoon figure will portray a number of historic and legendary figures each Saturday night on NBC. These samples include "Minute Man Magoo," above; "Magoo the VIII," right, and "The Magoo-na Lisa."

when listeners wanted the added time and what they want to hear in stereo.

State Growth

The growth in popularity of WBAY-FM is indicative of the media's growth throughout the state and nation. In 1957, Wisconsin had 24 operating FM stations, including nine non-commercial, educational outlets. Today there are 58 FM stations in the state, including 1 educational, with many more in the process of being built and others seeking licenses.

The metropolitan areas, the growth of FM has been even more astonishing. The Milwaukee area is served by 17 FM stations, including two educational, compared to only nine AM stations. The ratio is almost 2-to-1.

Within Chicago's city limits, there are 30 FM stations, with many more in the suburbs, compared to 23 AM stations serving the entire city area.

Patrol Complies With Order to Lose Weight

BY KATHRYN JOHNSON

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Georgia State patrolmen obeyed an order to lose more than three tons of overweight, but they can't wear their reward yet — the new uniforms are too big.

"The troopers were measured last year, and now the uniforms don't fit," said Maj. L. E. Floyd. "They must be taken in."

He added, "I guess that shows the men met their dieting deadline enthusiastically."

The patrolmen had a year and two months to reach their present pouchless state. They were to be wearing their new Confederate gray uniforms and Sam Browne belts by this September — their deadline date for trimming down.

No Tubbies

"There's not a tubby in the lot," said Col. Lowell Conner, boss of the 418 troopers. "They won't be in their new uniforms now until Oct. 15."

Conner emphasized that his order, issued in June 1963, is still in effect. "It hasn't been rescinded because they've met the deadline. It will continue to stand or disciplinary action will be taken."

Three hundred and one men were overweight. "I'm proud of them," Conner said. "One man lost more than 80 pounds."

1,343 Pounds

Conner told the troopers he didn't care how they lost weight or what diet they followed, just so they came within five pounds of what they ought to weigh.

The amount each man was to lose was figured by a chart, which listed what he should weigh according to his height, frame and age.

"Some of the stations lost as much as 1,343 pounds per troop," Conner said. That means about 70 to 80 men lost a total of 1,343 pounds at each station.

The heaviest officer weighed 280, he's down to 200 pounds now. The average weight loss has been 15 to 25 pounds. All patrolmen are still required to weigh in once a month and results are tabbed at headquarters.

A New and Increasingly popular recreation is tape recording — both to listen to and to record yourself at home. This "Stereo Sound Center" is a console phonograph which incorporates a four-track tape recorder.

Record Tapes Marking End to 45 RPM Fad

Better Quality, Versatility Give New Idea Boost

Remember a little more than 10 years ago when that wonderful new 45 rpm record with the big hole began replacing the 78s that had been the standard of the recording industry for more than 20 years?

Today the short-lived "45" is almost exclusively used by teenage rock-and-rollers and the juke box industry. The big seller has become the 33 and 1-3rd rpm long-playing album.

But the rapidly changing world of stereo and high fidelity promises that the "33" probably won't survive much longer than the "45," and when it goes, it will take the phonograph with it.

Tape Reels

In an industry budding with new developments every day, taped music is growing in popularity only second to stereo FM. Most major record companies already are releasing their albums on seven-inch reels of tape, recorded in four-track stereo.

The eventual popularity of tape was almost inevitable. Nearly every disadvantage of the disc record is gone with tape. After 10,000 plays, a tape sounds the same as it did on the first play. Tapes, unlike records, don't wear out with use and can't be scratched. The recording industry can record better fidelity and greater stereo separation on tape than is possible in the grooves of a record. And a reel of tape requires less storage space than a 12-inch album.

Price Gap

Its use to date has been limited mostly to component hi-fi fans, but tape still has gained enough popularity that one of the major record clubs has opened a four-track stereo tape division. Almost all albums of the major companies are available on tape.

Like color television, however, stereo tape still has a price gap with records. A pre-recorded stereo tape album retails for $6.98 to $8.98, compared to $4.98 to $6.98 for the same album on disc.

Phonograph systems range from $16 for the cheapest record player to $300 for the most expensive FM-broadcast quality turntable. Stereo tape decks range from $40 for the cheapest model, to $6,000 for the highest-

Collector Nathan Spector Has Valuable 'Time' on His Hands

Nathan Spector has time on his hands—"25 clocks worth, to be exact."

Spector is a collector—"not an accumulator"—of clocks. Most of his time pieces would be classified as antiques.

Some persons collect all shapes, types and sizes of clocks. Spector, however, specializes in certain types of timepieces. His collection is much more interesting and valuable to him because of it.

The Appleton jeweler says any piece in his collection must fulfill two requirements; it must have good works and a good case or be in condition to be used without case.

Spector, who has collected clocks for 15 years, favors old French carriage clocks, forerunners of the modern travel alarm.

Ears and Eyes

These clocks are unique because they tell time for a person's ears as well as his eyes. Spector has six of them.

The clocks are designed to be taken along on trips. They have a carrying handle and are fairly compact. Most important, a bell system that sings the time to the minute for persons too lazy to get up and light a candle to see what time it was.

Spector also has a German alarm clock which he believes is nearing its 100th birthday. The clock's "alarm" is a music box, which can't be shut off. Once the operation is triggered, it plays until it runs down.

The third generation jeweler is proud of a 17th century Swiss-type French regulator clock containing eight moving parts.

The 300-year-old antique is the simplest clock ever built, Spector says. He plans to use it just as is (without the case) in his new home.

Lawrence University will be using the Sectors' former house for a girls dormitory, and the Spector family is currently moving into a new home. The clocks are carefully arranged in boxes in the present dwelling's carpeted living room, ready to be taken to the new home before the Sept. 20 moving deadline.

Spector has the clock from the former Center Valley School House and skillfully-crafted American time pieces, ornamental German and French clocks and a banjo-style clock which he constructed himself.

The time piece was built from scrap materials, and took three years to make. It was designed to fit the stairway landing in his current home.

German Works

The works are from a pre-World War I Junghans German clock, and are surrounded by walnut stained veneer.

The project cost "about $4.87 or something like that," Spector says with a twinkle in his eye. His ambition is to build his own grandfather clock.

Spector bemoans the loss of individual craftsmanship in clockmaking. He keeps two clocks as an example what he cites as the loss of "good, old-time workmanship."

Both time pieces are products of the same German company. One was made before World War

The Hallmark Hall of Fame TV programs this season will feature a production of the musical "Fanta-sticks" and the drama "The Magnificent Yankee." The latter will star Wisconsinites Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne.

On Their Toes Warren Commission's Report to be Televised

All three national television networks will pre-empt regular scheduled programming today in order to present specials dealing with the Warren Commission's report on the Kennedy assassination.

Announcement of the three special programs was made too late for inclusion in the pull-out TV log published in today's VIEW magazine.

An hour-long report, prepared by CBS News, will be televised on WBAY-TV, Channel 2, from 4 to 5 p.m. Another 60-minute program, from NBC News, will be televised from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. on WFVR-TV, Channel 5.

A 30-minute special broadcast devoted to the Warren Commission's report, prepared by ABC News, will be aired from 4:30 to 5 p.m. on WLWK-TV, Channel 11.

Each of the specials will report conclusions of the report, as well as the background of the investigation into the murder of the late President John F. Kennedy.

Pope Paul Observes His 67th Birthday

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI became 67 years old Saturday, and the Vatican unfurled its white and gold banners in his honor.

The flags flew from Vatican buildings and gave this small city-state a festive air.

Birthday messages poured in from Church leaders and chiefs of state of many countries. A register was placed in the Apostolic Palace, and diplomats and prelates lined up to sign it.

The pontiff himself paid little attention to the birthday. He said his usual daily Mass in his private chapel and then undertook a normal work day program.

Altar Society Hears Talks by Two Politicians

KAUKAUNA—William Rogers and Lawrence Beck, Democratic and Republican candidates respectively for the Second district assembly post, conducted a political discussion at a meeting of the St. Mary's Christian Mothers Altar Society.

A pantry shower was held on the occasion. Delegates to the Diocesan Council of Catholic Women's Institute at Green Bay were named by Mrs. Carl Andersen, president. Delegates will be Mrs. Edwin Vanevenhoven and Mrs. Gilbert Jaeger with Mrs. Leo Gillen and Mrs. Leonard Vanderloop as alternates.

Members of the social committee included Mrs. George R. Greenwood, chairman, Mrs. George E. Greenwood, Mrs. Leroy Gerharz, Miss Mary Louise Gerharz, Mrs. Sylvester Geurts, Mrs. William Glasheen, Mrs. John Haen, Mrs. Leo Haen, Mrs. Mervin Hansen, Mrs. John Hibbard, Miss Cecil Hoolihan, Mrs. Jerome Hawley and Mrs. Oscar Hartzheim.

Borrowed Audience Old Movie Title Can Give TV Series First Boost, But Then It's a Gamble

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Should driving that herd of cattle over the CBS plains for years, will spruce up with some big-name guest stars, while "Gunsmoke's" Marshal Dillon will have a new sidekick after all those years of relying on Chester for chuckles.

"The Nurses" will be concerned with a couple of new doctors, and the employer of "Hazel" will have new law of ABC's new comedy series, "No Time For Sergeants" prove to be anything like the movie of the same name, a better title for the television series would be "Jethro Clappett Joins the Army."

The business of adapting a popular film or book as a series has certain marked advantages. "Dr. Kildare" made its television debut as a pioneering doctor show with a bit of audience insurance because a lot of people knew and loved the old radio and movie "Kildare" shows.

"Sergeants" has the advantage of the popular hillbilly theme of an innocent country jake who naively outwits the sharp con men — at least that was the way it was in the movie, now visible around the channels in reruns.

Big Gamble

Getting a television program onto the air is an expensive gamble with odds so high against a hit show that it is surprising so many people are willing to take the risk. Between 150 and 200 pilot films are turned out each season. And if 1 in 20 is picked for a network series, it's a good pilot year. Then, after that, the series must win again, this time with a fickle, completely unpredictable public as judge.

An even more delicate operation, however, is maintaining public interest in a series that has been around a few seasons and whose format is beginning to wear thin.

Thus at the beginning of each new television season we inevitably hear about changes in progress.

Some Changes

Teens' Headlong Rush to Altar Ends Sadly at Divorce Court

BY JOY MILLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Penny and John have been going steady since they started high school two years ago. They think they're deeply in love. Why can't we marry now, they ask, since we spend practically all our time together anyway?

Diane is pregnant. Bill insists he'll "do the right thing by her" and marry her immediately.

Jim is tired of being treated like a child at home. His steady girl friend is fed up with her parents, too. By getting married they're sure they'll show everybody just how grown up they really are.

Three teen-age marriages. Will they end in divorce, as do half of all marriages between teen sweethearts?

Or will luck, parental understanding or unexpected flashes of maturity — that rarest commodity in too-young courtships — save their marriages and confound the experts who say marriage is a tragic trap?

Not Much Hope

Owen L. Doss, a Chicago divorce lawyer who has dealt with many youthful mismatches, wouldn't give them much of a chance.

"I think you'd find that a large majority of couples who marry in their teens would say that next time they would have waited," he said. "I have no doubts personally that teen marriages tend to be far more unhappy than those undertaken at a maturer age."

The mother of a high school age wife says: "Even if a teen-age marriage is kept going somehow, it starts a family, which makes schooling much more difficult and, too often, it just makes three children for the parents of the young marrieds to support — instead of one child."

But for all the denunciations, there are occasional timid but unshakable statements of faith like that of Jane, 18, who lives in upstate New York.

"I'd do it again," she says. "My life is completely changed. I don't want to go out any more and run around. I'm content at home with my husband and baby. I read all this stuff about the tragedy of teen-age marriages and I find some of it hard to believe."

Or Richard in Dallas: "We've had some hard times but I'm working enough to stay in college. My wife can't work because of the baby. Of course, our parents have helped a lot. I do believe one thing: Teen-agers who can make their marriage work will be just as happy, and maybe happier, than someone who waits until he's 30."

Why this lemming-like flight into matrimony at tender ages? Dr. Judson T. Landis, professor of sociology at the University of California, says it is a symptom of family failure. "Youth is grasping for security the boy and girl have not found in their own homes."

The youngsters, he goes on, "want to achieve the status of adults by doing what adults do — drink, smoke, have sex relations and marry. They aren't mature enough to know that society is letting them down."

"It's the style," is the explanation given by Dr. Lillian S. Alpers, special lecturer in marriage counsel at the Woman's Medical College in Philadelphia. "The wedding ring has become one of the status symbols of our time."

"Going steady" is frequently blamed. The Rev. Kenneth Murphy, director of the Catholic Youth Adjustment Counselors in Boston, put it this way: "The insanity of steady dating is the social monster contributing to increase of teen-age marriages."

Doesn't Agree One dissenter is Svend Riemer, sociology professor at the University of California at Los Angeles, who conducted a study in Los Angeles on going steady. He concludes: "A direct cause and effect relationship cannot be assumed to exist. Going steady gives a social framework for puppy love. But the probability of early marriage is only slightly raised through going steady."

Many authorities blame not only steady dating but parents for fostering it. William L. Hutchinson, director of pupil services at Granite School District, a Salt Lake City suburb, insists: "I think early dating practices, either condoned openly or encouraged covertly, is a factor.

"For example, whole I was a junior high school principal we had mothers who purposely bought dresses an inch or two shorter — even against school regulations. This is the type of behavior which tends to lead to early marriage."

A Bad Start

Although some courts use pregnancy — together with parental consent — as grounds for waiving legal marriage age requirements, Judge Roger Pfaff of the Consolidated Domestic Relations and Conciliation Court in Los Angeles says: "Any such marriage (because of pregnancy) starts on a sour note and adds one more hazardous hurdle to the marital obstacle course."

From divorce records he found that "in teen-age marriages an average of 40 per cent involved a pre-marital pregnancy. In all marriages there was a pre-marital pregnancy in one out of every six."

"These kids know very little about sex and its meaning in marriage," says James Peterson, head of University of California's sociology department and marriage counseling service.

Live Up to Image

"What they do know is that they are strongly attracted to one another because of heavy petting, and this sometimes leads to early marriage. Our society teaches them through songs, movies, television, about intense romantic involvement. We train them to look forward to marriage. We shouldn't be surprised when they do."

Since 1890 the median age for the altar-bound has been going down. Then it was women 22, men 26. In 1960 it was 20.3 for brides, 22.8 for grooms, with more girls getting married at 18 and men at 21 than at any other age.

This year there will be about 1,800,000 marriages in the United States. In all marriages 40 per cent of brides and 13 per cent of the grooms will be still in their teens. For first marriages, the proportion runs higher, about 51 per cent for brides and 17 per cent for grooms in their teens.

In all young marriages the biggest problem is emotional immaturity. If the partners are not ready to take on the responsibilities of marriage, of going 60 per cent of the way in compromise — as one authority phrased it — trouble is predictable.

The marriage may cause the boy to drop out of school — likely spending the rest of his life at the bottom of the labor force, often blaming his wife — and their growing family — for his lack of advancement.

The wastefulness of many early marriages is decried by social critics — the loss of individuality and personal independence which the youngsters never attain.

Judge Pfaff of Los Angeles, who says divorce has reached epidemic proportions in America, points to a few statistics: In all marriages 1 out of 4 ends in divorce; in teen-age marriages it's 1 out of 2; for college graduates it's 1 out of 20.

What can be done to stem the rush to marriage license bureau before they're out of high school, to maternity hospital before they're old enough to drive a car legally, to divorce court before they've had a chance to vote?

Should Be Taught

Pfaff wants to increase the filing fee for divorce by $5 and spend part of it on pre-marital materials for public schools.

He thinks that through documentary films that graphically illustrate the do's and don'ts of marriage and married life, young sweethearts can be educated to spiritual values and sacred obligations and responsibilities.

Many educators and social workers urge classroom instruction.

Almost everyone has a word to say about how parents must bear the brunt of the responsibility.

Desirable Homes

They should curb early dating and going steady, say some educators. Social workers believe parents should make home life so emotionally healthy and secure their children will have no urge to escape into immature marriage.

But Emily Levin, director of the Jewish Family and Children's Service Agency in Kansas City, insists: "The schools, social agencies, churches and parents all must share in the responsibility."

"If only one is designated, the problem will continue to mushroom."

The Newly-Married Teen-Age couple is setting out on an uncharted course for which both parties are unprepared. Two of three teen marriages in the United States end in divorce. Experts differ on the causes of the teen rush into matrimony, but all agree something should be done to stop it. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

School Children of a By-Gone Era are assembled in the gym portion of the clubhouse at Kimberly. The activity could have been a safety program, a school function or a play. None seem to recall when the photo was taken. In later years schools have used the hall less as all have built their own gyms or auditoriums.

The Stage in the Auditorium of Kimberly clubhouse received extensive use both by Kimberly-Clark Corp. and citizens of the community. Shown is the cast of a safety minstrel show staged at the clubhouse for both workers and the public. Dates of the presentation are not definite.

If Buildings Could Talk, Kimberly Club Could Tell of Much

Community Living, Recreation Centered in Mill-Run Clubhouse

KIMBERLY — If buildings could talk, one in the village would have many stories to tell, stories of happiness, hope and sadness.

It could tell of cheering crowds, championship basketball games, exciting archery tournaments, of political promises, election speeches, family history, carefree children, safety promotions, union negotiations, credit union activities, old time movies, and endless others.

A building that probably carries many memories for a large majority of village residents is the Kimberly Clubhouse located on Main Street near the Kimberly-Clark Mill. Owned by the firm, the clubhouse became the social hub of the community upon its completion in 1924.

Former Library

Activities formerly held at a hotel, long since disappeared from the scene, were transferred to the clubhouse. One of its earliest uses by the community was for a library which was housed there until 1930 when the village hall was constructed.

New house went into effect this month at the clubhouse, but Kimberly-Clark officials point out, advance reservations by residents or organizations will be accepted and the building still utilized for community functions. Worthwhile functions will still be handled, but the clubhouse will not maintain long evenings hours if no special activity is planned.

New hours are from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and 9 to 10:15 a.m. on Saturdays. The building was formerly open every night and weekends although hours have been reduced through the year as usage declined.

School Basketball

Although always utilized by the mill for union meetings, gatherings and fund raising drives for worthy purposes were well planned and completed.

Youngsters visited the clubhouse on Sunday afternoons to spend a nickel for penny candy or an ice cream cone. Oldsters gathered to play a little sheep head and reminisce. High school students gathered to talk over the school day or merely to have a place to congregate. The clubhouse was utilized by the Catholic War Veterans, Legion, Legion Auxiliary, Christian Mothers, Holy Name Society, Catholic Foresters, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts and all other organizations.

Other Activity

School patrol cadets, choir members, picnic workers and others assembled at the clubhouse for parties, Weddings, anniversary parties, funerals, all found there way to the clubhouse where meals were served. The gym was open evenings to permit youngsters to practice basketball when no other activities were scheduled.

Grounds around the clubhouse were utilized for picnics, both for company employees and by open to the public through Oct. organization. No one asked 13. A reception will be conducted where special activities were to be held, everyone knew. The evening. Artists throughout building has served its purpose Northeastern Wisconsin will be erected and larger meeting have works in the show.

Blue Inn Wins Award

Menasha Teen-Age Club Honored by Parents Magazine

MENASHA — The Blue Inn, teen-age club sponsored by the Menasha Park and Recreation Department, has received a certificate of commendation from Parents Magazine, the publication announced Saturday.

The award is made annually to youth clubs that perform outstanding community service during the year.

The Blue Inn, a self-supporting organization, has contributed to various charitable organizations and community affairs during the year. The organization, boasting approximately 500 active members, raises funds through memberships and monthly dances. The dances are attended by area youths with guest cards as well as by local members.

Blue Inn was founded in 1958. Its constitution provides for rules of conduct. Any member coming to a dance after drinking is permanently expelled. Smoking is forbidden in the Memorial building. When a teenager is found in violation of any rule, the organization handles its own disciplinary measures.

Blooming Violets Forecast Spring?

Could it be that we've missed our winter? Absurd, you say?

Well, the John Bushman family of 308 E. Taft St. has an awfully good argument for the thesis.

On the east side of their home violets are in bloom. Violets are a spring flower. Then when they bloom it should be spring and spring comes after winter. Ergo, we've missed our winter!

Bushman has another theory—also quite hopeful. He claims the blooming violets could mean that we'll have a mild winter. We could settle for that, too.

Chairmanship of the Fox Valley Curriculum Study Council changed hands at a meeting last week at Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh. Twenty-three school systems make up the study group. Left to right are Eugene Baltz, Oshkosh assistant superintendent of schools, retiring chairman, Dr. William E. White, assistant to the president of Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh and university representative on the council, and Gaylord Unbehauen, Brillion superintendent of schools, new chairman. # Wage Adjustments Planned For Outagamie Personnel

Program Would Raise Monthly County Payroll by $154,000

"Outagamie County will compete for the labor market."

This prediction comes from county officials studying recommendations for wage adjustments to be presented to supervisors in October by the J. L. Jacobs Co., a Chicago efficiency firm.

The firm was hired to study county operations and make recommendations for wage and personnel adjustments.

Last week, county employees received copies of the job classification and wage adjustment recommendations. Employees were asked to study the recommendations and make suggestions for changes. Thus far there have been few requests for review. All requests must be filed with the county clerk by Monday. They will then be sent to the Jacobs firm in Chicago for evaluation.

Tax Cost Secret

The firm has recommended that the starting wages for new employees be increased and that substantial hikes in the $154,000 per month county payroll be effected. It is a major secret what the program, if implemented, would cost taxpayers, but it is conservatively estimated that employees would cost about $9 per month on an average. There are 400 county employees.

County employees have been placed in 10 job-type classifications: clerical and administrative; courts and legal group; custodial and domestic; institutional; labor and trades supervisor; labor and trades (hourly paid); public safety; and welfare and special education.

Pay grades begin with a beginning clerk typist in grade one with less than one year to receive a salary of $231 with increases to $296 after 12 years.

Top Pay Grades

Top pay grades in the county go to grade 26 (county business administrator or medical director) which has a $950 per month starting salary with a range to $1,205.

If the wage adjustment plan is approved by supervisors, employees would immediately be placed in the next highest pay category on the wage adjustment scale.

If for instance a beginning clerk secretary was being paid currently $225, she would be increased to the next highest rung on the scale or $231. The typist would then be increased periodically up the rung until she is under her maximum.

Under the implementation plan, according to Alvin Woehler, county business administrator, no one would be cut in pay, and most would receive raises immediately. He said the rate of raises would vary.

Fox Valley Land Study Shows Use

More Area Devoted to Residences in Valley Than Nation's Average

The Fox Valley region is more residential, more commercial and has more parks and roads than the average, comparable area, according to the latest available figures.

Those latest available figures are contained in an up to date land use study made by the Fox Valley Regional Planning Commission.

Also shown in the figures, however, is that the region has fewer multiple-family dwellings, less industry and less public and semi-public ground.

Field work for the land use survey was done during the summer of 1963 with the aid of part-time help.

Mapped Region

The entire region, including the core areas of Neenah, Menasha and Appleton, was mapped, and the information recorded on field sheets at scales of either 400 or 500 feet to one inch for the cities and villages, and on maps ranging from 500 to 1,500 feet per inch for the towns.

After all the 14 governmental units in the region had been mapped, the land use information was transferred to base maps and later consolidated into a regional map.

Detailed color land use maps were prepared for each municipality and are on file and available for public inspection in the office of the planning commission in the Home Mutuals Building, 1001 W. Foster Ave.

The report shows almost half — 41.21 per cent — of the region is used for single family homes. The national average for communities of similar size is 35.5 per cent.

Two-Family Homes

Two-family homes in the Valley use 3.85 per cent of the land, compared to other cities averaging 2.08, multiple family use — three families or more — accounts for .41 per cent of the land. The average is 1.78 per cent.

In commercial land usage, the Fox Cities with 3.24 per cent are only slightly below the national average of 3.56.

Light industry uses 2.62 per cent of the land in the Valley, about the same as the 2.37 per cent average.

Heavy industry, however, is more predominant here than in comparable areas. About 5.7 per cent of the Fox Cities land is used by heavy industry. The

Man Shot Accidentally By His Date

Martin Wydeven, 20, Will Have Bullet Taken From Shoulder

A Kimberly man today is awaiting removal of a bullet near his right shoulder, fired at him accidentally in a downtown Appleton apartment early Saturday evening.

Martin Wydeven Jr., 20, 216 N. Wilson St., was shot with a .22 caliber pistol as the weapon was being shown him by Miss Susan M. Schinke, 18, 720 S. Teululah Ave. The shooting occurred at 123 W. College Ave., the apartment rented by Ralph Schierl, a relative of Miss Schinke's.

Police said Wydeven went to the apartment about 5:55 p.m. to meet Miss Schinke with whom he had a date. He admitted several guns in the apartment and Miss Schinke went to a bedroom and brought out a small pistol. As she was showing it to him it went off.

Wydeven fell to the floor when the bullet entered his body just below the neck. The bullet traveled to his right shoulder.

Miss Schinke told police she thought Wydeven was "kidding," but when she saw the man was bleeding, she ran from the room and dropped the pistol on a small vanity in the bedroom where it was found later by police.

A witness to the shooting, Mrs. Richard Fuerst, who lives in a downstairs apartment, called police and asked for an ambulance. When police arrived, Wydeven was sitting near a doorway wrapped in a blanket. He was able to talk to police and said he had been accidentally shot. He was taken to the hospital by Larry's Westside Ambulance Service.

Library Cost-Share Issues Again Stir County Problem

Board Votes to Terminate Aid To Communities; Appleton, Kaukauna Won't Serve Outsiders

BY JACQUELINE FIX

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

No one is against public library service, but no one has a pat answer on how costs can best be shared.

This is the impasse which has been reached in Outagamie County.

The roots of the controversy go back several years, but the current point at issue is the county board's decision to end its appropriations to the county's eight public libraries after 1964.

The Appleton and Kaukauna library boards, representing the two largest libraries and the ones which receive the major share of the county's $10,500 appropriation, responded last month with a decision to end their free service to out-of-city patrons and schools when county aid is cut off. Other library boards in the county also have considered this possibility, although businessmen's belief in the value of the libraries in bringing people to town might keep them from limiting free service to rural patrons.

Aroused Concern

This decision has aroused concern among individual library users, citizens' groups and some governmental bodies throughout the county. No concerted drive has been organized, but letters, comments, resolutions and a petition favoring continuation of county aid to libraries and the free service it made possible have been sent to local and county officials.

A petition requesting that funds be continued was filed with the county board at its September meeting. The matter is expected to come up during the board's Oct. 13 meeting and November budget hearings.

Underlying issues are the amount of aid the county should give the libraries and means of allocating it and the whole question of the type of library structure the county should have.

Alvin Fulcer, Kimberly, county board chairman, said the resolution to end the library appropriation has passed because "the county could not find a realistic way to run any kind of program." The board decided library service was more a local or municipal problem than a county problem, and also had difficulty determining how to allocate funds among the eight public libraries, he said.

Separate Contracts

Fulcer, Supv. Eugene Kloes, Appleton, and other county board members suggest that separate contracts for library service be worked out between individual towns, villages or school districts and the libraries—a procedure the libraries see as very complicated. The fact that Appleton and Kaukauna pay more than 60 per cent of the county taxes and therefore the greater portion of the library appropriation makes an equitable allocation of the funds difficult, officials note.

John Corcoran, chairman of the county board's health, education and institutions committee which recommended the resolution to end the library appropriation, said the committee wants to place the expense of library service with the various governmental units served and

$90,000 Park Land Purchase Proposed by Winnebago Unit

Committee Asks Funds to Buy 29.93 Acre River Site Near Omro

BY ALLAN EKVALL

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

OSHKOSH—Purchase of park land for about $90,000 is being proposed in the 1965 budget by the Winnebago County Board's Fair, Park and Conservation committee.

The committee voted Saturday to ask for funds for purchase of a 29.93 acre site near Omro. Purchase of the park will be a fourth major project planned for 1965 by the various committees of the Winnebago County Board which now are compiling their budgets to submit to the county board's finance committee prior to the Wednesday deadline.

Remodeling

The other projects include $112,100 for purchasing land for the suggested expansion of the Winnebago County Airport, the remodeling of Sunny View Sanatorium through converting an unused children's wing into a hospital for chronically ill persons who are on welfare aid and are confined to private hospitals and the construction of a new Pleasant Acres Home.

Winnebago County's share of the Sunny View Sanatorium project would be about $33,000 if an elevator must be added and considerably less if an elevator is not needed. Estimated cost of this conversion is about $54,000 of which more than half of the cost is in the elevator addition.

This project is under study by the trustees of the Sunny View Sanatorium which is owned jointly by Winnebago and Fond du Lac counties. Fond du Lac county's committee has included its share in its budget request and the Winnebago County Institutions Committee has not taken formal action on the proposal.

The Pleasant Acres Home project is scheduled to begin next spring with the bond issue for $1.5 million to be voted on in December. The Institutions committee will meet at 1:30 p.m. Monday with the architect to determine the type of building to be erected and its location. The architect then can proceed with his preliminary sketches and working drawings.

The land proposed for purchase as a future park is now owned by Ernest and Henry Peterson. It contains 29.93 acres between Springbrook Road in the Town of Omro and the Fox River, immediately east of Omro. It has 7 of a mile frontage on the Fox River. The Omro Businessmen's Association has taken an option on this site to hold it until the county decided if it will buy the land.

County board members inspected the site Sept. 15 during a tour of county-owned facilities. Frank P. Zeidler, director of the

Poll Indicates LBJ Running Strong in Fox Cities Area

Views of 30 Residents Living in 10 Communities Are Sampled

BY WILLIAM C. CAREY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

President Lyndon B. Johnson is showing surprising strength in the traditionally Republican Fox Cities region, a sampling of off-the-cuff opinion indicated this past week.

Extemporaneous interviews with residents of 10 communities—their telephone numbers selected at random from the directory—showed Johnson well ahead of Sen. Barry Goldwater.

About one-third of the people interviewed had not made up their minds yet.

However, based on the forthright comments and opinions of the 30 persons contacted, and if the Nov. 3 presidential election was tomorrow, Johnson could win hands down.

Majority For LBJ

The poll disclosed 16 voters favored Johnson, 3 cast their lot with Goldwater and the remaining 11 would be undecided until entering the booth and pulling the lever.

About 60 per cent of the "undecided now" claimed to be independents while the others said they normally voted Republican but indicated a reluctance to go with Goldwater.

Residents of Appleton, Neenah, Menasha, Kimberly, Kaukauna, Little Chute, Hortonville, Black Creek, Shiocton and Seymour were queried.

The poll proved to be a soundly good board for what the average voter is contemplating—why he likes or doesn't dislike Goldwater or Johnson and whether he is stirred by the so-called civil rights backlash or frontlash, Viet Nam situation and nuclear weapons' talk.

Poll Results

Summarized, results of the poll:

—President Johnson has done a good job since the assassination of former President Kennedy and should continue in office.

Party Leaders Differ on Poll

Republican Decries Results, Democrat Agrees With Finding

Spokesmen for the Outagamie County Republican and Democratic Parties had mixed emotions Saturday over the Fox Cities poll which gleaned favorably on President Johnson.

"I don't believe there is too much comment I can make because there should be certain criteria followed in random samplings," commented Harvey Wolfe, county GOP chairman.

Wolfe said he didn't think any of the polls were right at this time, including those publicized on the national level.

"There are about 40 per cent of the voters who will not commit themselves and both parties are naturally trying to win them over," Wolfe observed.

Wolfe said county officials have information that Republicans are "solidly behind the GOP ticket".

"Polls have been wrong before," Wolfe recalled.

Dean Lewis, vice chairman of the Outagamie County Democrats, said the results came as no surprise.

"I think there is strong feeling for Johnson throughout the state," Lewis said. "Everybody says this Goldwater just isn't the man for them."

Lewis said he has not seen so much enthusiasm for a Democratic presidential candidate in years as that being generated by Johnson.

Johnson is the president of all the people; it's that simple," Lewis said.

Mr. Game Warden, Vince Skilling, to Retire at Oshkosh

Supervised Wardens in East Central Area for 14 Years

BY DAVE DUFFEY
OSHKOSH — The man who has been "Mr. Game Warden" for the past 14 years in east central Wisconsin is bowing out.
V. A. (Vince) Skilling, a conservation law enforcement officer for more than 26 years was notified last week that application for a retirement due to physical disability has been approved.

A rugged man both physically and mentally, Skilling who has supervised the activities of game wardens in 17 central Wisconsin counties since 1950 suffered a severe heart attack about two years ago which led to his application for retirement.
Twenty-five of the state's regular conservation wardens and about the same number of seasonal helpers in the busy periods of spring and fall were under Skilling's direction in Brown, Outagamie, Door, Kewaukee, Manitowoc, Sheboygan, Ozaukee, Washington, Fond du Lac, Calumet, Dodge, Green Lake, Marquette, Waushara, Winnebago, Waupaca, and Portage counties.

Vince Skilling

Long Hard Days
In his long career in conservation law enforcement which began before his permanent appointment as game warden on Sept. 28, 1938, Skilling will probably be best remembered as "the man who cleaned up the Wolf River."

Following World War II, conservation law violators picked up where they left off in the 1930's in their rape of the river's fisheries resources with fish trap, snag line, spear and gill net.
Working with the crew of dedicated young wardens who were willing to spend 24 hours-a-day in an open boat, and even accept dunkings in the icy waters of the Wolf during the spring spawning run when they tangled with belligerent poachers, Skilling's annual arrest report and confiscation record kept at the Oshkosh area headquarters shows a steady decline in serious fishing violations.

There are still problems on the Wolf. But where it was once common for wardens to come in with boats riding low in the water from the weight of illegal devices used to take Walleye and Sturgeon, the occasional snag line now pulled from the water is subject to a great deal of interest. Those who continue to violate are no longer bragging and blatant about their "accomplishments," but circumspect and secretive.

Illegal Hunting
"Commercial violators," the poachers who market their illegal take, have always been one of Skilling's main targets. He likes to recall the breaking up of an illegal deer hunting ring in the City Point area along the Wood-Jackson county lines in the 1940's. "We got cars, guns, lights, just about everything including real heavy fines. And in those days a dollar was a dollar."

The six foot, 200-pound Skilling has served under four chief wardens, Barney Devine, Al Robinson, George Hadland, and the present law enforcement chief, Walt Zielinski.
"Years ago, we used to lone wolf it. There was no communication like we have now and if you managed to avoid the post office for a few days no one knew where you were gone or where you were," he said.

It was on one of these "lone wolf" occasions at his first station in Wisconsin Rapids in Wood county that led Skilling to a doe deer in a snare. He spent three days "laying on" the snared deer, which got riper by the hour, until a couple of Indians made an appearance on the scene. Skilling laid low until they had cut up the smelly animal. Then he jumped them. "I had them bury the no good parts and they packed the rest of the evidence out in their pack-sacks," Skilling grinned.

"Saved me from having to mess around with that rotten animal."

Fox Valley Land Study Shows Use

average city of the same size is 2.47 per cent land used for heavy industry.

A total of 11.9 per cent of the Valley's land is used for public and semi-public purposes. Nationally, the average figure is 16.81.

Parks and playgrounds are 3.79 per cent of the Valley, and 3.17 per cent nationally.

There is more railroad property — about 3.95 per cent — in the Fox Cities than the 2.67 per cent average.

The land use second to residential is streets and roads. A percentage of 23.33 is the figure for the Valley, compared to a 28.59 per cent average.

Total area of the communities in the planning commission's study — Appleton, Menasha, Neenah, Kaukauna, Little Chute, Kimberly, Combined Locks, and the Town of Menasha is 20,593 acres.

Of this, 12,270 acres are developed area, and the remaining 8,323 acres are vacant or water.

Statistics found in the study will be used to aid the planning commission for drawing zoning ordinances and for additional planning.

Working for the adjutant general's office at King in 1932. After working as a part time warden and "specializing" with Warden Dutch Paul at Eagle River, his first permanent station was at Wisconsin Rapids from 1938-46.

Future Plans

Skilling said he is "undecided" about future plans. But there's no doubt it will include plenty of hunting. Anyone who is fortunate enough to have hunted with Skilling couldn't help but come away wiser. He knows game and its habits and there is nothing haphazard or left to chance as he stalks it. Whether it's checking out deer hunting territory before the season opens or watching the flight of waterfowl the night before in order to determine where the best place will be to "set up" in the morning, Skilling is as analytical and meticulous as he is in the investigation of a game law violation.

Bob Hammersberg Tests the carrier frequency on the toll lines with the oscilloscope. The tests are being made in preparation of changing the 2,300 telephone operation in the New London area of the Wisconsin Telephone Co. to dial operation in about a month. The project cost an estimated $1 million. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Conversion to Dial Phone Should Be Done in Month in New London

Testing of Equipment to be Complete Oct. 16
For Changeover; Installation Began June 23

NEW LONDON — Work to convert 2,300 telephones in the New London area to the dial system will be completed in about a month according to J. P. Obertin, Wisconsin Telephone Co. business manager in New London.

Testing of the dial equipment is to be completed Oct. 16. The testing is being done by Western Electric employees who began installation of the dial equipment in the new telephone office June 23. The new business office and dial system plant is located on Spring Street.

Cost of the changeover to dial system will run about $1 million with the construction of the building, laying of cable, purchase of equipment and installation of the dial system.

When the dial operation goes into effect the number of long distance trunks from New London will double to a total of 28 lines.

Direct Dial

There will be 10 camera trunks (direct dialing) to Appleton. An additional 18 trunks will be connected to the switchboard.

Approximately 200,000 connections had to be made in the installation of the dial equipment. H. K. Inderdahl, in charge man for Western Electric, said about 40,000 wire ends had been connected plus about four times that number by the factory building the equipment.

Inderdahl estimated a million miles of wire was housed in the new 62 by 79 foot building. These wires will all be connected when the dial system is in operation.

Cable connections have to be completed before the new system can go into operation.

Installed are the line finder switches which go into operation when a phone is taken off the hook. These switches search out the first selectors which give the dial tone. Several hundred relays have to operate before the dial tone is heard according to John Costello and Phil Jagoditsch, Wisconsin Telephone employees. The first four digits dialed are recorded on these switches.

Switches, called the fifth selector, record the fifth digit dialed. The last two numbers of the dial system are recorded to determine the line and rings of the number.

Local workmen are splicing dial wires to the wires being used to prepare for the changeover.

Bob Hammerberg, local toll line superintendent, was checking the lines with an oscilloscope to test the carrier frequencies on the toll lines.

Hammerberg said a person talking on the phone had his voice mixed with different length carrier frequencies which are sent over the line. This mixture of voice with frequency waves allows more than one voice to be carried over a single line simultaneously.

Office Changes

He said the changeover to dial operation would require the connecting of the toll trunks with the new office and maintaining the present service through the old office.

This will mean the connection of numerous wire ends, about 1,600 with each pair representing one line. This operation includes identification of the pairs of wires. Sometimes these are not always identifiable.

and what should be a two hour job takes as long as two weeks.

The dial system was to provide toll-free service between New London, Hortonville and Bear Creek. A Public Service Commission hearing of July 21 on the matter has not brought forth a ruling.

When the system goes into operation about Nov. 1, it is expected to bring the telephone subscribers quicker and more economic service.

4 Arrested For Break-In

Two Are Charged; Two Referred to Juvenile Authorities

In the break-in the youths took six bottles of liquor and three cartons of cigarettes, police said. They were arrested in Waupaca after an investigation by Manawa Police Chief Kenneth Stevens, the Waupaca County sheriff's office and members of the Waupaca Traffic Patrol.

The $1,008,000, 98,000-square-foot addition to the old Reeve Union, opened this fall and to be shown to the public in guided tours next Sunday, includes almost every extra-curricular diversion and need of the student short of gymnasium facilities, which are available in Albee Hall.

Students living in dormitories, with mandatory on-campus board, and off-campus scholars buying board, eat in one of the new cafeterias, decorated in pastels.

To pass the time, students can go to the "Cavern," in the basement, housing six brand new bowling lanes with automatic pin-setters, card tables, several ping-pong tables and 12 new pool tables. There is room for another 12 pool tables, and four more bowling lanes will be added.

The public open house with guided tours will be conducted from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m. next Sunday. The grand opening week concludes with Sunday's movie, "Period of Adjustment."

Programs and activities of the union are determined by the union board, consisting of 46 students working with a panel of three faculty directors. The board is divided into social, program, publicity and rules committees, each determining its various phases of union operation.

Libraries Posing County Problem

definitely does not want the cost to be borne by individuals.
The county board passed this resolution almost a year ago, but general public reaction followed the library boards' decision last month to begin charging non-resident fees when county funds are cut off.

Village Reaction
Much reaction has come from Little Chute, between Appleton and Kaukauna and without a library of its own. The petition presented to the county board, containing 150 signatures, was circulated by the Little Chute PTA, whose president, Mrs. Carl Kaminski, hopes to interest other PTA units in taking similar action.

The Little Chute school board wrote the village board opposing discontinuation of county library funds. The village board, according to president Paul Koska, believes county appropriations for libraries should be continued and possibly raised, but has not taken formal action.

The Combined Locks village board is considering a resolution to the county board favoring continued library aid, according to village president Donald Hoh. The Seymour city council sent a letter to the county board asking that the aid not be dropped.

Less Service
The prospect of loss of free extension service to county schools brought a protest to the county board from the Hortonville Teachers' Association. The Hortonville Grade School PTA also is encouraging members to write to their supervisors on the matter.

County-wide reaction came from the county executive board of homemakers' clubs, representing almost 900 women, who passed a resolution asking the county board to continue the library aid and urged individual clubs and members to write their supervisors about it.
County library appropriations started with $250 in 1936 and have been increased to $10,500. The Appleton library gets $7,350 of this, the Kaukauna library receives $1,102.50, and the remainder is split among the Kimberly, Seymour, Hortonville, Black Creek, New London and Shiocton libraries in amounts ranging from about $200 to $600.

The Appleton and Kaukauna boards have sought increased appropriations from the county, saying that the county funds do not cover the cost of service to non-resident users and schools. The Appleton firm which determined the cost of service to non-residents in 1961 was about $23,000.

$70,000 Estimate
Last year the health, education and institutions committee estimated a county appropriation of $70,000 would be needed to satisfy Appleton and Kaukauna, and recommended the library appropriations be discontinued after 1964. "The committee felt that the county will best be served in the future by the respective libraries negotiating directly with the communities they serve," the report said.

Supv. John Heidemann, Town of Buchanan, a minority of one on the committee, believes the appropriation should be continued and is seeking support from rural and village supervisors.

Appleton Librarian Gordon Bebeau said his primary concern is that the county board not abandon its program of support for libraries. The library board "would not be dogmatic" on the amount needed, he said, "and I'm sure something could be worked out as long as there was agreement to work toward an adequate level of support over a period of years."

If the city library received more money from the county, city library taxes would go down and this would lead to a more equitable payment on the basis of use, Bebeau said, referring to arguments that Appleton pays 51 per cent of the county library appropriation.

Poll Shows LBJ Runs Strong in Fox Valley

proper temperament and appears to be "too shifty".

—Democrats are strong in their support of Johnson while some Republicans say they didn't want Goldwater and would "go along" with Johnson.

—There was no evidence of strong civil rights feeling in either direction, and for the most part, satisfaction was expressed over Johnson's handling of the Viet Nam situation.

—Those who would vote for Goldwater felt U.S. foreign policy should be revamped and that the Republican standard-bearer "had some good points on civil rights".

—It will be a dirty campaign down to the final wire with both sides putting on a big show. However, those who have already made their "pick" said the political fireworks wouldn't change their vote.

Not Excited

Two of the three Goldwater votes came from Appleton and the other from Seymour.

Judging from general conversation, average Mr. and Mrs. Voter are not excited over the forthcoming election.

Several persons said they already heard enough "mudslinging" and wanted more talk on the issues.

One rural woman said she hadn't voted in 13 years and didn't intend to next month. "I'll take whoever they elect," she said.

By contrast, a 13-year-old Kaukauna babysitter said she wished she was old enough to vote and would be for Johnson because of his attitude on civil rights. Well versed on current events, she thought some of Goldwater's points were good, too, but not good enough.

An Appleton housewife, a Republican, admitted she had not been sold on Goldwater until reading the book, "A Choice, Not An Echo". She agreed with Goldwater's approach to civil rights and felt foreign policy had to be reshuffled.

"More Secure"

"I'd feel more secure with Johnson. Goldwater doesn't seem to know what he's talking about," said a Kimberly housewife.

An Appleton homemaker said she hadn't given the election much thought but was voting for Johnson. "There's something I don't like about that Goldwater and it would take a long time to explain," she commented.

An Appleton executive, who said he had rental property, said Goldwater's stand on civil rights made sense and he would vote for the GOP challenger.

A Neenah housewife put it bluntly that she thoroughly disliked Goldwater, felt he was not the right man for the presidency and would vote for Johnson. "Goldwater is very temperamental and his convictions are much too strong," she said.

At Hortonville, a policeman said he hadn't decided on what man to vote for and considered himself an independent voter.

A Black Creek farmer admitted he hadn't given the election much thought. "They can put whoever they want into office," he remarked.

No Choice Yet

A Shiocton farmer said he intended to vote but didn't know whether to pick Lyndon or Barry.

"Johnson will get my vote because he's doing a good job," commented a Kaukauna businessman. "I've heard Goldwater and he doesn't add up. I'd vote for a good Republican if there was one running."

The operator of an Appleton drugstore said he thought there has been "too much mudslinging" and hasn't made up his mind.

A Kimberly housewife spoke out against Goldwater's civil rights and foreign policy stands and said she would "have to go along with Johnson."

"I vote for the man, not the party," asserted a Neenah business executive. "My mind isn't made up yet."

And there was the Appleton merchant, an independent, who said he wanted to hear more from the candidates before making a choice.

"Doing Okay"

A rural Appleton woman thought Johnson was doing okay and didn't go for Goldwater "because he is changing his mind too much on too many things." She said her husband would vote for the one who gives the farmer a break.

"Johnson is okay and Goldwater 'way out' as far as I'm concerned," was the reaction of a Little Chute housewife. "I'd feel safer with Johnson in the White House."

A Menasha millworker, "A Democrat all the way" said he would vote a straight party ticket.

A retired Menasha school teacher volunteered the comment, "President Johnson would be okay for me; I just don't know enough about Goldwater."

More discussion of the issues is needed, according to an Appleton woman, who declared: "Goldwater is too hot-headed and Johnson is just pussyfooting around." Her husband, an electrician, felt the same way.

Another rural Appleton woman thought TV debates would help her definitely make up her mind, but now she was leaning toward Johnson.

"Too Far Out"

The government worker who lives in Little Chute said he and his wife were for Johnson because "Goldwater's too far out."

"I just turned 21 and will be voting for the first time," said an Appleton girl. "I haven't decided yet and there really isn't much to get excited about."

At Seymour, a farmer thought Johnson should be doing more for the farmer and that he might vote for Goldwater.

A husband-wife combination at Neenah, both independent voters, said Johnson got the nod. "I thoroughly dislike Goldwater and wouldn't trust him," was the wife's outspoken opinion.

In Appleton, a carpenter said he couldn't get too interested in the election "Johnson might as well stay in. He's done all right so far," he commented.

"Both men have some good ideas but Johnson did a good job in taking over when the President was killed," said a Kimberly housewife. "Besides, I don't like Goldwater's looks and he's making too many promises."

Fox Cities residents who made their choice laid it on the line, and to say their comments are not revealing would be an understatement of considerable proportion.

Calumet County Plans Brochure

To Include Summary of Industrial Agriculture, Recreation Facilities

CHILTON—Plans for a brochure including a summary of the agricultural, industrial and recreation aspects of Calumet County are being formulated in order to be presented to the county board during the November Annual meeting.

County Agent Orrin Meyer and County Clerk Roland E. Miller are working with Industrial Development committee of the county board in choosing the pictures and information to be included in the brochure.

Although all aspects of the county will be covered in the pamphlet advertising the county, recreation will be covered most thoroughly.

The basic recreational tourist attraction of the county will be the newly created Hiawatha Pioneer trail which travels through the county starting at Kiel and winding through Chilton, west to Lake Winnebago and north through Quinney, Stockbridge and Sherwood and into Appleton.

Explain Museum

The brochure will explain the Royal Farm Museum which has more than 1,500 early farm implements and items on display and will be located just out of Chilton on the historic trail.

A brief history of the early immigrants in the county will be included. Covered will be the confederacy of the Stockbridge and Brothertown Indians which was created during the 1830's along the shores of Lake Winnebago.

The proposed colored brochure will have pictures of both the Calumet County Park and High Cliff State Park, both located on the shores of the Lake.

Other recreational facilities offered in the county and specifically in the two parks will be explained in the brochure. There are wooded bluffs, modern marinas, fishing, swimming, camping and picnic facilities offered to the county tourist.

Fishing Resources

The pamphlet will outline the fishing resources in the county which include Lake Winnebago, several small deep lakes near Brillion, and the Manitowoc River which winds its way through the county.

Several hunting lands will also be covered including the Brillion Marsh, the New Holstein Marsh and the Kiel Marsh plus many small wooded areas scattered throughout the county.

Included will be information concerning the industrial development of the county with statistics about employment opportunities, type of industries available and population information.

Slightly more space will be given to the county agricultural economy. A rundown of the crops grown in the county included hay, oats, corn, barley, peas, sweet corn, wheat, buckwheat, beets, lima beans, flax, soybeans, potatoes, cucumbers, rye and fruit.

The explanation will be supplemented with photographs of various farm scenes in the county, pictures of both the High Cliff and County Parks and other pictures which typify the county's resources.

Ready For Tourists

The Industrial Development committee, consisting of Suprs Alfred J. Burich, Brillion, Zeno Endres, Chilton, and Mike Kloppe, Hilbert, hope to have the brochure completed and ready for distribution by spring of 1965 in time for the tourist season.

Copies of the brochure will be available throughout the county and through the conservation department and state tourist bureaus.

The brochure will be the first to be published by the county, although New Holstein and Brillion have released these information folders on the specific areas.

Also included in the pamphlet to publicize the county will be a map designating the many points of interest in the county.

Plan Mission At Winchester Grace Lutheran

WINCHESTER — The Rev. Clarence Solberg, executive assistant to the district president of the Northern Wisconsin District of the American Lutheran Church, will be the guest speaker at the "Preaching Teaching Reaching Mission" in Grace Lutheran Church here today through Wednesday.

Services will be at 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. and 8 p.m. today, and 8 p.m. Monday through Wednesday.

Sermon topics will be "In All Simplicity," on the way of salvation, at morning services today; "Can I Know I'm His Child?" on assurance of salvation, tonight; "Good Gifts to Our Children," on family life, Monday; "Holy Humdrum," on the Christian and his work, Tuesday, and "Thoughts While Fishing," on race relations, Wednesday.

on equalized valuation and the proportionate shares for each county have not been announced. This year the county's share was $9,657 and last year the share was $11,585.

Cut Bounties

Fox bounties were cut from $1,000 to $500 for next year. Left at this year's figures were the $100 for attendance at the State Conservation Congress and $600 for the maintenance costs at the Eureka boat launching site. The committee Saturday accepted the bid of Duwe Precast Concrete Co., Oshkosh, for 20 eight-foot concrete bumper strips at a cost of $165.

Additional land to widen the road to the Osh-O-Nee Midway boat launching site on Lake Winnebago also is contemplated by the committee. It voted to put $2,000 in its 1965 budget to take care of buying a 300 foot long, 33 foot wide strip east of County Trunk A and for the widening and resurfacing of that road. Maintenance costs at that site were raised from $300 to $400 for next year.

Maintenance at the Poygan campsite was cut from $500 to $400 and the improvements budget from $1,500 to $400. Work now is being done on improving the launching site to Lake Poygan which was acquired from the Town of Poygan.

Cost Hike

Purchase of several additional acres adjoining the campsite seems unlikely since the cost per acre had been raised by the owner. The committee indicated it would not pay the higher cost.

Cut about $800 was the budget for the county park at Winnebago. Next year's budget for this park was set at $5,970 with the cuts being made in new equipment purchases and building and ground maintenance.

Improvements planned are for planting trees, repair of the boat dock and construction of a sheltered porch adjacent to the No. 2 building east of the main building. This canopied shelter would be for protection of picnickers caught in the rain.

These budget requests will go to the Finance Committee and then to the county board for final action.

Winnebago 4-H Office Accepting Applications

OSHKOSH — Applications for attending the State 4-H Leaders Conference at Madison Oct. 27 to 29 are to be turned in to the county extension office by Thursday, Clarence Westfall, Winnebago County 4-H agent, reminded club leaders.

Theme of the 14th annual leaders meeting is "4-H leadership and You." One scholarship is available through the Wisconsin 4-H Foundation.

Westfall called attention of leaders to this week being observed as "National 4-H Club Week" and the national theme of "4-H Learning for Living."

Seven Plan to Attend Sunday School Meeting

OSHKOSH — Seven members of the First Assembly of God Church will attend the district Sunday school convention at the Wisconsin Rapids Assembly of God Church Monday and Tuesday.

Portico Sets Off Economy Bi-Level

BY ANDY LANG

Call it what you will — a raised ranch, high ranch, bi-level or just a house — there's no denying the popularity of the home which has two levels yet keeps all the main rooms on one of them.

This type of design eliminates stair climbing in going back and forth between the living-working area and the bedroom wing. But it keeps the utility equipment on a separate level and provides maximum recreation, garage and storage space.

In his wide experience with home-planning families, architect Lester Cohen has found no style with more popular appeal than the bi-level. And since he is so often asked to include a portico as an exterior detail, he has combined this feature in a bi-level to produce the latest House of the Week in this weekly series.

The result, Design H-50, is a handsome Colonial, with imposing columns at the front setting off both the horizontal and vertical lines. With over-all dimensions a compact 50 feet by 41 feet, land costs can be held within a moderate budget range.

To the right of the center hall entrance is a sizable living room, with twin windows at the front, a wrought iron railing overlooking the foyer and, through an arch, the dining room at the rear. Sliding glass doors in the dining room lead to a balcony at the back of the house, with a wrought iron staircase going down to the recreation - level patio below the balcony.

Recreation Room

The recreation room, by the way, is a husky 24 feet by 19 feet and has a fireplace and a lavatory, making it a fine all-year-round retreat from the formal living area.

A kitchen window overlooking the balcony makes it easy to pass out snacks and refreshments to those outdoors without going through the dining room. Counter space is plentiful, with a continuous L reaching from the oven to the refrigerator. The plumbing stack which serves the kitchen and the two main floor bathrooms also handles the downstairs lavatory, cutting plumbing costs.

The bedroom wing is as practical as though it were up a full flight of stairs. Two bath-

Large Bathrooms

Both bathrooms are generous in size; one with a stall shower, the other with a large vanity. The closet in the master bedroom is a walk-in, about 5 feet by 4 feet. The two front bedrooms share a closet wall 8 feet wide. There's a linen closet in the bedroom hall and, of course, a guest closet in the front hall.

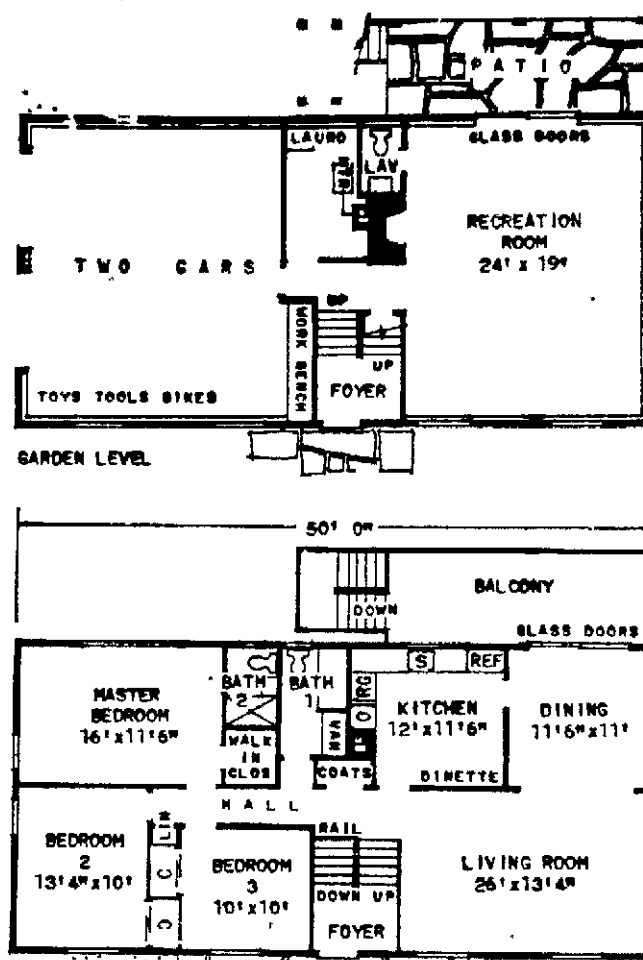

On the same level with the recreation room is a laundry

H-50 Statistics

Design H-50 has three bedrooms, two bathrooms, a living room, dining room and kitchen, with a square-foot area of 1300 for the main level — not including the front portico and the rear balcony. There are 728 square feet of habitable area on the ground or garden level, excluding the patio and the two-car garage. A 24' by 19' recreation room is the highlight of this floor. The house itself is 50' in width and 26' in depth, with the portico and balcony adding 15' to the depth.

room, with a window looking out to the rear. The garage not only is large enough for two cars; it has plenty of space for a workbench and the storage of toys, bikes and garden equipment.

The entrance to the garage is at the side, thus preserving the symmetry of the porticoed front of the house. Despite its general image of solid comfort and security, the house is a complete rectangle without foundation breaks and with a minimum of roof breaks, a definite economy construction feature.

The Six Rooms and two baths on the main floor of this home are augmented by a front portico, an outdoor balcony, a patio and a recreation room.

The Stately Portico columns give just the right touch to this three-bedroom house, which utilizes the space-saving device of two levels yet keeps all the main rooms on a single floor.

This Expansive Recreation room has everything a family needs for home enjoyment, including easy access to the rear patio through sliding glass doors.

She Displays Family Jewels in Bathroom!

Why put the family jewels in a vault when you can look at them every day safely anchored in something solid around the house, like the bathroom water faucets.

One woman did just that with a couple of treasured cameos for a unique motif, says Stanley Paul, whose business is hardware and decorative accessories. He had the cameos installed in the pop-up knobs in her lavatory.

"The bathroom has been the steproom of the house, decoratively speaking, until recently. But now about 75 per cent of our business is in luxury items like gold and silver plated fixtures for the bath," he says.

Paul, a member of the American Society of Architectural Consultants, plans bathrooms for decorators who do not like the bother of the technical details required in new style bathrooms.

Classic Simplicity

Though they do modern, Oriental, federal and any other style bathroom one desires, Louis XVI is stealing the play today in trend-setting New York, Paul says, mainly because of its classic simplicity. Swans, dolphins and lions head motif are likely to become tiresome after awhile but the traditional reed and ribbon motif of the Louis period withstands the ages because of its regal lines, he says. It's a safe bet — a good investment.

Handsome crystal knobs are used on faucets and bathroom cabinets. In gold plate, silver plate, chrome or brass one can find hexagon, pine cone, melon and other good design. Pewter fixtures are very popular.

Even the glass, soap, toothbrush, tissue holders and medicine chest cabinets that are recessed have handsome moldings in bamboo, wreath, greek key and reed and ribbon design. And in some instances these same designs are carried right into the wash basin.

"Who would have thought a few years ago that our catalog companies would be selling decorated wash basins? It looked like a high style item that would have limited appeal. But the demand shows the interest in dressing up the bathroom," Paul says.

Designs in the basins include fleur de lis, butterfly, bow knot, Greek key, scroll and wedding band designs.

Marble Tops

Sink cabinets are stock items or custom made. Many have marble tops, and in many instances match marble floors. Marble tubs and back splashes are popular. One tub ordered from Paul and his brother, who are partners, was from a solid hunk of marble that had been chiseled at a cost of $5,000.

People will spend anything for the luxury items available today in decorative hardware. One Texan ordered solid gold light switches in a Louis pattern. He bought 15 at $650 apiece.

"Everyone has better taste, and in some instances they discover it by letting price be their guide. If there are two items, they will choose the more expensive one, so we've had to take on better quality merchandise in the last years."

Paul has 4,000 items in stock, many of foreign origin. He picked up some handsome Spanish doorknobs for a relatively low price, gave them the usual markup but couldn't sell them because people were suspicious of the low price, he says.

They have a complete line of items that are chic for small bathrooms. In that cast the lavatory is put on legs rather than embedded in a decorative cabinet. The legs give the illusion of more space, he says. They have ladder-style towel holders that protrude only about two inches when fastened to the wall.

Hospital Room Rate Increased

KAUKAUNA—Room and board charges at the Kaukauna Community Hospital will be increased Oct. 1, according to Mrs. Bernice Elliott, hospital administrator.

The board of directors has approved raising private room rates from $17 to $20, semi-private rooms from $13 to $15 and 4-bed ward, children's cribs, rate from $12 to $14. Mrs. Elliott indicated, this was the first increase in five years and is a result of rising costs and higher salaries.

The new schedule will put the Kaukauna Hospital more in line with rate charges at surrounding institutions, noted the director.

Total Electric Living Shown In Fair Home

Open Saturday For Four-Week Public Exhibit

The concept of total electric living is embodied in the World's Fair Home, which will be open to the public by printed invitations, starting Saturday afternoon, for a period of four weeks.

Built by Victor Timm at 40 S. Meadow Dr., the home will be on display from 2 to 9 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, and from 8:30 to 9 p.m. on week days. Invitations may be obtained either at the customer service counter of Wisconsin Michigan Power Co., or at the Appleton store of H. C. Prange Co.

The home, winner of a Gold Medallion, is electrically heated and lighted, and is equipped with major electric appliances. Estimated annual heating cost for the $1,970-foot home is $365, according to Wisconsin Michigan Power Co.

"The estimate is conservative and actual heating costs may run below that figure," according to a spokesman of the Power Co., which recently announced a special reduced rate for electrically heated homes.

The living room, dining room and kitchen - dinette areas are heated with cables embedded in the ceiling. The electric heat radiates downward in an even blanket of heat throughout the room.

Heating in all rooms of the house is controlled by individual room thermostats. Humidity in the kitchen is controlled by a fan which is regulated by an automatic humidistat.

Low-level, electric baseboard heaters provide draftless comfort along outer walls, under windows and across the floor in the home's three bedrooms.

$4 Million Florida Fire In Topsoil

FLORIDA, N.Y. (AP) — A smoky, smoldering fire in 2,000 acres on onion-field topsoil has caused an estimated loss of $4 million in recently harvested onions and the earth itself.

The fire has filled this Orange County valley with acrid smoke, driving many farmers and some townspeople from their homes.

Volunteer firemen have poured tons of water on the fields, but the dry, powdery soil, parched from weeks of drought, continues to burn.

Daniel Madura, a farmer from nearby Goshen, who is also the town highway superintendent, said Friday night that 300,000 crates of onions had been burned. He put the loss at $1 million.

He said the loss in rich, black soil — once the bottom of a shallow lake — would be $3 million more.

The valley, known as the top onion-growing area in the nation, has an onion and celery crop valued at $10 million annually.

Most of the onions that have burned since the fire started several days ago were ripening in crates in the fields.

The Gold Medallion on a home is the Hallmark of electrical excellence. It's awarded to homes designed with the highest standards of total electric living!

Take Your Time When Selecting An Ideal Home

Checklist Can Be Helpful in Making Decision

It is startling but true that many who seek to purchase a home are impulse buyers succumbing to the first sight of some lovely feature such as a large tree, a fireplace or a shining new kitchen, reports the Construction Research Bureau, national clearing house for building information.

Since buying a home is the largest single expenditure in the average family's lifetime a checklist should be used in determining whether a house is worth buying. Here are a few major points you should investigate:

1. Check The Space Offered: Walk through the house from basement to attic, counting rooms, closets and storage areas. Measure each room. Make sure there are enough bedrooms for the whole family, room enough for all your possessions, and sufficient bathrooms to accommodate family needs.

2. Structural Conditions: Roof

Dole Out Home Building Projects One at a Time, Is Excellent Advice

BY VIVIAN BROWN

Dole out those home building projects one at a time, is the advice of one do-it-yourselfer.

"You should see the list of handyman projects my wife has prepared for me," he writes. She goes through all the magazines, catalogs, newspaper building sections for months and clips out everything she can find in the way of home and grounds improvements. When she has a box full of pictures, some with directions, she hands it to me, expecting that I will run right out and start building and digging."

It annoys him that she doesn't realize the labor involved, much less the planning, and he says it's because he made earlier projects look so easy.

"What she really asks me to do is become architect, builder and planner on every project. Not to mention the boodle of cash these arty projects would take. She expects me to do the job overnight on a shoestring budget, he says, and before the end of summer she'd like to have all the projects done that she has her heart set on.

Wants Shed

"She'd like a small tool shed,

4. Flooring: Are the floors even? Check to see if any of the wooden slats are loose. Are nails popping up from them?

so that lawn mower, garden tools and other outdoor work equipment could be neatly stored" (only the picture she has shown him is in an area about as large as their present house, placed in a rock and woodland setting that would have done the late architect Frank Lloyd Wright proud.)

Her rose arbor designed for a dozen plants would pale the gardens in a botanical park, he points out, and "the statuary she plans was a photograph from a museum."

At one point he offered to build a small flagstone terrace off the dining room (his own idea) but she said it was too small for a large party.

"And I really cringed when the sauna became popular, because I knew that sooner or later a picture of one would find its way into our little box. But this time, she suspected that I would blow my top, so pinned to the photograph was a note that if I could make it large enough for 10 people, we might be able to open the sauna to friends and neighbors and make it pay."

Hysterical Laughter

That idea threw him into such a fit of hysterical laughter, he says, that she didn't speak to him for a week.

There's no doubt that some women do try to keep their husbands occupied at various involved tasks which are beyond their skills, only to miss the opportunity of having the lawn mowed or a shelf put up in the kitchen.

Many men do enjoy planning and building, combining a hobby and a home project, but even those fellows get bored with the whole work idea occasionally. They'd like to enjoy porch or patio or something they've built, instead of going on to something new at the completion of each job.

Perhaps there is no more reason to expect a man who excels in his regular job — insurance man or advertising executive — than it would be to expect builders to take over their jobs and skills at a moment's notice.

Goldwater Aims His Position on Federal Budget

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater says the federal budget should be balanced, but adds, "The question of balancing the budget need not be linked with an arbitrary period of time."

The statement by the Republican presidential candidate was in answer to one of a series of questions submitted by Business Week magazine. Goldwater's replies were published in a copy-righted article in the Sept. 26 issue.

The budget problems of government in some ways parallel those confronting a business executive, Goldwater said, adding: "What it must do is to follow a steady and dependable policy, setting its spending programs and tax rates so that the budget will be in balance when the economy is prosperous and prices are stable."

"Expansionary and inflationary forces beyond that point then will produce surpluses, while recessionary and deflationary forces may produce short-lived deficits."

"These will balance out over a reasonably short period. In fact, it is possible not only to keep the debt from rising but actually to reduce it."

Outdoor Recreation Source Of Problems For Landowner

Danger of Being Sued Often Reason Behind Posted Property

Today's land must raise many billy owned by a landowner to outdoor recreation. This is a But the "invitee" is different. He has been invited onto a property by the owner, either on business or for their mutual benefit. Generally, the law requires a landowner to exercise reasonable care for an invitee's safety—a positive duty that goes beyond mere restraint from injurious acts.

The danger of being sued for injuries or damages occurring on his land is an old bugaboo of every property owner, and is often the reason behind "No Trespassing" signs on private lands.

Even major land-holding corporations, ultra-sensitive to the winds of public opinion, are often fearful of announcing that their lands are open to outdoor enthusiasts. When the subject of public recreation on industry lands is raised, lawyers usually hoist storm signals and warn of liability lawsuits. The time and money costs of such legal donnybrook are enough to make strong men tremble, whether they own a "back forty" or most of the county.

Certain Things

But whenever a man owns a fishing lake or a good squirrel timber, there are certain things he must face:

Most laws classify a person going on another's land (without paying to do so) as a trespasser, a licensee, or an invitee. The landowner's responsibility is determined in each case by the category of the visitor.

The landowner owes no responsibility to a trespasser except to refrain from willfully injuring him. The landowner may be liable, however, if the trespasser can prove the owner's intent to harm him. In most states the doctrine of "attractive nuisance" hardly applies to outdoor recreation, and it is rare that a trespasser can sue on that ground. A lake, for example, is usually considered part of the landscape and does not constitute an attractive nuisance in the same sense as a backyard swimming pool.

Permits Use

A "permittee" is one whose use of the land is permitted—either expressly or implied—by the landowner. He enters the owner's premises by permission only, and there is little legal distinction between the responsibility

Model Relief Law

This is why industry and conservationists recently combined their talents to draft a model liability relief law that has been sent to all state fish and game directors. This model law is the best yet, and can encourage worried landowners to open their lands to public recreational use. Copies of the model law are available from all state fish and game directors, and from the Conservation Department, Olin, East Alton, Ill.

Passage of this law by a state legislature will not assure the landowner against the possibility of a lawsuit, but it will make the probability of such an event rather remote. Most important of all, it will ease the fears of landowners in permitting free recreational use of their lands.

Valuable Fishing Grounds Buffalo Lake Malady Worries State Officials

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON—State fishery officials are worried about a serious malady afflicting Buffalo Lake in Marquette County, a part of the Fox River watershed and potentially one of the most valuable of the fishing grounds in central Wisconsin.

The problem is outlined in a newly published volume detailing the fishery and water recreation resources of the county, which describes what has happened to the largest body of water in the county during the last decade.

It started about 1950, when a combined explosion of the carp population in the lake and exceptionally high winds, brought about the virtual destruction of highly desirable weed beds. Carp feeding activity coupled with wind erosion within a few years destroyed nearly all vegetation and have made the waters turbid, to the detriment of a desirable fishery.

Removal Efforts

In spite of intensive carp removal efforts, the population of the species has remained comparatively high, and in combination with other factors, the carp have resulted in a continuation of poor lake conditions in succeeding years. The inventory volume suggested that a solution may not be found except for an extensive water draw-down.

The conservation department report said that Marquette County like many others can anticipate a heavily increased user demand upon its water resources from populated districts relatively distant.

In discussing public access to water recreation resources, the department surveyors noted a problem that has yet had little state-wide notice.

Islands Offer Early Opening

Deer Season on Apostle Group to Begin Oct. 15

MADISON — The Apostle Islands, with the exception of Madeline, will offer a preview of the Wisconsin big game season, beginning Oct. 15. The season runs through Nov. 29.

One deer of either sex may be taken. Bear are also legal. Last year hunters bagged 93 animals. No special permits are needed other than a valid hunting license.

The islands, best hunted in early fall, provide the challenge of remoteness, inaccessibility and varied conditions. Sportsmen are urged to carry a compass and be prepared for all types of weather.

Archers, who can hunt as early as Sept. 26, will prefer the open forests and trails on Madeline, Basswood, Otter and Stockton Islands. Transportation is available from Bayfield. Reservations can be made at the Bayfield Chamber of Commerce Tourist Information Office.

Small outboards are not recommended, but persons using personal boats should check on lake and weather conditions with the U. S. Coast Guard.

Duck Hunters Should Obtain Color Pamphlet

MADISON — Waterfowl hunters should hit the books to pin down species before they shoot this fall, according to the Wisconsin Conservation Department.

Most practical publication for the purpose is "Ducks at a Distance", a color pamphlet issued by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

With species identification and rules on "wanton waste" important again this year, Wisconsin hunters will find the pamphlet can keep them out of trouble—especially with preseason study plus practice.

The booklet illustrates fall plumage in color, identification points and characteristics of common duck species.

Free distribution to individuals will be made from the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service Office, Box 3066, Madison, 53706.

The Wisconsin Conservation Department's new $125,000 Northwest Area headquarters building in Spooner was dedicated Friday. The structure will provide office space for 32 workers. (AP Wirephoto)

Bluegills Sent To Military Unit at Naha, Okinawa

NAHA, Okinawa — If a group of American military personnel on this large island south of Japan have their way, U.S.-type fresh water game fishing will be established in the relatively near future.

First step was accomplished this week, when the military personnel claimed a wriggling shipment of 7,000 bluegill fingerlings on arrival of a big Northwest Orient Airlines fan-jet from the United States.

Northwest had picked up the small fish, housed in plastic containers of water in Billings, Mont., and transferred them to the Orient-bound jet at Seattle-Tacoma, for a nonstop flight to Tokyo and then on to Okinawa. The shipment originated at a Miles City, Mont., hatchery, according to William Picou, Northwest's Okinawa manager.

"The sunfish were planted on the premises of a rod and gun club on Okinawa," Picou said. "Further plans call for at least one shipment of bass, with others to follow depending upon the success of the trans-Pacific transplanting."

Price for Seedlings Will Remain the Same

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Despite a slight increase in the cost of production, the forest tree seedlings offered for sale by the state conservation department next year will be sold for the same price as charged this year. The department explained that there has been some drop in demand for the tree planting stock, and that a price increase was ordered a year ago.

20 Gauge Gun Ideal For Hunting Grouse Or Shifty Woodcock

Many Hunters Handicapped by Heavier Weapons

If you're like most hunters, more than once you've blamed your gun and shells for a string of misses and an empty game bag.

Again, if you're like most hunters who try ruffed grouse and woodcock a couple times a year, you are probably justified in your complaint. Not that there's anything wrong with the arms and ammunition. But the majority of hunters handicap themselves no-end with the shotgun and shells they take into the upland coverts.

The most popular shotgun sold, regardless of brand, is a 12 gauge, with a 28-32 inch barrel, bored full choke and it's crammed with the most powerful load the hunter can obtain. This is fine for waterfowl hunting for the most part and for cornfield pheasant shooting. But it won't get you the price of admission on the partridge ridges and roads or the tag alder jungles that hold woodcock.

Dense Cover

For the most enjoyment and the best scores when hunting dense upland cover, the hunter needs an entirely different weapon than that "long shootin' smokepole" he so highly prizes.

Ruffed grouse and woodcock hunting are sports which don't require the maximum of everything when it comes to gauge and load. A 20 gauge is ideal. In fact, if a hunter worries about getting enough shot out there, he can buy shells that will soup up a 20's performance to compare with the light loads offered in 12 gauge. If he wants to save money he can still do the job with the lighter cheaper loads. Nor are the 28 gauge and the .410 bore out of place in the grouse and woodcock cover. They can do the job.

Lighter gauge shotguns are quicker to mount and barrels of 24 to 26 inches swing out there faster to blot that bird quicker. Speed is vital in grouse and woodcock shooting, rather than careful leading. Nor should an upland gun have a bore tighter than modified with improved cylinder or skeet borings rating near ideal. Even a cylinder bore is much better than full choke.

Not Hard to Kill

Birds get up close. They are not hard to kill. The hunter wants a spread pattern, not a tight, dense one for two reasons. The more restricted the pattern, the harder the bird is to hit and if he is centered there isn't much meat left for the table.

Double guns, whether over-and-under or side-by-side are shorter and generally better balanced than pumps or autoloaders, which will aid in getting on a bird faster and more accurately. But this is a relatively minor point since new autoloaders and pumps now being marketed are far cry from the popular "corn shuckers" of the past.

But, you say, I can't afford another gun. Is there anything I can do with my 30 inch barrel, 12 gauge that will help my score on partridge and woodcock? Fortunately, there is.

Least Expensive

The least expensive thing to do is to buy a couple boxes of specially designed shotgun shells variously called "brush" or "spreader" loads. By judicious placement of wadding in the shell's body, a shell has been manufactured that will "open up" even a full choke pattern, giving a spottier but more spread pattern.

There are a number of muzzle devices on the market which may be attached, permanently, to the muzzle of a shotgun, allowing the choke to be changed by the turn of a knob or the insertion of a tube. When they are installed, the length of the barrel can be shortened.

Thirdly, you can buy a second barrel for the shotgun you already own, a shorter one with less choke restriction. This won't change the lines, feel or appearance of your favorite gun and very seldom will you find any kind of shooting that one of the two barrels you own, bored improved cylinder and full, can't handle.

Quick Handling

But none of these remedies will do much about the matter of weight, or both shells and gun which are important if you hike all day, balance and quick handling. So if you need an excuse to convince your wife that you do need a second shotgun, use those arguments.

Anticipating that you will come out second best in this debate, however, here's one more tip. When buying shells for your 12 gauge, if you decide to use it with no modification, get the target or field loads, in No. 7 1/2, 8 or even 9 shot in the case of woodcock. These pattern wonderfully, cost less, have less recoil and by using the small shot sizes you can get just as many pellets out there as with the super-duper loads with coarser shot.

Sierra Club Evaluating Wild Rivers

Goal Is to Get Protection by State Legislation

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The John Muir Chapter of the Sierra Club has undertaken an evaluation survey of the state's remaining wild and scenic streams, with the objective of sponsoring legislation to protect more of them from impoundments and other activities that will interfere with their natural condition.

The declared goal of the project is to obtain legislative protections of the kind already in effect for a section of the Wolf River in north central Wisconsin and the Brule River in Douglas County where artificial obstructions are specifically prohibited.

The club said in its announcement here that its survey data will be used "to develop a sound program of action for the preservation of wild rivers." Club members are making their personal surveys on the most desirable streams by canoe.

Non-members are welcome to participate in the canoe expeditions and the sponsorship of the legislation expected to follow, said Gretchen Seikel of Madison, secretary of the chapter.

The Sierra Club, a national organization, was founded by the famous John Muir, naturalist, in 1892 to help in the exploration, enjoyment and protection of parks, wilderness, waters, forests and wildlife.

Neckbands on Geese Should be Reported

MADISON — Sportsmen who spot geese wearing orange or white plastic collars around their necks should report sightings to the Conservation Department.

Some 400 Canada geese were marked with the plastic neckbands last summer as part of a research experiment at Seney National Wildlife refuge at Seney, Mich.

Waterfowl specialists would like information on the number of collared geese seen, the number of noncollared birds with them, their activity, location, and date of observation. Each collar has an identification number which is also needed if it is possible to obtain.

Information on birds with neckbands should be sent to Wildlife Research, Wisconsin Conservation Department, Box 450, Madison, Wisconsin 53701.

Veteran of State Service Will Retire

MADISON — Roy B. Kelly, a veteran state forest ranger who participated in the development of the forest protection in northeastern Wisconsin when he was the ranger at the Wausaukee station in the 1930's, has retired from state service. Kelly for the last dozen years has served as state forest ranger at the Wisconsin Dells station.

Cooperative Plan to Improve Campground

MADISON — Improvement of the Lake Metonga, Forest County, campground on a cooperative basis with the county government has been authorized by the state conservation department. The department said it would contribute about half of an expected $1,820 cost for a development of the recreational site as drafted by its park planning section.

Harvey Olson Named To Advisory Group

MADISON — Harvey Olson of Ellison Bay has been named to the commercial fishing advisory committee of the state conservation commission.

The commission has also announced the reappointment of E. W. Bodin of Bayfield, Frank Korchak of Marinette, Leland LaFond of Milwaukee and C. G. Wenniger of Algoma.

Notre Dame Wallops Wisconsin, 31 to 7

Irish Defense and Huarte's Passing Make Parseghian Debut a Big Success

BY DAVE O'HARA

MADISON (AP)—Notre Dame launched its bid to regain national football prestige under new coach Ara Parseghian by crushing Wisconsin 31-7 Saturday with a hard-hitting defense and the sharpshooting of unheralded quarterback John Huarte.

The Irish, who lured Parseghian away from Northwestern after a dismal 2-7 record last season, stormed into a 13-0 half-time lead on Huarte's 61-yard scoring pass to Jack Snow and Ken Ivan's field goals from 31 and 30 yards.

Wisconsin managed to mount its lone scoring surge at the outset of the second half as Hal Brandt broke away from a tremendous rush and passed to Jimmy Jones for a 45-yard maneuver.

Notre Dame, which grudgingly surrendered a single yard on the ground in the first two periods, promptly took charge again. Denied an additional three points on Ivan's wide field goal attempt, the Irish pushed the Badgers back, forcing a weak punt.

Roar for TD
Starting on the Wisconsin 29, the Irish roared to a touchdown, Joe Kantor bulging one yard into the end zone on the first play of the final quarter. Huarte, a senior who saw only 46 minutes of action last year, directed a 45-yard touchdown the next time his mates had the ball. Bill Wolski capped the advance by diving over his right side from two yards out.

After a pass interception, its third in the game, Notre Dame moved 87 yards for another touchdown in the closing minutes. Huarte, who pitches the ball overhand or sidearm with equal accuracy, fired a strike to Snow for the final 42 yards.

Notre Dame's offensive and defensive lines outplayed the Wisconsin counterparts by a wide margin as the Badgers suffered their first defeat after an opening 17-7 victory over Kansas State.

The Irish forward wall was tremendous in driving into the Wisconsin backfield and the Badgers finished with a net loss of 51 yards by rushing. Notre Dame gained 149 yards on the ground and added 270 in the air. The Huarte to Snow combination connected nine times for 217 yards. Overall, Huarte hit on 15 of 24 attempts.

Completes 13 Passes
Brandt hit on 13 of 26 attempts for 234 yards. However, the southpaw quarterback spent most of the time trying to elude onrushing tacklers and lost a total of 55 yards in nine times he was forced to hang onto the ball.

The futility of the Badger rushing attack was pointed up by game statistics which showed fullback Ralph Kurek with just seven yards in as many carries, and Carl Silvestri with eight in as many tries.

The partisan crowd of 64,398 filled Camp Randall Stadium. Skies were overcast and rain began to fall at the opening kickoff.

Wisconsin stopped Notre Dame on the Badgers 33. Three plays later Kurek fumbled and later a pass interception set up Ivan's field goal against the 24-mile per hour wind from 31 yards out with just six seconds to play in the opening quarter.

With the help of a pass interference and roughing the kicker penalty against Notre Dame, the Badgers marched from their 20 to a first down on the Irish 12 midway through the second period. The Irish defense then stiffened and Ron Yates' attempted field goal from the 28 was wide.

61-Yarder to Snow
Notre Dame picked up a first down at its 39 and Huarte then unloaded his 61-yard bomb to Snow who took the ball over his shoulder after getting behind Dave Fronek and Larry Fraser at the 26 and raced into the end zone.

Braves Beat Phils, 6-4, on Carty Triple

Philadelphia Leads by Half Game After Losing Sixth Straight

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Rico Carty tripled across three runs in the ninth inning, boosting Milwaukee to a 6-4 victory over floundering Philadelphia that cut the Phillies' shrinking National League lead to one-half game.

The loss, their sixth straight and eighth in nine games, chopped another game off the Phillies' lead over the Cincinnati Reds, who won their seventh straight contest with a 6-1 triumph over New York.

The defeat also pulled the Reds even with Philadelphia in the loss column. Philadelphia, which held a 6½-game lead last Sunday, has six games remaining, Cincinnati seven.

Bases Are Loaded
The Braves trailed 4-3 going into the ninth. But Hank Aaron and Eddie Mathews singled off Bobby Shantz, who had snuffed out a Milwaukee rally in the previous inning. Pinch hitter Frank Bolling then hit a ground-throw to Ruben Amaro, whose throw to second was dropped by Tony Taylor, loading the bases. Carty followed with his triple to center field, scoring Aaron, Mathews and Bolling.

One out later, Mike de la Hoz drove a fly ball to left field, which first was ruled a hit. An argument ensued, however, and the umpires changed the call to an out. Carty, who had come home on the play then was called out for leaving the base too soon on the fly out.

The Braves announced at the time they were playing the game under protest because of the Phillies in order.

Warren Spahn pitched the ninth for the Braves and retired the Phillies in order.

Lienhard Scores Both TDs in 14-0 Win

Oshkosh Downs AHS to Tie for Lead

BY TERRY GALVIN

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Sheer, brute strength, offensively and defensively, powered the Oshkosh Indians to a 14-0 Fox River Valley Conference victory over the Appleton High School Terrors on rain-soaked, wind-swept Goodland Field Saturday.

The win boosted the Indians into a share of the FRVC lead with Sheboygan South with 2-0 marks. The win was the third overall for Oshkosh in three games. Appleton is 0-3 on the season.

Fullback Rog Lienhard, 220 power-packed pounds, scored twice for the Indians on off-tackle smashes of seven and five yards in the second half.

The ball-control, rushing style of the Indians completely dominated offensive activity throughout the contest. Oshkosh ran 78 plays from scrimmage, of which three were passes, as compared to 24 rushing and passing plays by the Terrors.

The "three yards and a cloud of dust" attack, borne by the Harold Schumacher-coached Oshkosh teams, proved especially effective under the inclement weather conditions. Oshkosh averaged just over 4.2 yards-per-play (from scrimmage) with 331 total yards.

The Ade Dillon-coached Terrors displayed defensive courage in the face of overwhelming odds in the first half as the teams retired at intermission in a scoreless tie.

The Terror offense never threatened in the game. In fact, the Terrors mustered a lone first down as compared to 20 for Oshkosh. AHS picked up 23 yards on the ground, six in the second half while adding another 13 through the air.

AHS received the opening, on-side kickoff on its 40-yard line. Malcolm (Mac) McIntyre bulled up the middle for three yards. Mark Tepper was stopped at the line of scrimmage and an incomplete pass forced an AHS punt, the first of six by Tepper.

Thus, the offensive pattern the Terrors were to follow throughout the game, was established.

Oshkosh marched to the AHS 23 where an intercepted pass by Gary Volkman stopped the Oshkosh teams, proved especially effective under the inclement weather conditions. Oshkosh averaged just over 4.2 yards-per-play (from scrimmage) with 331 total yards.

This time, with a third and three facing Oshkosh on the Appleton 8-yard line, Pat Gendron and Ron Plamann teamed to dump Greg Weigandt for no gain. The AHS defense tightened again with fourth and three, and Weigandt was dumped for a yard loss with AHS gaining possession.

Gendron halted another Indiana threat, intercepting a Bruce Erickson pass, shortly before intermission on the AHS 10-yard line.

The Terrors kicked to open the second half and Jim Dunsirn's boot sailed into the end zone. Oshkosh, taking possession on the 20, displayed amazing ball control as it marched 95 yards (one penalty of 15 yards en route) in 20 rushing plays.

The march accounted for the first 11 minutes of the third period.

Lienhard's 7-yard, off-tackle jaunt capped the drive. Junior quarterback Bruce Erickson converted for a 7-0 lead. The Terrors took the ensuing kick on the 26 and, after two incomplete passes, mustered their lone first down of the afternoon. A Terry Soley-to-Gendron pass accounted for 19 yards and in the new series Soley hit Gendron on another pass, but this time the Terrors lost 10 on the play.

Oshkosh mounted its second scoring drive from its 33. Eleven plays later (all rushing) with the big gainer coming on Weigandt's 22-yard romp, Lienhard crossed the goal from five yards out. Erickson's conversion made it 14-0.

Weigandt and Lienhard carried the brunt of the Oshkosh attack. The former rushed 30 times for 130 yards. Lienhard picked up 134 paces in 29 trips.

Defensive standouts, despite adversity, were the Terrors' Dennis DeCock, Plamann, Gendron, Gary McIntyre and Volkman.

Jays Beat Rockets

BY GEORGE MANCOSKY

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEENAH—Menasha High School punched over a touchdown early in the second quarter and then its defense went to work to halt powerful Neenah, 7-0, in their annual intercity meeting Saturday afternoon. The game was played in strong winds and, at times, a heavy downpour.

The triumph was the third straight of the season for Coach Tom Weede's Bluejays and their third shutout as well. It was Neenah's first defeat after two one-sided victories.

It also was the initial Menasha win over its long-time rival in six years and marked the first time it had defeated the Rockets at home since Bill Volkman booted the dramatic field goal to win, 16-14, in 1953.

The Bluejays took their touchdown lead into the dressing room at the intermission and many spectators wondered if history would repeat itself for they led, 7-0, at the same time last year and succumbed under a 4-touchdown Neenah assault in the second half.

Defense Shines
But the Menashans weren't to be denied as their defense arose to every occasion and the Rockets didn't get inside their 20-yard stripe all day.

Weede only used 14 players, except for punts and kickoffs, and most of the Menashans went both ways without relief. Dick Sorensen again was outstanding. He carried for an unofficial 140 yards, broke up several passes and made one crunching tackle which jarred the ball loose. Teammate Dick Slattery recovered and the play halted a potential Neenah TD drive late in the game.

For years, ball control has been one of Neenah's strong suits but the Jays, especially in the first half, beat them at its own game. The Rockets only had possession for six plays and two punts in the first quarter and for 11 plays in the second. They were limited to three first downs in the half and two came on passes in the fading seconds.

The Menashans moved from their 45 to the Rocket 24 the first time they had the ball, were stopped and with the strong wind at his back, Paul Blohm tried a field goal from the 38 but it was short and rolled into the end zone.

Succa Scores
They weren't to be denied the next time and, taking over on their own 39 after a punt, went 61 yards in 13 plays plus a penalty. Sorensen was the big ground gainer. From the 16, he went to the three in three plays.

Neenah drew a penalty for off-side and quarterback Bob Succa took it in on a keeper with 8:20 left in the half. Succa also ran over the point from kick formation, barely edging into the end zone.

On the first play after the kickoff, Rocket fullback Karl Pennau broke through the middle for 51 yards and an apparent score but Neenah was called for clipping on the 30 and eventually surrendered the ball.

Menasha moved down to the hosts' 16 but a pass interception ended that drive. Neenah completed two passes to the Menasha 37 just before the half but two others fell incomplete.

Miss First Down
The Jays missed a first down by a foot on the Rocket 13 in the downpour in the third stanza and they stopped the Rock-

Xavier Upsets Cadets To Record First Grid Victory of Campaign

Gunderson Scores All Hawk TDs in 19-7 Win Over Premontre

BY RALPH MUELLER

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

It was like old times here Saturday night as the Xavier Hawks returned to their winning ways by upsetting the Premontre Cadets, 19-7, at Goodland Field.

The "Torchy" Clark-coached Hawks controlled the ball in all but three plays in the first period and on 28 of the first 34 plays in the game.

They struck fast, driving 55 yards after returning the opening kickoff from their own 25 to the 41. Larry Van Dyke ripped through for six yards on the first play from scrimmage, and the backs ate up small chunks of ground with halfback Gary Gunderson going the final six yards for the score.

Gunderson was to score twice more. He tallied from the six in the second period and from the three in the final stanza. The fleet "Gundy" picked up 119 yards in 20 carries in the contest for nearly a 6-yard average.

Drives 85 Yards
The second Xavier TD followed an 85-yard drive. Dennis Mannebach, who missed placements after the first and final touchdowns, made his second kick good.

The final drive went 73 yards with all the plays on the ground. Xavier tried only three passes in the entire contest with Gunderson throwing two on the option and Paul Rechner attempting the other and completing it to Mike Heideman.

The Cadets got rolling on only two occasions. Late in the first half, they went from their own 22 to the Hawk 49, but were forced to punt. Late in the final quarter, they took over on the Xavier 49 and scored just two plays later.

Tim Brunette scampered 26 yards and followed with a 20-yard jaunt to paydirt. Tom Jones split the uprights for the extra point.

Van Dyke ripped off 27 yards in seven carries and Paul Springer gained 58 yards in 13 attempts to help Gunderson with the ground attack. Brunette picked up 70 yards in 10 rushes and Vandebush gained 38 yards in the same number of attempts for Premontre.

It was Xavier's first victory after three losses this season. Despite the slightly wet conditions, only one fumble was recorded, that by Premontre.

Xavier picked up 11 first downs while Premontre had six. Xavier rolled up 241 yards on the ground and the Cadets gained 148.

have some success in carrying it out.

The Alliance for Progress has played an important part in helping to develop Colombia's economy, with major projects in public housing, schools and public health.

In a similar interview two years ago, Valencia was sharply critical of delays in implementing the Alliance projects, but Saturday he praised the program as "the greatest initiative ever advanced by the United States for maintaining and improving its relations with Latin America."

"The alliance has had difficulties in Colombia as in other countries," he said, "but they are surely being overcome. My feeling is that the creation of this program marked President Kennedy as the greatest contemporary statesman of the entire hemisphere."

Nation Awaits Warren Report

— because it was carried out in full view of dozens of police officials, end untold hundreds of thousands of television watchers. But, again, the question of whether Ruby acted alone is one for which the commission is expected to have an answer.

Elsewhere in the 800 pages of the report, the commission is expected to express its opinions on the protective system in effect at the time of Kennedy's death and perhaps have recommendations for the future in this field.

National Obligation
In a letter to Warren at the time the report was submitted, Johnson expressed confidence that the commission "has been guided throughout by a determination to find and to tell the whole truth of these terrible events."

"This is our obligation to the good name of the United States and to all men everywhere who respect our nation — and above all to the memory of President Kennedy."

With the submission of its report, the special commission goes out of existence. Any further investigations will be in the hands of permanent agencies.

The commission is a bipartisan one, although by formal party affiliation the Republicans outnumber the Democrats five to two.

In addition to Warren, other Republicans are Sen. John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky and Rep. Gerald Ford of Michigan. Allen W. Dulles, former chief of the Central Intelligence Agency, and John J. McCloy, New York financier and former high commissioner to Germany.

The Democrats are Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia and Rep. Hale Boggs of Louisiana.

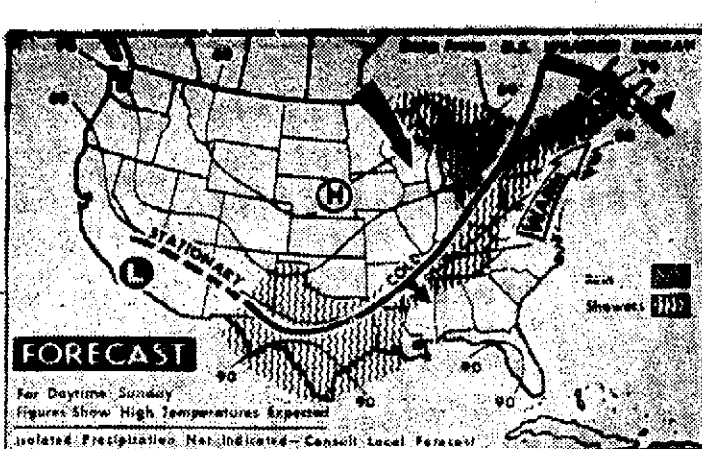

Johnson Resting in Texas After Making Tour of 6 States

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson relaxed Saturday on his home acres after a three-state tour in which he mixed horsemanship, statesmanship and stump-style politicking.

Johnson displayed his horsemanship at Oklahoma City, mounting a palomino quarter horse at the state fair and cantering around in front of several thousand people with one hand on the reins, the other waving a Texas hat in the air, Buffalo Bill style.

The statesmanship came earlier, at El Paso, Tex., where Johnson greeted President Adolfo Lopez Mateos of Mexico in celebration of a treaty ending a Rio Grande border dispute.

And, depending on how you define the word, politicking occupied all or part of the rest of Johnson's day as he mixed with cheering crowds and delivered speeches in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

SHOWERS AND THUNDERSHOWERS are forecast today to extend from the southern plains into the lower Mississippi Valley. Showers also will be prevalent from the upper Mississippi Valley into the Ohio and Tennessee Valley and into portions of the north Atlantic states. Milder temperatures are expected for the Atlantic coastal states and parts of the central plateau, while cooler temperatures are forecast over the plains and Mississippi Valley. (AP Wirephoto Map)

Hoover Says Race Not Cause of Riots in North

N.J.; Dixmoor, Ill.; Philadelphia; Seaside, Ore., and Hampton Beach, N. H.

Hoover said a common characteristic of the riots was "senseless attack on all constituted authority without purpose or object."

Some of the riots often were incited by adult troublemakers, Hoover said, but the "mob violence was dominated by the acts of youths ranging in age up to the middle twenties, variously characterized by responsible people as 'school drop-outs,' 'Young punks,' 'common hoodlums,' and 'drunken kids.'"

Publicity Factor
Hoover said the presence of reporters and television cameras at the riots "provided an opportunity for self-seeking individuals to publicize wild charges on television and radio and in the press."

Thus additional incitement was provided to rioters, Hoover said, and others were attracted to the scene.

Hoover took notice of what he termed frequent charges that police excesses contributed to some of the riots. "After a diligent inquiry by the FBI, he said, it turned out that 'in all of the cities, the police were generally restrained in their conduct even in the face of continuous insults, barrages of rocks, bottles, Molotov cocktails and fire bombs.'"

Indeed, the restraint of individual police officers in the face of such provocation appears to be remarkable and was widely praised by the press and public in the cities involved.

Few Complaints to FBI
Hoover said the FBI received few complaints from individuals regarding violations of civil rights — for instance, through police brutality.

He suggested to the President that local police organizations could use better training in riot control methods because, with their lack of experience, "it took many hours and in some instances days to mobilize enough force locally or from outside to cope with the riots."

In each of the seven major city riots, with the exception of New York, violence was "an escalation from a minor incident," similar to those which happen hundreds of times in most of the communities involved.

But for some reason, Hoover said, "there suddenly occurred a rupture of the cords that normally bind people to decent conduct and respect for law and the rights of their fellow citizens."

Policemen Targets
In each instance in the cities, he said, the rioting germinated from an incident of violent interference with a policeman on the scene.

As for the riots at the ocean resorts of Seaside and Hampton Beach, Hoover said they involved groups made up predominantly of young white persons celebrating the Labor Day weekend. The two riots brought 256 arrests.

He said the riots were "not the innocent exuberance of youth but were persistent, prolonged and violent."

The individuals involved, he said, "ranged from youths in their late teens, whose vacation was coming to an end, to toughs and other hoodlums in their middle twenties whose conduct indicated a purpose to make trouble and profit by it."

Hoover had an endorsement for Johnson's antipoverty program as he dwelt on the "social and economic conditions in which much of the Negro population lives." He termed these "demoralizing."

The FBI chief blamed what he termed "the breakdown of respect for law and order among young people" in part of "an immunity to public exposure for serious offenses and often the absence of punishment of any kind."

Young people — especially lawless ones — "are well informed of their privileged condition," a factor which has encouraged the growth of contempt for law, Hoover said.

Johnson, on receiving the Hoover report, issued a statement from the LBJ Ranch in Texas in which he said his administration "feels strongly that this must be a society of law and order in which citizens live by recognized rules of conduct."

To that end, the President said, "we not only enforce federal acts but cooperate at all levels of government to assure that civil peace shall be maintained."

Attackers May Face Air Chase Over Red China are designed to protect the sea flank of the anti-Communist forces in South Viet Nam. They would, for example, make it impossible for the Reds to launch a major landing operation against South Viet Nam. And they are supposed to keep watch on the flow of supplies from the north to Communist guerrillas in the south by way of the gulf.

But "in almost all cases only massive and vigorous police action or the arrival of state police or the National Guard finally brought about a termination of the riots and the restoration of law and order," Hoover said.

Only in the New York City riots was the escalation not immediate, he said. It was two days before the storm clouds moved in after a white policeman fatally shot a Negro youth who, he said, came at him with a knife.

Johnson's Republican opponent for the presidency, Sen. Barry Goldwater, has sought to make street violence a campaign issue and insisted that the federal government should contribute to its eradication.

Hoover said in most communities, respected Negro and other civil leaders, often at considerable personal risk, tried to dilute the riots.

Rich Children Should See Conditions of Poor, Educator Says

NEW YORK (AP) — Children in rich, white suburbs are being culturally deprived by their isolation from poor people, says a New York educator.

Dr. Harold Taylor, former president of Sarah Lawrence College, said Tuesday some wealthy suburbs are being made into "closed communities of a separate class of citizens."

Their children, he told a meeting of the Public Education Association of School Volunteers, "learn to believe that this is the natural condition of man and too often go through life with a class attitude ingrained in their minds as a byproduct of their education."

"They are the new culturally deprived," he said.

Mundt Declares Report on Estes Campaign Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., said Saturday it is inevitable that a Senate investigation report on operations of Billy Sol Estes, Texas promoter now in bankruptcy, will be a factor in this year's election campaign.

The report by the Senate rackets committee is scheduled for release next week. Mundt is one of the two Republicans who joined four Democrats in unanimous recommendations.

"These unanimous findings will be sharply critical of Agriculture Department and other officials who aided Billy Sol Estes in his frauds," Mundt told newsmen.

"It is a strong report," the South Dakota senator said. He added that it will not bring comments of whitewash, such as

Policeman Saves Baby From Strangulation

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — A policeman on a coffee break Friday stepped into a donut shop, where he noticed a baby choking and turning blue.

Patrolman George Platfoot immediately tried to dislodge an obstruction in the 18-month-old girl's throat. When he failed, he ran to his patrol car outside and turned on the siren.

That did it. The frightened child began to cry, disgorged the obstruction and began breathing again, much to the mother's relief.

At Anaheim Hospital attendants said the baby was suffering from double pneumonia and would have died except for Platfoot's ingenuity. She was later reported recovering.

Bob Griese Scores Two Touchdowns In 17-0 Victory

LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Bob Griese, sophomore Purdue quarterback from Evansville, Ind., scored two touchdowns, kicked a 36-yard field goal and converted two extra points Saturday in a 17-0 victory over Ohio University's out-manned Bobcats.

Griese rounded out his college football debut by completing eight of 13 passes for 119 yards in spite of rain that left the new Ross-Ade field so spongy that half-time band maneuvers were canceled.

Ohio U. Gained only 93 yards altogether, both rushing and passing, and never penetrated the Purdue 40-yard line. Purdue gained 207 yards rushing and 150 passing.

Junior end Bob Hadrick helped spotlight Griese's performance with some magnificent catches, grabbing seven passes for 83 yards.

Gordon Teter, junior right halfback, picked up 82 yards for Purdue in 19 carries and caught two passes for 42 yards

The Cardinals got back in the game with 9:53 left to play as quarterback Dick Kluge scored from two yards out.

With 48 seconds to go, Oshkosh's Norb Stuaeder intercepted a pass and ran 42 yards for a touchdown. Larry Cranberg kicked the extra point.

After the kickoff, it took UW-M just three plays to cover 66 yards for its final TD. Kluge passed to Tom Myszewski for 11 yards and the score with 17 seconds left.

Jaeger completed seven of 17 passes and was the Titans' rushing leader. Kluge completed eight of 14. The game was played on a windy, drizzly night.

The Titans now have a 2-1 record. UW-M is 1-2.

Ruffed Grouse Season Opens Hunting Results Good Despite Bad Weather

BY JIM HARP
Post-Crescent Outdoor Editor

SHAWANO — Blustery winds and intermittent rain failed to dampen the enthusiasm of Wisconsin hunters who took to the woodlots for the statewide opening of the ruffed grouse season Saturday.

For those who persisted through the showers, noisy woods conditions and heavy cover the results were generally good.

The area northwest of here was spotted with hunters but pressure was not as heavy as usual for an opening day. For the most part, hunters sought out their own favorite spots and more or less avoided bunching up in any one sector.

Heavy Downpour
Our party of four took to the woods about 8:30 a.m. and when a heavy downpour chased us to the car for the last time at 2 in the afternoon we had a respectable take of seven ruffed grouse, six woodcock and three rabbits.

In addition, a number of the fleet-winged woodcock managed to outmaneuver us, but it was the cottontails that caused the greatest difficulty. Cover near the ground was extremely thick and the rabbits offered only quick-shot targets before they were out of sight. Heavy foliage on the trees also made for some trick shooting on the grouse and woodcock but we were far more consistent on the birds.

The high winds Saturday made for extremely noisy conditions in the woods and consequently as weather worsened in the early afternoon the birds were sitting much tighter. This offered a better chance for the gunner as birds consistently got up only a few feet away giving the hunter a chance to get a line on the bird before it was out of range.

Creek Bottoms
Hunters going out for the first part of the season would do well to hunt along creek bottoms and low wet areas if they want an opportunity to go after the sporty woodcock. These little speed merchants like the wet areas and seem to be available in good numbers this season.

Grouse also appear to be available in as high a number as last season, or even better. When a few killing frosts knock more leaves off the trees and underbrush the rabbit hunting also will improve.

Woods and low areas are extremely wet because of recent rains and those going should be sure to have a good pair of boots along to insure dry feet throughout the day.

Other honor counts were hit by Don LeNoble, 564; Rog Vander Wyl, 553, and Orville Evers, 551.

Tony Hietpas rolled a 559 set in the Heart of Valley League at Little Chute. Rog Dercks hit a 567, and Ron Beattie had 559.

Helen Eiting rapped games of 200 and 215 to lead action in the Hollandtown Women's Loop at Van Abel's, Hollandtown.

Illini Hand California 20-14 Setback

Custardo Engineers 96-Yard TD Drive For Winning Score

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Quarterback Fred Custardo engineered a 96-yard scoring drive and counted the next two touchdowns himself Saturday as defending Big Ten champion Illinois barely outlasted California 20-14.

With less than a minute to play, Cal quarterback Craig Morton completed what appeared to be a touchdown pass to Jerry Bradley, only to have the reception ruled out of the end zone.

On the final play of the game Morton completed a pass to Jack Schraub on the Illinois four as the gun boomed to the dismay of most of the crowd of 45,000.

Illinois' smashing fullback Jim Grabowski powered 18 yards for the opening touchdown in the second quarter. Custardo twice went over from the one in the second half.

The junior quarterback from Melrose Park, Ill., also kicked two conversions as the Rose Bowl champions opened their 1964 campaign.

It took all of that as Cal almost pulled it out with Morton completing 22 of 32 passes for 34 yards.

Illinois built a 14-0 lead early in the third quarter when Custardo punched over on five plays after George Donnelly had recovered a fumble by Tom Relles at Cal's 43.

Grabowski, star of the Illini's Rose Bowl victory last Jan. 1, carried twice for 29 yards in that

Fox Lutheran Nips Northwestern, 6-0

Gary Buss Runs 91 Yards for Touchdown in Second Quarter

BY TIM PETERMANN

WATERTOWN — Jeff Volkman and Ron Sager shone defensively, and Gary Buss racked up 118 yards rushing as Fox Valley Lutheran High School edged the Northwestern Preps, 6-0, Saturday in a game that was plagued by a continuous drizzle.

It was a tight defensive battle as both teams had only 239 total yards and were limited to five first downs each. Each team intercepted one pass—Virgil Vogel for Northwestern and John Hartwig for Fox Lutheran.

Each team fumbled several times, but FVL managed to recover its own fumbles and Northwestern's were recovered by the Foxes' Buss, Sager, and John Mueller.

Late in the third quarter FVL again threatened after taking over on the Preps' 31. The Foxes moved to the 25 where Brian Erickson threw a touchdown pass to Lee Kiepkie, but it was called back by penalty and the Foxes were unable to score after that. Neither team was able to move from then on.

The Foxes evened their record at 2-2. The game was the first of the season for Northwestern.

North Carolina Hands Spartans 21-15 Defeat

MSU Threatens In Final Period; Talbot Stars

CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — Super-sophomore Danny Talbot sneaked over for two touchdowns and directed a third scoring drive Saturday to lead North Carolina to a 21-15 football victory over a Michigan State team that almost pulled the game out in the closing minutes.

Talbot plagued the Spartans with running and passing which netted 129 yards and appeared to put the game beyond control of the Big Ten visitors.

In the last period, Michigan State, making its first start of the season, shook off its lethargy, stormed across for two touchdowns, and threatened to score twice more.

It took two pass interceptions deep in North Carolina territory to stop the Spartans.

Pass Intercepted

Talbot's first pass in the opening minute was intercepted and Michigan State had the ball on the North Carolina 36.

But North Carolina held for downs and for the first three periods was by far the superior team.

Talbot climaxed a 61-yard, 12-play drive with a touchdown from the two-yard line in the second period. In the third quarter, his runs and passes set up a one-yard touchdown plunge by halfback Ken Willard at the end of a 69-yard push.

Early in the final period, Talbot again danced over, this time from one yard out to cap an 11-play advance of 54 yards.

Faced with a rout, Michigan State thundered back to score twice within five minutes.

Clint Jones raced 42 yards for the first Spartan score and they added two points when Harry Ammon passed to Dick Gordan. Less than four minutes later, the Spartans scored again, this time speeding 53 yards in four plays. The touchdown came on an 11-yard pass from Steve Juday to Gene Washington.

Georgia Tech '11' Blanks Miami

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech unleashed a pair of fleet halfbacks who cracked a tough Miami defense and carried the Yellow Jackets to a 20-0 football victory Saturday.

Terry Haddock and Johnny Gresham set up two first half field goals and two fourth quarter touchdowns.

Haddock carried 10 times for 84 yards and caught three passes for 20 more, while Gresham juggled the ball 11 times for 83 yards and caught four passes for 65 yards.

Parseghian Lauds Spirit, Aerial Game in Irish Win

MADISON (AP) — Ara Parseghian enjoyed all 60 minutes of his debut Saturday as the head football coach of Notre Dame, but the second half of the 31-7 victory over Wisconsin pleased him most.

"There's been a lot of criticism over the years about Notre Dame not being a second half team," Parseghian said. "I was scared when Wisconsin scored that quick touchdown at the start of the half, but our conditioning showed up and we wore them down."

Then the new Notre Dame coach reflected on what it was like to be the winner in Wisconsin's stadium. As the head man of Northwestern's Wildcats, he never enjoyed the victor's role at Camp Randall. The two triumphs his Wildcats did score in eight games with the Badgers were recorded in Evanston.

"It's good to come up here with a fresh team for a change," he said. "When I came here before, it was always the seventh or eighth game on the schedule and you know how it turned out."

Parseghian used 39 players and had bouquets for almost all of them.

"The kids were hungry," he said. "They've had only one Big Ten win in the last 10 starts. They decided to do something about it and they got the job done."

Air Force Bows to Michigan in Opener

Wolverines Convert Falcon Errors Into TDs, Triumph 24-7

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan capitalized on an early fumble recovery, thwarted Air Force three times in the first quarter and went on to score a 24-7 season-opening football victory Saturday.

Two of the Michigan touchdowns were for 80 yards as quarterback Bob Timberlake mixed in passing plays with a hard-running ground game paced by Mel Anthony and Jim Detwiler.

Timberlake scored the first touchdown from the one after Michigan had recovered a fumble on the Air Force 32 yard line.

St. Norbert '11', Hillsdale Play To 7-7 Tie

DE PERE — St. Norbert's Green Knights tied Hillsdale 7-7, on a muddy Minahan Stadium field here Saturday night.

The Knights scored their first touchdown on a two-yard quarterback sneak by Chuck Hoch after Hillsdale faked a punt deep in its own territory and surrendered the ball to St. Norbert. Kaukauna's John Skibba made the PAT kick good.

Hillsdale scored its touchdown in the first frame when halfback Jerry Simmons bounced three Knight tacklers and ran 22 yards into the end zone. Max Stokes kicked the extra point.

Xavier JVs Top Stevens Point

STEVENS POINT — Xavier High School's junior varsity squad scored its third straight gridiron victory, topping Pacelli High School here, 13-6, Saturday.

The jayvee Hawks scored their first touchdown in the first period when quarterback John Wehning carried the ball into the end zone from the 3-yard line.

Pacelli tied the score on a 30-yard pass play in the third period, but Xavier bounced back with a 65-yard touchdown run by Terry Graff. Dennis Ulman scored the PAT.

on the third play of the game.

Anthony scored from four yards out in the second quarter and Detwiler bulled his way in from the 10 in the third for the other Michigan touchdown.

Timberlake booted a 26-yard field goal as the first half came to a close to give the Wolverines a 17-7 lead.

Air Force, meeting Michigan for the first time in history, scored its only touchdown in the second quarter when Tim Murphy hit Dick Czarnota with a four-yard pass.

Air Force fumbled four times, all in the first half, and Michigan defenders recovered three of them. Each time the recoveries came after Air Force had driven inside the Michigan 20 yard line.

Late in the first quarter, Air Force recovered a Michigan fumble on the Wolverines' 15. But Rick Volk intercepted a Murphy pass in the end zone two plays later.

Timberlake took the Wolverines from there and needed just seven plays to send them across the Air Force goal line. The big play of the drive was a 34-yard dash around right end by Carl Ward.

Gary Peters Notches 20th Win of Year

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Left-hander Gary Peters won his 20th game while Don Buford stroked three singles, scored three runs and stole two bases as the Chicago White Sox defeated Kansas City 5-2 Saturday night.

The victory left the White Sox in a tie for second place, four games behind the American League leading New York Yankees.

Peters, who has lost eight games, needed Hoyt Wilhelm's relief help when the Athletics scored their runs in the seventh on a homer by Ed Charles and doubles by Nelson Mathews and Doc Edwards. Wilhelm then came on, striking out Bert Campaneris to end the rally.

Buffalo Rips Chargers, 30-3

40,167 Watch 3 Rookies Play Starring Roles

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Three rookies and one veteran did all the scoring tonight as Buffalo crushed the American Football league's defending champions, the San Diego Chargers, 30-3, for their third straight victory of the season before the Bills' largest home crowd ever — 40,167.

Flanker Elbert Dubenion, a five-year veteran, climaxed the Bills scoring by snaring a 40-yard touchdown pass from Daryle Lamonica in the final 24 seconds of the game in War Memorial Stadium.

Buffalo jumped into the lead at 5:45 of the first period as rookie George Byrd of Boston University intercepted a Tobin Rote pass on Buffalo's 25-yard line, raced to the right sideline and sped to the end zone. Until Byrd grabbed the ball, Rote had driven San Diego 53 yards in eight plays to the Bills' 27.

San Diego came back with three points on a 12-yard field goal by George Blair on the fourth play of the second quarter.

With 2:17 left in the period, John Hadl stepped deep into his end zone to punt for the Chargers. His kick soared to the Buffalo 49 where Hagood Clarke, a rookie from Florida, took the ball, raced to his left past most of the Chargers and then streaked down the sideline to score.

Buffalo's other touchdown came in the fourth period as another rookie, Joe Auer of Georgia Tech, scampered two yards to his right to climax a 52-yard drive.

Iowa Falter, But Rallies to Top Idaho

Surprising Vandal Rush Countered by Aerial Attack

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) —

Stunned by a 21-point outburst in the first half, highly-favored Iowa rallied in the fourth quarter behind the passing of Gary Snook for a 34-24 intersectional football victory over Idaho Saturday.

Sophomore halfback Dalton Kimble scored three times for the Hawkeyes in their 1964 opener, but Iowa had to come from behind on three occasions to stop upset-minded Idaho.

Idaho quarterback Mike Monahan tossed two touchdown passes and set up another score with a bit of aerial magic before Snook took charge and drove the Hawkeyes to a pair of quick touchdowns in the first nine minutes of the last period.

The rangy junior connected on four passes — including a 41-yard toss to the Idaho 41 — in an 80-yard scoring drive which Conference game of the season for both teams here Saturday afternoon.

Rod Skoge capped a 64-yard drive in the second stanza as he plunged over from the 2-yard line, and John Schumm added the extra point via placement. The drive took 16 plays which included a 15-yard roughing-the-kicker penalty.

St. Olaf held Lawrence on downs on its own 46 before starting a TD drive in the second quarter. The key play of the drive was a 22 - yard pass, Schumm to Skoge. Skoge went the final yard through the line.

On the following kickoff, Vike Henry Rutz took the kickoff on the five and stepped out of bounds on the six. Quarterback Bob Hansen fumbled and St. Olaf lineman Ben Danielson recovered. Dave Knutson scored from the five on the next play.

The deepest Vike penetration came in the third quarter when Lawrence drove to the Ole 19. St. Olaf linemen Raniel Lobitz and Tom Heiberg set the defensive pace to stop the Vikes all through the game.

Both teams were hampered by strong west winds during the contest.

3 Packers Face Lions in Home Town

Detroiters Ron Kramer, Currie and Masters Hope for Triumphant Return

BY ART DALEY

Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — Three guys from Detroit, who are now living temporarily in Green Bay, will try to beat Detroit in Detroit Monday night.

In case you haven't guessed, the Packers have three home-grown Detroiters — Dan Currie, Ron Kramer and Norm Masters.

And, as Currie puts it, "if you want to get a winner in this league get three yokels from Detroit."

When these three play in Tiger Stadium, the alumni from three different Detroit high schools and two Michigan universities experience mixed emotions. Kramer played at East Detroit High and the University of Michigan; Currie at St. Anthony's and Michigan State; and Masters at St. Mary's of Redford and Michigan State.

Kramer was the Packers' first draft choice in '57; Masters came to Green Bay in '57 in the Robin Rote deal; and Currie was the Packers' first choice in 1958. They've been making annual trips to Detroit (all on Thanksgiving Day, incidentally, until this year) since becoming pros and each says it's always a thrill to play before the "home" people.

Plays Twice

"When I was a kid I always wanted to play in the stadium but the only way we could get there was to win the (prep) championship. Norm played there twice but Ron and I never made it. I'd see a lot of Lion games and I always thought I'd like to play pro ball," Currie said.

All outstanding players in high school and college football, Currie, Kramer and Masters grew up as "favorite sons" in Detroit.

"But," Dan laughed, "all we get now is static."

Kramer noted "the rivalry between the two teams. They've been going at it as long as I can remember. I get more enthused when we get in that stadium. I'm sure it's because we've known the people there so long."

Big Ron caught eight passes for 145 yards in the last two games in Detroit—four in each of the last two years. He scored one touchdown last year and set up the other as the teams played to a 13-13 tie.

Kramer caught four passes for 68 yards in Detroit as a rookie.

He now has caught 15 passes for 238 yards in his hometown.

Masters said he "always enjoys" his visit to Detroit "but it always means that we have an extra tough game."

Norm will be working against a familiar face. That would be Bill Quinlan who will start at defensive right end. Masters said he figured Quinlan, the former Packer, will be "exceptionally high for us—just like he was for us against the Browns in 1961."

The Packers held a light workout this morning and then departed in their chartered flight for Detroit.

McKinley and Ralston Rally to Beat Aussies

Score 5-Set 'Cup' Triumph Over Emerson, Stolle

BY WILL GRIMSLEY

CLEVELAND (AP) — American's Chuck McKinley and Dennis Ralston battled back from the brink of defeat Saturday and whipped the great Australian team of Roy Emerson and Fred Stolle in doubles 6-4, 4-6, 4-6, 6-3 and 6-4 for an imposing 2-1 lead in the Davis Cup Challenge Round.

A crowd of 7,162 in Cleveland's Harold T. Clark Stadium gave the scrappy pair of young Yanks a standing ovation when Stolle hit a backhand into the net, ending a dramatic 1 hour, 57-minute struggle.

The United States now needs only to win one of today's final two singles matches to retain the big silver bowl wrested from the Aussies at Adelaide last December.

In these matches, Ralston, the often brilliant 22-year-old collegian from Bakersfield, Calif., plays Stolle and McKinley, the bouncing boy from San Antonio, Tex., faces the mighty Emerson, holder of the Australian Wimbledon and U.S. championships and rated the best amateur in the world.

Favored Over Stolle

The doubles victory, achieved in bright 70-degree weather, makes the Americans a 2-1 bet to retain the cup. Ralston is favored to beat Stolle, clinching the cup and making the final match a formality.

Trailing 3-4 and down 0-30 on Ralston's service in the eighth game of the dying final set, the American team looked like a beaten pair.

Then McKinley made a brilliant winning volley in an exchange with Emerson when it appeared that the point had been won by the Australians, and the Americans took on new life.

Playing desperately and fighting for every point, the bounding, sliding McKinley and the poised and determined Ralston reeled off three more points in a row to save Ralston's service.

Then in the ninth game they pounced on the dazed Stolle with both feet, breaking him at love. Pouncing to the net like hungry tigers, poaching and slashing at the ball for all they were worth, the two Americans couldn't be contained.

Ralston scored on an angled backhand volley, McKinley hit a forehand volley past Emerson's racket. McKinley hit another volley cross court, then Ralston hit a high volley that skimmed past Stolle's outstretched racket.

That gave the Americans the important break and put them ahead.

Then McKinley, the most successful of the day's servers, went to the service line and started sending his high-bounding spin service at the Aussies.

It was a tight game, going to deuce. The Americans failed to win one match point, lost it on a McKinley volley. Then they got another match point on an Emerson volleying error and forced Stolle into the error that ended the match.

Ohio State Downs Mustangs, 27-8

Buckeyes Intersperse Some Good Passing With Usual Ground Game

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State got every break and capitalized on all of them Saturday as the Bucks launched their football season with a 27-8 victory over Southern Methodist in an intersectional fray viewed by 80,737 fans.

Two intercepted passes by Arnold Chonko led to 39 and 28-yard field goals by Bob Fun End Bill Spahr snatched a fumble by Floyd Burke out of the air and raced 31 yards for a touchdown. An end zone pass interception by Doug Drenik halted one Mustang touchdown bid, and Steve Dreffer's fumble recovery stopped another.

The Texans, who lost their opener to Florida last week by 24-8, got into Ohio territory only four times and scored their touchdown in the last 29 seconds as quarterback Don Oefinger passed 11 yards to end Jim Taylor.

The Buckeyes, who interspersed some good passing with their usual ground-eating game, uncovered another fine fullback in Willard Sander, who rambled 42 yards for a touchdown to climax a 58-yard, three-play assault. Tom Barrington went 37 for the other Buckeye score as the Bucks rambled 64 yards in six plays.

Winneconne Gridders Bow To Wayland

Wolves Make Two Touchdown Drives, Fail to Score

BEAVER DAM — Wayland Academy's Redmen handed the Winneconne Wolves their first season loss, a 7-0 defeat, on a wind-blown, rain-soaked and cold field here Saturday.

The Wolves made two good drives. The first, in the first quarter, brought them to the Wayland 1-yard line, but Wayland held the Wolves there and regained the ball on downs.

In the fourth quarter, Winneconne again drove for a touchdown, but Wayland intercepted the ball on a pass play on the 20-yard line.

Wayland scored its touchdown in the fourth frame on a screen pass from quarterback Maury Raymond to fullback Doug Faile, who ran the ball 39 yards for the TD. Raymond ran the ball across for the PAT.

The loss leaves Winneconne with a 1-1 record. Winneconne is in the Little Nine Conference, and Wayland is playing independently this year, taking a year's leave of absence from the Midwest Prep Conference.

NOTES and NOTIONS

The fondest wish of such National Football League pioneers as Bert Bell was to establish great balance — and the first two weekends of play underscore how well that dream is being realized. Not a single team in the 14-club circuit is without a loss or a tie after only two games. The bevy of see-saw games played last weekend (none was decided by more than six points) again pin-pointed a major reason for the NFL's great spectator appeal. After last Sunday's round, many observers found it necessary to correct some erroneous conclusions formed as a result of the openers. For example: (1) Despite their tough breaks, the Bears aren't about to surrender their title by default. (2) Baltimore's Johnny Unitas is just as brilliant as ever—and he has perhaps the most dangerous quartet of receivers in the league. (3) The Packers will have to go all-out in every game, because once more, they're a marked team. (4) San Francisco has an improved team.

Nothing happened last Sunday to disturb such first-week impressions that Cleveland and St. Louis will top Eastern contenders, that New York's Giants will have to do a sharp turn-about to avert a lean season, and that Minnesota, Los Angeles and Philadelphia are much improved teams.

Jim Bakken, who played in the shadows of Dale Hackbart and Ron Miller during his three years as a University of Wisconsin quarterback (1959-61), has blossomed into one of the National Football League's premier place-kickers. The Madison native has made good on seven of eight field goal tries—including the 28-yarder in the final seconds enabling St. Louis to tie Cleveland—and has a lot to do with the Cards' prospect as a prime contender. Bakken and Paul Hornung are currently tied for the NFL point lead.

The ill-fated third-down pass against Baltimore last Sunday has become the most-discussed Packer game strategem in at least two years. The last comparable situation came in 1962 when Milt Plum's pass was intercepted by Herb Adderley, putting the Packers in position for a Paul Hornung field goal and a 9-7 win. Hornung ostensibly was to have played a big part in last week's finish, but he never got the chance. I find no reason to fault the Packer strategy which called for a pass on a third-and-9 situation on the Colt 31. But the type of pass thrown was counter to the usually-conservative Vince Lombardi-Bart Starr type of call (after all, the previous Sunday, the Packers had tried a field goal against the Bears with only a half-yard to go on fourth down and possessing an 8-point lead). A more logical pass would have been to throw to Tom Moore or Jim Taylor on a swing or screen pattern. Moore, as the short man, was all alone on that crucial pass play, but Starr threw long to McGee, who was well covered. We'd certainly have to agree with the objective of trying for a first down or at least moving the ball closer for a potential place-kick. The turf was a bit slippery, and the Colts' Lou Michaels didn't have much luck with his field goals.

Lightning struck twice in the same section of the National Football League's rule book Sept. 13. The Packers' now-famous "free kick after a fair catch" episode had a counter-part in Philadelphia. But while Paul Hornung made his 52-yard field goal, the Eagles' Sam Baker missed one from 47 yards out.

Cedar Rapids has been disenchanted with its major league affiliations. The Midwest League Raiders have dropped their working agreement with Cincinnati after two years. Cedar Rapids has had five different major league agreements in the last 15 years—with its 5-year tie-up with the Braves being the longest. In its 16 years of professional baseball, Cedar Rapids has won only one pennant—the '58 flag in the 3-1 league. Foxes fans have had a far better break—two pennants in five years of affiliation with the Orioles.

Felix Mantilla has become quite a slugger, so he must either be improving with age or has found Boston's Fenway park quite a haven from pitchers' storms. The former Milwaukee Braves utility man could conceivably hit more home runs this year than he did in his first eight big league seasons combined. The 30-year-old Mantilla hit 30 homers in his first 124 games this year—compared to a career record of 35 homers in 609 games.

U. S. Olympic Team Ready To Take Off

Men's Track and Field Team Will Leave Monday

BY BOB MYERS

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Years of planning and months and weeks of bustling preparations come to an end this weekend and the mass exodus of America's finest athletic talent begins Monday night—destination Tokyo.

Giant charter jets will begin pulling out Monday night. The last plane takes off Thursday. The first contingent to leave Monday will be the 68-member men's track and field team, regarded almost unanimously as the most powerful ever assembled for the big games.

There will be a weekend of farewells, however, which started last night just before the Penn State-UCLA football game in Memorial Coliseum.

Most of the 476 men and women athletes on the U.S. team were to parade into the Coliseum through the peristyle entrance, marching down the broad passageway onto and then around the field.

At the head, carrying the U.S. flag, was Parry O'Brien, the man who first broke the 60-foot barrier in the shot put and now is an member of the track and field team for an unprecedented fourth time.

Has Retired
Towering Rafer Johnson, the 1960 decathlon champion in the Rome Olympics, twice the hero of the USA-USSR dual meeting and now retired from athletics, recited the Olympic oath.

The afternoon the track and field squad alone will be introduced just prior to the Minnesota Viking-Los Angeles Ram National Football League game in the Coliseum.

A feature of this appearance will be the arrival of one of the final runners in the national

Cards Continue Hot, Down Pirates, 6 to 3

St. Louis Improves Pennant Hopes Behind Simmons

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The pennant-hopeful St. Louis Cardinals rode the hitting of Mike Shannon and the pitching of veteran southpaw Curt Simmons to a 6-3 victory over Pittsburgh Saturday.

Shannon put the Cardinals ahead to stay 2-1 in the fourth inning with a bloop single to right off Pirate ace Bob Veale, now 18-12.

Dick Groat opened the inning with a double, Ken Boyer walked and Bill White sacrificed. Julian Javier was purposely walked before Shannon singled home two runs. Another run scored when right fielder Roberto Clemente threw wildly to the plate. Shannon came in with the fourth run of the inning on Tim McCarver's infield hit.

The Cardinals got an insurance run in the sixth when White doubled off relief pitcher Tommy Sisk, advanced on Javier's sacrifice and scored on Shannon's infield hit.

Simmons, gaining his 17th victory against nine losses had to pitch out of a couple of dangerous situations. Barey Schultz came in the ninth to get the last out.

The triumph, coupled with Philadelphia's 6-4 loss to Mil-

"Run for the Money" program sponsored by the U.S. Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The fund-raising project was started in New York and the torch borne across the nation.

Mike Larrabee, who at the age of 30 equalled the world 400-meter dash record in the recent Olympic final trials, has the honor of bearing the torch on the final lap on the Coliseum floor.

In mid-afternoon the entire Olympic delegation will assemble at Disneyland for a mass party and steak barbecue, with Mayor Samuel Yorty of Los Angeles the host.

Barofsky Returns Punt 94 Yards for Decisive Touchdown

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP)—Fred Barofsky's 94-yard touchdown run on a punt return proved to be Army's victory margin Saturday, 19-13, after an aroused Boston College team awoke in a wild fourth quarter on Ed Foley's passing.

Leading 19-0 going into the final period, Army had to fight for its life as Foley sparked BC in two touchdown drives. He was working on a third that had reached the Army 42 when time ran out on a warm, sunny afternoon.

Coach Jim Miller of BC argued with the officials on the field after the final gun after Jim Whalen had caught Foley's pass on the 42. It was a heart-breaking ending for BC, which had been able to pick holes in Army's pass defense in that final period.

Rollie Stichweh, whose eight-yard pass to Tom Schwartz gave Army its first score in the opening period, suffered a twisted ankle after 11 minutes of play and Frank Costantino operated as the regular quarterback the rest of the way.

Army went in for a TD on an eight-yard run by Don Parcells in the third period after Whelan, BC's punter, attempted to run on a fourth and 12 situation and was dumped by Pete Braun on the BC 38.

Yankees Stretch Win Streak to 11

Stottlemyre Gives Washington Only 2 Hits, Slams 5 Himself

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rookie right-hander Mel Stottlemyre outlived Washington Saturday, stroking five hits while allowing only two, as the American League leading New York Yankees defeated the Senators 7-0 and extended their winning streak to 11 games.

The victory, tying the longest winning streak in the majors this season, trimmed the Yankees' magic pennant-clinching number to four. Any combination of Yankee triumphs and losses by the runnersup will bring New York its fifth straight pennant.

Stottlemyre, winning his fifth straight game and ninth against two defeats collected all singles, including one that drove in two runs as the Yankees put the game away in the second inning with a six-run outburst.

Stottlemyre held the Senators hitless after Joe Cunningham's double in the second inning. The only other hit was Don Zimmerman's single in the first.

A procession of Senators' relievers held the Yankees scoreless after the second except for Joe Pepitone's 27th home run in the seventh inning.

The Indians closed the gap to 5-3 in the eighth with a two-run rally but Hall ended the threat.

Baltimore jumped on rookie Luis Tiant, 9-4, for two runs in the first inning. With one out, Snyder smacked his first homer of the season and Powell followed with his 37th.

The Ship defenders rushed the Raiders furiously, limiting them to a net ground gain of four yards. The Raiders lost 80 yards in 15 "minus" plays—with 44 of the losing yards coming on pass plays.

North's Dennis Ruppel completed nine of 19 passes, for 89 yards, and had four intercepted. North also lost the ball three times on fumbles. Manitowoc gained 99 yards rushing.

The loss dropped the defending co-champion North out of a first-place tie. North now has a 2-0-1 record, while Manitowoc is 1-0-1 in the league and 2-0-1, overall.

Manitowoc threatened twice. After recovering a fumble on the North 17 early in the game, the Ships drove to the 1-yard line before being stopped. In the fourth quarter, a pass interception gave the Ships possession on the North 25. Manty got to the 7 before running out of against Colgate.

Orioles Top Indians, 5-3

Milt Pappas Wins 16th Game of Year; Russ Snyder Homers

CLEVELAND (AP)—Baltimore, battling to stay alive in the American League pennant race, beat the Cleveland Indians 5-3 Saturday as the Orioles' Russ Snyder, Boog Powell and Brooks Robinson each hit solo homers.

Veteran Milt Pappas notched his 16th victory against six defeats but needed help from reliever Dick Hall.

She Wraps Them All in Love

Miss Ann Verkuilen Has Cared for Thousands Of Infants During Her 34 Years as OB Aide

BY JEAN OTTO

Post-Crescent Women's Editor

Babies come and babies go, but Ann Verkuilen continues her job of bathing, changing, comforting, feeding, watching over and loving them all.

Since 1930, when Miss Verkuilen first went to work in St. Elizabeth Hospital's OB department, almost 50,000 babies have passed through its nursery. Every one has received the personal attention of the gentle nurses' aide who has never married but who loves 'her' babies and cares for them as attentively as any mother.

Miss Verkuilen observed her 41st anniversary at the hospital this month. Today's hospital routine is a far cry from the one she entered in 1923, when, as a teenager, she and her sister went to work with the hospital nuns. They did odd and helpful jobs, such as assisting with canning chores and housekeeping. They were willing to do whatever was asked of them, and as time went on, Miss Verkuilen was given more responsibility.

The Only One Who Stayed

"I never considered becoming a nurse," she recalls. "Few young women went to high school then. Quite a few other girls came to the hospital and started then, but I'm the only one who stuck it out."

When the hospital superintendent asked Miss Verkuilen to work in OB, she and her sister both welcomed the opportunity. The two worked out a schedule, alternating day and night shifts. In 1936 her sister entered the convent, and Ann went on days all the time.

Her first duties, during those early Depression years, were changing diapers, carrying the babies to their mothers, and helping with general care of the newborn. At that time, she remembers, aides did almost everything.

There was not nearly the staff there is now, nor was there automatic equipment for sterilization and laundry chores.

Her main duties now are feeding, changing and keeping a close watch on the infants who begin their lives under her discerning eye. She doesn't care much for other nursing, she says, but she loves the babies, and never gets tired of watching and caring for them.

Personalities Evident Right Away

Miss Verkuilen admits that one can get attached to an infant in just a few days. After the first 24 hours, she says, babies change. One gets the feeling of their personalities. As she talks, her eyes roam over the sleeping infants, awareness and experience taking in every child.

"Sometimes, when a 'preemie' has been here a long time," she goes on, "and you care for it every day, you get very attached. Even though you love to see them go home, you do miss them. 'Years ago, mothers and babies stayed longer in the hospital, nine days compared to today's less-than-a-week, and there was time to feel motherly to thousands of babies. Then Miss Verkuilen's duties included demonstrating to new mothers how to bathe, hold and feed their little ones."

At one time, aides also prepared as many as 10 different formulas. "Now it's so easy. Everything comes prepared. There's much more time to give to the babies. The nursery is where I love it."

For the last six years Miss Verkuilen has had her own room right at the hospital. She was born and grew up in Little Chute, and lived there until her mother's death. She tried apartment life for three years, but found

Miss Ann Verkuilen has been cuddling the infants at St. Elizabeth Hospital since she transferred to the OB Department in 1930. When full, the nursery cares for 26 to 28 babies at a time. Miss Verkuilen came to the hospital as an aide in 1923, when she was a teenager. She loves her work, and intends to stay right at it.

Post-Crescent Photos by Ralph Acker

All babies are taken to their mothers twice a day. Miss Verkuilen takes personal pride in seeing that the infants are sweet smelling and brushed for their visits. Many times a day she'll brush a baby's hair. Diapers are changed whenever a baby awakens, or cries. Sometimes, she says, she gives one a drink of water, then changes him again. The process can be almost constant when the nursery is full. Above, Mrs. Henry Cops is handed her young son. At left, Miss Verkuilen confers with her supervisor, Sister Laurine. The aide joined the staff with several other teens in 1923. Her sister worked with her until 1936 when she joined the Franciscan Order, serving in St. Louis for 28 years. Miss Verkuilen says she's the only one of that teen group who "stuck it out." She hasn't regretted a minute of her 41 years at the hospital.

Sculptured Foundations to Build On

There's more fit in fall fashions: in trim suits and in pantsuits with tapering trousers... in figure-skimming coattresses... in soft knits for day and clinging after-five fashions with necklines that plunge... in slim evening gowns and at-home wear.

The foundations to underline these silhouettes - conscious clothes are notable for their airy fabrics, easy fit and natural shaping, for their feminine softness and their eye appeal.

Most important are the decollete and backless brassieres, the pantie girdles with natural seat, the high-rising girdles, the supple corselets, the "in-betweeners" with the look of lingerie and the function of a foundation.

Stunning Prints

A bevy of beautiful prints highlights the foundation garment collections. The prints include a number of florals in brilliant jewel-tone combinations, such as emerald with bright blue. There are feather prints in muted tones and several patterns in a sharp contrast of black against white.

Rich black foundations abound, fashioned of sheer elastics and delicate laces. Ivory is seen in several of the collections; there are browns, bright reds and blues, and soft-to-shocking pinks are returning in foundations for mature as well as young figures.

Backs plunge low in a majority of brassieres and corselets, and some bras have no visible back band at all, the anchorage being provided by a ribbon of elastic that circles the waist.

Constructed to Curve Girdles depend upon bias banding, double sections of elastic or sculptured "round" the body panels for curve control, and most pantie girdles are constructed to curve rather than to flatten the derriere. Originally styled for wear under stretch pants, the natural-seat pantie girdles are now suggested for suits and casual dresses as well.

Some of the best fashion news slipping in for fall is under cover. Under the cover of daytime fashions, new slips take a fresh approach to lingerie—one that fits them better than ever for their basic role in underscoring silhouettes.

Plain old nylon tricot, excellent in its day, has now become far from plain, and it's definitely new. The news centers around developments in stretch tricot fibers.

An Example of the plunge neckline most accepted by American women is shown in a sleek black velvet cocktail dress. The intricate cut of the lace plunge bra makes it wearable under both daytime and evening décolletages. Stretch lace pettigans give just enough subtle control to make discotheque dancing a pleasure.

Meeting Notes

Lyle Leatherman is instructor and caller for a beginning square dance class sponsored by the Romeo and Calico Square Dance Club. The class will be held at 7 p.m. Sunday at the VFW Hall, 501 N. Richmond St.

GREENVILLE — Paul Porter will serve as installing officer for the South Greenville Grange Friday evening when new officers accept their duties for the year.

GREENVILLE — The Men's club of the Immanuel Evangelical Lutheran Church will meet at the Fellowship hall Tuesday evening. The serving committee is composed of Eldred Doell, Armond Fiestedt and Emil Kaphingst.

DARBOY — Group No. 6 of Holy Angels parish will serve at the first card party of the fall season to be held this evening at 8:15 p.m. in the school hall. Mrs. Ray Schrieber is chairman.

The Chemise provides just enough coverage to come between the bare skin and delicate linings in today's fashions. The imported lace trim is of sheer black nylon tricot over "butter-cream." The chemise solves the problem of what to wear under shorter skirts.

The Unique cutting of the girdle and stitching in the back reinforced panel give gentle up-lift to the derriere which is demanded by new fashions. Completing the under-stretch picture is a stretch strap bras.

Proportions Change For Recipe Increase

Why can't you change a small recipe into a large one?

Changing a recipe for six into one for sixty needs some adjustments.

Certain foods increase in volume or flavor too much in proportion to others. You may not want 10 times as many nuts, raisins or spices in the large recipe as in the small one. Then the liquid and flour ratio isn't necessarily the same for large amounts. One reason for this is that the amount of mixing needed for large recipes changes.

It's best to find a reliable recipe and keep those proportions even if you wish to vary seasonings and flavorings.

Bond Street's Trademark is Quality

London's Bond Street is a magic name in men's fashions. Kings and maharajahs are among the clients. At Scott's the Hatters, a salesman shows a customer hats alongside a pile of boxes which carry the names of regular clients, including Sir Winston Churchill. (AP Newsfeatures Photo)

BY MARGARET CONLIN

LONDON (AP) — Bond Street's very name is the trademark of quality.

Extending from Piccadilly to Oxford Street, its quarter mile of glassed and gilded windows, doorways and showcases constitute a tight little enclave of richness without ostentation that exudes luxury, craftsmanship, good taste — and altitudinous prices.

Bond Street is, in fact, so high class that to refer to its establishments as stores or shops seems almost an affront against delicacy.

Soft Approach

Within deep-carpeted interiors are fastidious but highly knowledgeable men and women dealing with the public — some of them would probably faint if you called them clerks — who won't even use the word "sell."

They avoid that crass, commercial verb with such circumspection:

"We recently supplied one of our clients with —"

"One of our patrons obtained from us —"

"We were able to provide her royal highness with —"

"We were happy to find for Sir James one of our —"

Along Bond Street you can find everything from tinned kangaroo tail soup to lace-trimmed bed sheets retailing at $1,120 a pair.

World Known

The names of some of its establishments are known around the globe. Such names as Cartiers, the White House, Asprey, Justerini & Brooks,

Unify Color in Flowers

Colors in the flowers should pick up the colors of the picture to give a unified look to the arrangement.

If there is not enough room to hang a chest on the wall, use a narrow shelf with a mirror over it. Arrange a bouquet of flowers on the shelf and in front of the mirror, to add depth to both the room and to your flowers.

Where there are windows in the hall or a skylight overhead, place a large green foliage plant on the floor to provide a decorative highlight.

As a crowning touch, be sure to have adequate light in the area. An entrance way should be like a friendly beacon light to visitors. If you use a bright picture on the wall, consider using a small picture lamp over it to highlight both it and the flowers below it.

The end result is still a small entrance, but you'll have a ball making it look bigger than it is and as friendly as you mean it to be.

Frank Partridge & Sons. And just around the corner on Piccadilly, Fortnum & Mason, whose grocery shop is so tony the shop assistants wear morning clothes.

Sotheby's, the famous auctioneers, are in Bond Street. Already this year its total sales have soared beyond $30.8 million.

Bond Street also houses the famous firm of William E. Hill, who will repair your Stradivarius or sell you one.

The premises of the White House are one floor, flooded with daylight from a vast area of skylighting. It shuns artificial lighting so that mothers don't have to take a daughter outside to see if the blue of a certain frock matches the blue of her eyes.

Has Laundry

Linen, napkins, pillow cases and children's wear are made by hand. The management is so deeply concerned about the care of these goods that it maintains its own laundry.

Like a small, excited boy showing his treasures, Eric Asprey showed a visitor around his premises.

"Aren't they lovely?" he asked, showing off a pair of silver rabbits with rubies for eyes, cheap at $2,660.

One item was a shooting stick with a transistor radio in the seat. When you get bored with the point-to-point racing, you can whip out the transistor and tune in the Oxford-Cambridge rugby match.

At most Bond Street establishments, chairs are furnished for the customers. If a woman shopper is accompanied by a man, there will be two chairs.

One Bond Street shop, Beale & Inman, is so conservative that it has never advertised in its 150 years of business.

"It's against our principles," explained an official. He seemed pained at the very thought of a mention in print.

This establishment makes shirts, ties and pajamas and, as is the case with many other Bond Street shops, numbers among its customers kings, princes, maharajahs, sheiks and Eastern potentates.

Sir Thomas Bond planned the street 278 years ago. Bond Street is actually two streets — New Bond is the section near Oxford Street. Old Bond the part near Piccadilly.

Officials and employees of Bond Street shops are extremely polite whether you buy or not. Sir Gerald Kelly, 85-year-old past president of Britain's Royal Academy, once said:

"Bond Street is an entire little world. For many, many years I've gone there not only to shop, but to look at the beautiful girls. Like the street's shops, they must be the most elegant and expensive in the world."

Fortnum and Mason shares elegance with the luxury shops on London's Bond Street. In the world-renowned grocery department, the shop assistants — never "clerks" — wear morning clothes. A senior salesman, shows a tin of Scotch shortbread to a shopper.

Flowers in Small Hall Add Color

Postage-stamp-size entrance halls pose a decorating problem that baffles many housewives. Nothing is going to turn a small hall into a big ballroom, but professional interior decorators have tips for creating an illusion of space where there is little of it.

The color of the walls in the entrance way is the most important factor. They should be painted in a very light color, such as a pastel shade of the color in the adjoining room, or papered in a white or very light paper.

Next, look at the floor. It too should be very light. An entrance foyer floor that can be dramatic in its welcome is a checkerboard pattern of solid black and white alternating tiles. In a very tiny entrance way, solid white tile will brighten and enlarge the area.

Now, to add interest to the walls, hang a narrow chest with a bright picture over it on the wall you want to serve as the center of attention. Keep an arrangement of flowers on the

Create 'Show Off' Collectors Items

REBA & BONNIE CHURCHILL. It's not what you feed upon, but what you "feast upon" that interests plate-mating collectors, who are more intent on exhibiting their prize specimens than serving on them.

Now, their hand-picked (and often hand-designed) selections of dishes, platters, trays and cups have gone from table tops to table topics as proud owners recall the creating, discovering or acquiring of their "show off" pieces.

Causing their own conversational acclaim are story-telling plates, which depict Indian history and legend. As created by artist Genevieve Golsh, designs frequently are drawn on greenware that has been carefully "groomed," sanded and sponged. Afterwards, the patterns, which range from double thunderbirds to an Indian brave, are lightly pencilled on. This is merely to assist in lining up the proportion and balance, since the lead markings burn away in the firing.

The painting begins with at least five coats of underglaze brushed on each piece, for much of the color fades in the firing. The latter is done in stilt in a ceramic kiln. Plates are fired at "cone 5." Later, there is another glazing and firing to assure a colorful, yet satin smooth, finish. Often, the completed ceramicware is framed, then used to highlight a picture wall.

China painters, however, follow another display route, exhibiting their artistry in a "cup and saucer corner." This is an engaging showcase, which offers a touch of elegance and hospitality. An effective technique in such painting is to shadow and highlight the central flower, face or figure, so it acquires dimension. For example, a flower seems to pop out from the sleek surface, when the petals bend forward, the leaves appear moist, and the colors duplicate the garden.

Some professionals prefer to let the tone dominate the trim. Pearlized platters that shimmer with reflections of the ocean's floor, vibrant orange and pinks that mirror the desert at sunset, or earthy reddish browns that recall the strata of the Southwest. But, whether your platters are bold or delicate, robust or pastel, china or earthenware, they are spinning heads and brightening walls!

Miss Verkuilen says her downstairs room is large and homey — and so convenient. She has many friends, but prefers to stay close to the hospital except for an occasional dinner at someone's home. She likes to watch TV during the evening, and usually dines with the hospital cafeteria.

Her career, she says, is one she came into by accident, but has come to love. She used to work harder, but it was all fun because she had a chance to help in so many ways.

There are no regrets at all for the 41 years spent inside the shielding and protective walls of the hospital. "I loved it all." And, to emphasize the point, she maintains she plans to keep right on doing what she has in the past. Some Changes Seen

Grain Ship Captain Tells of Red China

BY BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Writer

VANCOUVER, B. C. (SP) — The coolies have gone from the waterfront of Communist China and the beggars have left her streets.

Women may be growing more style-conscious and businessmen are becoming less wary in their dealings with Westerners.

But it's still a land where the foreigner gets a 65 per cent discount while the natives pay top dollar for the goods they produce.

Captain's Report

This is the report of Capt. John Lewis, 33, Welsh master of the converted oil tanker Stancloud.

In the 10 years he has been sailing to China he has noted a gradual relaxation of once rigid restrictions governing the movement of foreigners. While he finds it easier to get around in Communist China today, there are few places to go and little to do.

Lewis spoke of the changes he has seen since he first shipped to China in 1953 as an apprentice on a ship carrying fertilizer to Tsintao.

Grain Ship

Today he is master of one of the hundreds of vessels of all registries — except those of Japan and the United States — that have carried some 6½ million tons of grain worth $500 million to Red China since early 1961.

The Stancloud's crew can be considered typical. There are 31 Britons and 12 Spaniards aboard. Shipboard soccer teams play each other while waiting to load in British Columbia ports. They play again while discharging cargo in Shanghai or Dairen.

"The Chinese regulations, such as the one stating you have to be back on board by midnight, are still on the books," Lewis says. "But they're not enforced as rigidly as they once were."

Take Camera

You can carry a camera in China, provided you don't take pictures within city limits or of military installations, and you have the film processed before leaving the country.

"As long as you comply with their regulations and don't cause them any bother, the authorities won't cause you any," Lewis says.

There are no coolies in evidence where the Stancloud ties up.

"Now they're called workers and get a wage — about $40 a month," Lewis says. "They reckon that's enough to feed a family of four and have a little left over."

Lighter Load

Chinese women still work in the sheds and along the dockside. They don't carry heavy loads aboard the ships any more, but they still board sampans and lighters.

In Dairen, his last port in China, Lewis saw converted stores with five or six beds to a room. "They've always lived 15 to 20 to a room and I guess they still live that way," he said.

In Shanghai he saw a sign of a changing China — a beauty shop.

"It wasn't anything like what you have here or in the United States, but it was an indication. The women seem to be becoming more style-conscious. Once it was hard to tell the women from the men; they all wore trousers and denim shirts.

"Now the women, at least some of them, are wearing their hair swept back and they are taking to dresses and skirts."

Dull Cities

Shanghai and Dairen are dull cities with little to do and there are only two places for Lewis and his men to go — the Seamen's Club and the Friendship department store. The discount allowed foreigners in the store is up to 65 per cent on anything to be taken out of the country.

On his latest trip to China, Lewis paid $6 for "a good pair of shoes."

The shoes would have cost the $40-a-month waterfront worker the equivalent of $15.

Lewis says the ports of China are far more mechanized than they were 10 years ago.

More Gear

"In 1961 the grain ships used their own gear to unload in China. When an order was filled, the ships would sell the gear to the Chinese. Now the main ports have all their own facilities and these facilities are being improved all the time."

"In 1961 it took us 21 days to discharge cargo. On our last trip we turned around in seven days," he said.

The sailor in Shanghai or Dairen makes few contacts, according to Lewis.

"You walk the streets and you have a crowd following you. They stare. They watch to see where you will go, what you will buy. It's just Chinese curiosity and it's been that way ever since I began running to China."

Chinese Stare

"They stare at you and you stare back. If you smile, they'll smile."

But Lewis has learned not to talk politics.

"One chap tried to draw me out on Viet Nam. I told him that if the United States and the Chinese wanted to fight each other, that was their business."

During a recent stopover in China, Lewis went to a beach.

It could have been a beach scene anywhere — except that the women's costumes dated back to "about 1914."

"There certainly were no bikinis."

Linda Butler, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Butler, 88 Cherry Court, is Sigrun's hostess and 'sister' for her year in Appleton. The AHS senior and Sigrun have become close friends, and Sigrun says that when she goes places, she usually goes with Linda. Miss Butler introduced Sigrun at an Open House before school started and took her to the Y Den to present her to young people there. Above, Linda, right, introduces Sigrun to Sherry Baehman.

Sigrun Says the School Day and the amount of studying she must do here are about the same as at home in Iceland. She studies more when there's a test coming up, she grins. Above, Sigrun talks with Appleton High Principal Dr. William Berner and Dean of Girls Miss Annabelle Wolf. (Post-Crescent Photos)

Courtship A Serious Business

The three C's of courtship—creativity, cautiousness and certainty—can help to make young marriages happier.

Courtship guide rules recommended are: Be creative. Show imagination to the activities you select. Courting couples too often fall into boring routines. There are the same snack bars, same movies, the same haunts. Playing a new game, going to a concert, visiting an unknown part of town—all can be refreshing. Going out with the gang often results in a lowest common denominator decision as to what to do.

Be cautious, be serious. We are not serious enough about courtship. We Americans put so much stress on fun that we often take a frivolous view of courtship and marriage. Courtship does, of course, involve fun, but it has the serious purpose of choosing a life mate. Be certain—don't be rushed or frantic in a courtship. We insist on all-out love in an impossibly short time. It takes time for a relationship to grow and for mutual trust to develop.

The courtship period allows time to observe whether the partner is suitable emotionally and socially. What is his or her style of living, his career prospects, friends? These are the vital questions that had better be answered during courtship.

Neckline Furs Add generous helpings of real fur to your every elegant neck-line—on coats, suits and dresses. You'll get a kick too, out of the many mock furs that make fabulous accessories for casual fashions.

Classic Look Set In Girls' Coats

Classic coats and suits, softly detailed and lightly-fitted provide the new fall '64 coverage for the back-to-school crowd. Uncluttered, well-mannered and flattering to young figures, these favorites will go everywhere with best-dressed co-eds.

This semester there is an outstanding selection of back-to-school coats and suits—carefully priced within the reach of students everywhere. We have concentrated on producing hand-somely tailored fashions at realistic prices. Included are balmacaans, reefers, Chesterfields in coat fashions. Trench coats, belted and nonchalant, are making a star comeback, looking much like the trench coats Marlene Dietrich wore in the '30s.

The new classic include lines that move closer to the waistline, seam treatment, interesting pockets — "I" shaped, double-entry and patch pockets. Collars are tailored and notched or small and snug—but they are there. Collarless "chanelisms" are rarely seen for the back-to-school set.

Fur collars are sensibly detachable so that the coat becomes more wearable; the collar a welcome companion for other fashions.

Pile-lined coats — campus favorites — are styled with more detail this fall. Buttons, braid and pockets — sometimes a fur collar — perk them up so that they are fair weather as well as stormy weather friends.

Fabrics for school agers follow these used for adults, but are flatter and less textured. Meltons, chinchillas, gabardines, doeskins and less hairy tweeds, are popular. Fake-fur coats continue their popularity, especially in simulations of otter and broadtail, both of which are newer than leopard. Corduroy and blends of corduroy with wool, cotton or nylon are popular because they are generally water repellent.

AFS Student From Iceland Finds Warm Welcome

BY JEAN OTTO
Post-Crescent Women's Editor

Her country is Iceland, but there's only warmth in the brown eyes and bright smile of Sigrun Steinthorsdottir. AFS student at Appleton High School this year, Sigrun is a senior, living as the 'adopted' sister of Linda Butler.

Sigrun (the 'g' in her name is silent) does very well with the English language. She's spoken it only in the month she's been here, although she studied it for three years in school. The hardest part was learning to think in English. "It takes some time," she says. What she does not understand, she covers with a smile, a shy blushing kind that lights her face and makes it easy to understand why "I have many friends at school".

The tall young blond says that though her name has a Scandinavian origin, her family has been Icelandic for as long as she knows. Her last name is a combination of her father's first name, Steinthor, and 'daughter'. If she had a brother, his surname would be Steinthorson. She doesn't have a brother, but three younger sisters are missed by the "far-from-home" young woman. They are Erna, 12; Hilur, 9, and Gudrun, 5. It's the first time Sigrun has been separated from her family.

Her parents had some misgivings about her going so far away. From her home in Iceland's capital, Reykjavik, over 40 applied for a year in the U.S. Only 16 made it. Sigrun recalls there were tears when she left, although there was happiness at her opportunity.

Many things about America and Appleton are different, she says. Winters are colder here than at home, although she did not realize this until she arrived. It's the ocean that makes the difference. Summers are about the same, as far as temperature is concerned.

Four Meals a Day

The big difference in summer-time is in daylight hours. In Iceland it's light around the clock, although during the night the sun is not visible. Sigrun smiles that she thought it was that way all over, and was surprised to find it gets dark here in the summer. Winter days are like our own.

Foods are not much different, she muses, except that at home they eat four meals a day. The additional one is served at 3 p.m., and consists of bread, cakes, cookies and coffee or tea. Dinner is at 7 or 8 p.m., and is a heavier meal than ours. Sandwiches are new to her. They don't have them in Iceland, she says. Bread is eaten at the afternoon meal but at no other time. She's tried pizza and says it's "Not too bad, not too good. I can eat it."

Many other things about life in Iceland and Appleton are the same. She can see no important difference in family life. Teens here are very like the Icelandic young people—only the language is different. They dance the Sheik, like the same music, and on weekends go to the Lido, a nice place where they can dance and mostly talk. She loves to sing and would like to learn to play to guitar. Linda, she says, has promised to teach her.

"I like Appleton," Sigrun says with a smile. She loves the trees, so many and so big. There are not so tall. She also likes Linda and her family and all the people she's met at school.

She misses her family, of course, but she also misses the mountains. "Whenever I look from my home, I can see mountains." She misses the pretty lake in the center of town, and the swimming pools, all fed by hot springs and always perfect for swimming.

Difficult Subject

Sigrun is studying English, American History, Speech, Psychology, art and gym. Of psychology she says, "That's a little hard. I took my first test today." She doesn't understand psychology, she says, but thinks it will come. She also has trouble pronouncing psychoanalysis. The switch from the Icelandic alphabet of 36 letters has caused some difficulty, especially in pronouncing a word by sight. She also found it very easy to get lost the first few weeks. At home the teachers change classrooms, not the students. "But now I can be on time," she grins, recalling the race through the corridors, the first to third floor crush, and the many "Could you please tell me where's" of the first days of school.

When she goes home, Sigrun plans to be a secretary, perhaps working in a bank and using her English for translations. For this she does not need college, but must have a high school diploma, good grades and typing skill. She took two years of typing at home. She's not sure if she'll be taken up with traveling, and perhaps want to visit some other country some day. She may change her mind about things, she says.

Most important to her will be the chance to tell other people what it is like here and what she's seen—to relay one way of life to the other.

She expects to have a good time while she's learning.

The Seriousness and the Fun of school are both part of Sigrun's day. Above, she sits in American History class, absorbing the past of the country in which she will spend her AFS year. At right, during her noon hour, she eats sandwiches and laughs with a friend. All AFS students are required to take American History and English. Other subjects are chosen on the basis of their particular interests and accomplishments.

Sigrun Has Found it easy to make friends at Appleton High School this fall. Everyone is eager to help her and get her acquainted with others. Between classes, at left, she has a minute to greet Susan Brower, Gloria Van Handel and Paula Doctor. Below, she confers with teacher John Goodrich. Sigrun thinks her psychology class is the most difficult and speech the most fun.

Father's Pangs of Guilt Produce Post-Divorce Devotion

BY ANN LANDERS
DEAR ANN LANDERS: Three of my closest friends are divorcees with children. For years I've been hearing about their problems. The solutions always seemed obvious and easy to me, since I was not emotionally involved. Six months ago I divorced my husband after 15 years of marriage. I have discovered to my amazement that those "easy solutions" aren't so easy.

Can you tell me why a man who has ignored his children throughout their lives suddenly gets attacks of paternal devotion after a divorce? What compels him to take his sons to baseball and football games, and fishing? I used to beg him to take them but he was always too busy or too tired.

Why does the divorced father buy his daughters ridiculously expensive and impractical gifts? Why does he telephone them "just to talk?" When he was living in the house he never bought them a thing and he couldn't think of a word to say. Why the change? Can you tell me in a word? — Mystified

Dear Mystified: In a word—guilt.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two of my girl friends were given engagement rings they didn't like. I was afraid the same thing might happen to me so I wrote and asked you if it was proper for a girl to go with her fiancé to help him select the engagement ring.

You said, "It is perfectly proper (and sensible, too) for a girl to help her fiancé select the engagement ring."

I hate to bother you again so soon but now I have another problem. If I go with my fiancé to select the ring is he supposed to put the ring on my finger right then and there? Do we kiss and get engaged in the store?

I really don't want to get engaged in front of strangers. Will you please tell me what is proper? Thank you. — Joy of Privacy

Dear Joy: The ring is only a symbol. If you must pinpoint the exact second of the official engagement I'd say it was when he asked you to marry him and you said "yes."

Since you are self-conscious about your fiancé placing the ring on your finger in the store, ask him to put the ring in his pocket and present it to you at home — privately.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am becoming concerned about our son. Howard turned 16 last week and is behaving peculiarly.

He has suddenly become very neat about his clothes and wants to get a haircut every two weeks. It used to be a chore to get him to go to the barber once a month. Now he even carries a comb in his pocket.

His clothes have to be just right, and the laundry is twice as big as it used to be. Is he going through a phase or what? I am baffled. — His Mother

Dear Mother: Yes, it's a phase — and with a little luck it should last about 50 years. Howard has discovered that girls are not just soft boys. They are a whole new sex.

Awkward and self-conscious? Unsure of yourself? Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "The Key To Popularity," enclosing with your request 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. (Copyright, 1964)

Curriculum Program Scheduled at Oshkosh University

OSHKOSH — Reports on a number of science curriculum projects will highlight a meeting of the Fox Valley Curriculum Study Council science committee at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at Reeve Memorial Union on the Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh campus.

Dr. Richard Netzel, chairman of the physics department, WSU-O, will report on progress made in implementing the American Association for the Advancement of Science Project, which recently announced that it had selected the Fox Valley Curriculum Study Council as a trial center for the new science curriculum it is developing. The science committee selected 17 elementary teachers to participate in Omro, Menasha and Oshkosh schools.

Other Reports

Other reports will include: Stanley J. Harman, Brussels, on information clearinghouse, science teaching center, University of Maryland.

Paul Ubbsen, Fond du Lac, elementary science study by Educational Services, Inc.

Clarence Wine, Winneconne, junior high science project by Princeton University.

School Project

Club Files Articles Of Incorporation

OSHKOSH — Articles of incorporation for K-B Club Inc., of 945 Adams St., Oshkosh, were filed last week with register of deeds Bernice L. Fuller. The club was formed to maintain "ideals of sportsmanship" and to encourage youth activities.

Registered agent for the non-stock club is Dale Lenz, Menasha. Initial directors are Leo Duchatschek, Victor Girens, Oscar L. Lenz, Ralph Esslinger and Joseph Robl, all of Oshkosh.

Fond du Lac Road Job Will End in 3 Weeks

Reconstruction of W. Johnson Street Will Eliminate Traffic Jam on Detour Routes

FOND DU LAC — Pouring of the final stretch of pavement in the widening and reconstruction of W. Johnson Street (State 23) was completed last week. The street will be opened from Main Street to U.S. 41 in three weeks.

Under consideration is whether part of the street, up to Military Road, should be opened earlier.

The concrete requires three weeks to cure, according to representatives of the Streu Construction Co., Two Rivers which had the contract for the 1½ mile project. Hedrich Construction Co., Chilton, had the bridge contract, and Bahr Construction Co., Oshkosh, had the storm sewer project.

Created Problem

The street had been closed to traffic since early summer. Traffic from Main Street to U.S. 41 was re-routed on Scott Street. The detour caused traffic and safety problems at the Scott Street, (County Trunk 000) intersection with U.S. 41.

W. Johnson Street was widened to a 48 feet from Main to Brook Avenue and 44 feet from Brook Avenue to Peters Avenue. It became a 24-foot wide roadway with wide shoulders when it reached the rural section east of U.S. 41.

The concrete slab is nine inches thick and rests on nine inches of gravel.

Construction crews are putting in top soil on terraces and tarring divider section cracks.

2 Fond du Lac Men's Estates Before Court

Charles D. Smith, Contractor, Leaves $92,234 in Trusts

FOND DU LAC — An estate totaling $92,234 was left by the late Charles D. Smith, Fond du Lac contractor, according to papers filed in the court of County Judge Jerold E. Murphy.

Smith, who died Feb. 22, left $5,200 in real estate, $71,570 in personal property and $15,463 in jointly-owned personal property.

His estate was divided into trusts for his widow, Pansy Smith, who now resides in Oshkosh. She is to dispose of one trust as she desires. The other trust, upon her death, is to go to two children, Olive McCoy, Neenah, and Donald H. Smith, Fond du Lac.

File For Probate

Filed last week with Judge Murphy was a petition for probate of the estate of the late Armand E. Bohn of Fond du Lac who died Sept. 9. His estate was estimated at $68,000 in personal property and $17,000 in real estate.

The petition names two sisters, a brother, four nieces, 21 friends, the Winnebago Lutheran Academy, St. Peter Evangelical Lutheran Church and Rienz Cemetery Association, all of Fond du Lac, as receiving bequests from the estate.

Sum for the church will be $2,500. The school will receive $500 and the cemetery association $200.

Stained Glass Windows give a colorful atmosphere to the interior of the church used by the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship at Oshkosh. The fellowship is in its second year at Oshkosh and uses the church owned by the Seventh-day Adventists at Church and Union avenues for its services. The church was built in 1899 by the St. John Universalist Society which had disbanded and sold the property to Seventh-Day Adventists in the early 1920s. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Universalist Church Group Now Has Meeting Place

Oshkosh Society Meeting Second Time in History at Old Structure

OSHKOSH — For the second time in its 65-year history the frame church structure at the triangular junction of Church and Union avenues, just east of Wisconsin Street, is serving as home for members of the Universalist belief.

Only now, these members are joined with the Unitarians in the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship which this month is beginning its second year of Sunday services.

Serving as chairman for the 1964-65 church year is Dr. David F. Conover of the biology faculty at Wisconsin State University-Oshkosh. He succeeds Richard N. Gregg.

Personal Religion

"Traditionally, Unitarians do not meet for regular worship services during the summer months," Dr. Conover said. "Our denomination emphasizes personal religious experiences through communion with nature as well as with fellow men."

As the Oshkosh fellowship, which has doubled its membership during the last year, meets in the church built by members of its denomination in 1899. At one time that group, known as "St. John Universalist Society," numbered some 115 families. By 1921 these families had disbanded and the church was sold to the Seventh Day Adventist Society, which still owns the building and has its Sabbath services on Saturdays.

"There is no connection between our Fellowship and that earlier Universalist Society other than sentiment," Dr. Conover remarked. "We enjoy pointing out the address why chose for their building was 'Union at Church'."

Members of the early Universalist organization included Marshall Harris, who later willed to the city the land for the present Public Library; Edward S. Hinman, one time city comptroller.

$4.5 Billion Value Set on Land, Buildings in District

14-County Fond du Lac Region Appraisal Includes Winnebago, Outagamie, Calumet Counties

BY ALLAN EKVALL
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

FOND DU LAC — Land and buildings in the 14-county area in east central Wisconsin are worth $4.5 billion. These counties parallel the Fox River and stretch along the Lake Michigan shoreline.

This amounts to 22 per cent of the entire property value of the State.

During the coming two weeks, these counties will be appraised of this equalized valuation and also of the property value ratio of each city village and town in a county to the county's property value total.

Ninety-two different uses are made of these equalized valuation figures, Donald J. Sherman, supervisor of assessments for the Fond du Lac district, which handles the work of the 14 counties, pointed out.

One use is to establish the bonding limit for any city, town, village or school district. Another establishes the percentage of state and county taxes each tax unit within a county is to pay. Determining the tax shares of each area in a joint school district is a third use.

$140 Million New

Sherman said new construction this year in the 14 counties comes close to $140 million which equals the combined total valuation of Waushara and Kauwaunee counties.

In most of the counties, agricultural lands were given a higher valuation on the basis of sales recorded for farm land in those counties. These counties include Winnebago, Outagamie, Calumet and Fond du Lac.

In two counties—Green Lake and Sheboygan — land values were raised considerably as the result of a mass physical appraisal made this year in those two counties.

For example, Sherman mentioned, in Green Lake County, Lake shore lots were found to be selling for $200 a front foot for just the land. A lot with 60-foot frontage was selling for $12,000.

One of his staff members met Thursday with Green Lake County Board members and said the real estate value in that county this year increased 24.76 per cent to a total this year of $101.2 million. The land value increase was more than $20 million.

Only $15 million of that increase was because of new buildings erected during the last year.

Costs, Expenses Filed by GOP In Winnebago

OSHKOSH — Receipts totaling $5,293 and expenses of $1,345 were listed with the register of deeds office by the Winnebago County Republican Party Friday by Joyce Laedike, party secretary.

The receipts include $4,471 from the State of Wisconsin Republican Party. The expense included county fair booth, postage, telephone expense and the annual corn roast held at Winneconne in August.

Expenses for the corn roast were listed as totaling $793 while donations and the sale of excess corn at the corn roast brought in $447.

Reviewing Final Equalized valuation figures for 14 counties in Northeastern Wisconsin are three members of the state property assessment office at Fond du Lac who this week will meet with county boards and county committees to advise them of their county's property valuation. Seated are Robert Vosen, left, who handles Winnebago and Outagamie County equalized valuations, and Donald J. Sherman, supervisor of assessments. Standing is Matthew Gravitz Jr., who handled Fond du Lac and Washington County property valuations. (Post-Crescent Photo)

Cited by Oshkosh Officials

Military Bearing of Drum Corps Attributed to Marine Sergeant

OSHKOSH — One of the newer and upcoming drum and bugle corps in the area is the K-Y Warriors of Oshkosh who have won acclaim for their marching and maneuvers.

If they give a military appearance, it isn't accidental, for the man responsible for their maneuvers is Gunnery Sgt. Eugene Thorn, an 18-year veteran of the Marine Corps and a former Marine drill instructor.

Transferred

Sgt. Thorn, who has been on the inspector-instructor staff at the Oshkosh Marine Corps Reserve center for three years, is being transferred to Camp Lejeune, N. C. where he will join a force reconnaissance unit. He was honored at a dinner last week by the K-Y Warriors Parents Club for his work with the drum and bugle corps.

Included in the presentation was a proclamation signed by Common Council President John Fitzgerald citing Sgt. Thorn for his volunteer work.

Sgt. Thorn started working the K-Y Warriors about 15 months ago after a member of the Marine reserve unit, who had been helping out, asked if one of the regular Marine staff would be interested in helping the Warriors. Thorn volunteered and has since worked one - night a week drilling the youngsters. Before competition they work every night.

"It was quite an experience," Sgt. Thorn admitted. "It was quite different working with boys 10 to 14 years old than with 18-year-old Marine recruits."

The same, he said, but it is harder to impress upon the youngsters the importance of minor details.

Last fall they added a "rookie" corps to the K-Y Warriors with the better ones being added to the regular corps this spring. They also added a girls flag - bearer unit to the drum and bugle corps.

Among the honors Sgt. Thorn has received in clude s being named to former President Harry Truman's honor guard at Quantico, Va., in 1950. He also served in the Korean War.

Although Sgt. Thorn is leaving the Warriors will not be left without a drill master. Gunnery Sgt. Charles Brookfield, who is replacing Sgt. Thorn at the Marine Reserve Center, also has agreed to take over Sgt. Thorn's work with the drum and bugle corps.

A native of Boston, Sgt. Brookfield also is an 18-year veteran with the Marines and comes to Oshkosh from Camp Lejeune. He is married and has three children and will make his home in Omro while assigned here.

troller; Arthur J. Barber, lawyer; Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson Bray; Carrie S. Lamb, a pioneer schoolteacher; A.C. McHenry, four times Oshkosh Mayor, and Psyche Flower, who later became Mrs. Alfred P. Swineford, wife of the second territorial governor of Alaska.

The present Fellowship was started about five years ago by Dr. Morton Nachlas and met for some time in the Eagles Aerie hall. It was formally recognized as a Fellowship by the American Unitarian Universalist Association in the spring of 1963.

"The main difference between a church and a fellowship," explained Dr. Conover, "is that the latter is lay-led. This puts a greater responsibility on the shoulders of each individual member, but there is much satisfaction to be gained from the very sense of participation."

Family worship services are held at 10:45 a.m. Sundays, followed by Sunday school at 11:15 a.m. Mrs. Robert Forman is director of religious education, assisted by Mrs. M. E. Deaton.

Dr. Conover also is Fellowship chairman for the North Central Council of the denomination. Besides large churches in Milwaukee and Madison, the Council consists of representatives from nine other Wisconsin Fellowships and one at Hancock, Mich. Included is the Fox Valley Liberal Religious Fellowship of Neenah-Menasha and the Fond du Lac Fellowship.

102 Years Ago

In September, Fond du Lac Recalls Its 'Great Indian Scare' of 1862

BY MAY AUGUSTYN

FOND DU LAC — Just 102 years ago this month Fond du Lac had the scare of its young life.

One September morning the residents of the pioneer town awoke to find their business streets jammed with horse-drawn vehicles of every description, carrying frightened settlers from the eastern part of the county.

They all told the same harrowing tale. Hundreds of Indians were descending on the town with fire and murder as their chief objectives.

The settlers in the eastern section of the county, they said, had already been murdered and their homes burned. They further warned that Fond du Lac would be next.

Reassurance

Prominent citizens such as Edward Beeson, Edward Pier, Curt Lewis, Dave Curran and other residents familiar with Indians, assured the frightened people that the rumor was ridiculous, and told them to return to their homes. The settlers who had come would not listen and more families continued to pour into town. They all repeated the same blood-curdling stories.

By noon when no Indians had appeared a company of men rode out to the eastern part of the county to see what was really happening. They traveled east for 12 miles and found no sign of Indians.

Another party of men rode in to Lake DeNeve, stopping at the Egbert Foster farm, two and one-half miles east of the present Eder Station. On the way the party had been informed that the family had been butchered and their crops and buildings burned, but they found the Foster home intact, surrounded by hysterical settlers who were certain they had seen their homes for the last time that morning.

"The more the Fond du Lac group tried to assure the settlers there were no Indians in the vicinity the more hysterical they became.

Straight Account

Mrs. DeNeve later called the whole incident the most absurd thing she had ever heard of, and said it was entirely caused by rumor. Who lit the first spark of that rumor was never revealed.

Mrs. DeNeve said, "Just to show how people lose control of themselves, this is what happened. One day in the fall of 1862, my six children came running home from school scared nearly to death. They were so frightened they could hardly speak. They made known that a neighbor was coming to take us into town.

"The neighbor and his family soon arrived, but in his fright and haste, he loaded only some of my children into his wagon. The others went to town with another neighbor. My husband and another son had gone to town early that morning and were startled to see the children on Main street and to hear the terrible stories of bloodshed and fire."

Mrs. DeNeve did not believe the stories for she could think of no place from which so many Indians could come. So she refused to leave her home when a neighbor, Mr. Haight, came for her. The man was so terrified that he forced her into his wagon and clattered madly off to town. Before they had gone a mile Mrs. DeNeve refused to go farther so Mr. Haight was obliged to let her out of his wagon. She found the family's clothes

Volunteer Guards Harbor In Fond du Lac

Gerald C. Mabie Uses Own Boat To Serve Sailors

BY DOROTHY RICHTER

FOND DU LAC — Fond du Lac's harbor master, Gerald C. Mabie of 11 E. McWilliams St., has answered eight or more emergency calls so far this boating season on Lake Winnebago. He uses his $13,000, 30-foot cabin cruiser, the Inceptor, that is docked at the municipal harbor.

Fond du Lac has no official marine police force. Mabie offered his boat and its services for lake rescue and police work. He is a member of the U.S. Power Squadron and the Coast Guard Auxiliary. He and his wife, Florence, who assists him, are licensed by the Federal Communication Commission.

Mabie came to Fond du Lac from Mason City, Iowa in 1929. After finishing his duties as a service manager for a Fond du Lac automobile dealer, he patrols the lake from about 6 to 10 p.m. each weekday and from 1 to 3 p.m. Saturdays and all day Sundays during the boating season.

On Alert

The Inceptor has stand-by service with city police and the county sheriff's department frequencies, two ship-to-shore-telephone systems in addition to Mabie's own base station facilities and a 27 megacycle band scattered all over the place when she reached home. The maid had been doing some laundry when the news of the Indians came. She threw the clothes in all directions and fled in terror with the other neighbors.

Mrs. DeNeve gathered up the clothes and kept a sharp lookout but saw no trace of Indians. Late in the afternoon groups of neighbors passed the DeNeve residence on the way home. They intimated, in a shameful manner, that they had been shopping in town that day. No one cared to discuss the preposterous incident.

So fizzled the great Indian scare of 1862. But the great scare has become a part of Fond du Lac's past and is always recounted when historical groups get together in the month of September.

Two Officers of the 3rd Battalion, 334th regiment (BCT), Oshkosh Army Reserve, will attend a 19-week career officers' course at Fort Benning, Ga. Capt. Harlan Quandt, 1600 N. for other communication. Mabie, who is a radio technician, installed the boats communication system.

The 8,700 pound 30-foot craft constellation is powered by twin 185 horsepower motors and is capable of speeds up to 36 miles an hour. The fuel tank carries 100 gallons of gasoline. For help, Mabie calls upon members of the Fond du Lac Yacht Club's Coast Guard Auxiliary whose commander is Pete Langolf, 301 Stowe St. For water rescue work, they can pick up a resuscitator at the fire department, about seven blocks from the dock. There are 13 members, all on 24 hour call.

On Sept. 4, two boys who started a trip across the lake to the west shore had their jaunt interrupted by a severe storm which capsized their 17-foot sail boat and left the boys clinging to its sides for nearly an hour before Mabie and Ralph Matesson, radio engineer for the county police, rescued them.

Langolf says it is the duty of his unit to prevent lake disasters by inspecting boats for safety measures such as possession of life jackets, proper lights and fire extinguishers. This season the Coast Guard Auxiliary inspected 250 boats.

Another preventative measure is the pram sailing program, put on by the yacht club. This year there were 120 youngsters, youngsters are taught how to age 9 to 16, who participated, handle a boat and the safety Ed Malone, 164 Rose Ave., is measures of sailing and good director of the program. The sportsmanship.

Equality of Library Service Opportunity

Outagamie County, like other counties in this area for that matter, is faced with a policy decision on the future direction it will take in providing library service for residents of the county.

The county board, in voting to end county aid to the eight public municipal libraries operating in the county, has reached a tentative decision that this no longer will be a county responsibility but that it will be the responsibility of the individual municipalities, cities, villages and towns.

The Appleton and Kaukauna library boards, which received the largest share of county aids in the past, faced now with the cutting off of those aids Jan. 1, have been forced to advise non-resident subscribers that they will have to pay a fee for library service effective next year. And Supervisor Eugene Kloes, speaking for the county Health, Education and Institutions Committee, has suggested that townships and villages negotiate their own separate agreements with existing libraries to purchase library service for their residents.

Library service today is intimately connected with educational services. The Appleton library in the past provided an extension library service with county funds to rural schools. But in addition rural residents could individually take advantage of city libraries for those reference works and outside reading which are an integral part of modern educational courses at the grade as well as the high school level.

In this context, the county board's decision runs exactly contrary to the philosophy of education in Wisconsin. The Wisconsin system of state aids to school districts was constructed on the theory that there should be equality of educational opportunity for all residents of this state regardless of place of residence.

Granted that library service is essential to modern education, equality of library opportunity within the county fits this philosophy. And such library service then should be primarily a county responsibility.

We should grant that the board of supervisors is trying to determine how this service can be provided at least cost to the taxpayers. But we believe the board errs in its belief that the provision of library service by each individual municipality will be the cheapest in the long run.

We believe instead that such a policy will lead to duplication of services, and that individual municipalities, particularly rural townships, will simply not be able to provide the level of service their residents need.

The trend is in just the opposite direction. Some 40 libraries in this area have been engaged in a study of how library services can be provided on a regional basis. The six largest in cities in this area have already agreed to reciprocal borrowing. Eventually this could mean that one library would specialize in reference works in one particular field, others in other fields.

The county board has agreed to re-evaluate this question in the budget studies it is now beginning. This is well and proper. And in that consideration the importance of fine library service to all residents of the county must be given at least as much weight as the cost factors involved.

Personalities Rather Than Issues in Campaign

Because no major issues have yet been raised in the presidential campaign which have greatly stirred public emotions, experienced observers are predicting that the election result will turn more on voter reaction to the personalities of President Johnson and Senator Goldwater. And in this connection it is the individual's view of Goldwater which appears as the dominant factor.

Thus far both candidates have declared that taxes should be reduced. The Republican candidate has decried Democratic spending and the vast expansion of federal authority, but he has not made this a major point of attack. There is a dispute over the control of nuclear weapons but the point is beyond the ken or interest of many voters.

In fact Mr. Goldwater has been spending a good deal of his television time and money in an effort to improve his image with the voter. His major emphasis has been defensive. He has sought to escape the warmonger label pinned on him by Democrats by speaking of peace. His appearances have been carefully arranged to present him as a calm, deliberate person rather than the impetuous man of action which came through during the nomination battle. His rabid supporters must be wondering what has happened to their fighting champion.

This impression of the reaction of voters to date is borne out in a telephone sounding of opinion in this area reported in today's edition. Those interviewed were not particularly concerned about the civil rights issue or about Viet Nam. Their comments more often concerned their opinion of the character of Mr. Goldwater.

Mr. Johnson is also working hard at his image and here he has the terrific advantage of portraying himself as President of the United States as well as candidate. He is the confident father to us all who will gladly assume the burden of solving our problems. He is about to embark on a rigorous schedule of appearances in some 13 states and his main purpose as he puts it is to "press the flesh." LBJ is not going to take a chance on relying on a front porch campaign from the White House. He's going out to meet the people, confident of his ability to win their confidence.

Surprisingly, Mr. Goldwater has not launched any major attack on the Johnson personality despite the fact that there would appear to be plenty of ammunition for such a fight. He has left this phase of the campaign to his running mate, Rep. Miller. And this has not improved Miller's stature in comparison with Senator Humphrey.

This newspaper has hopefully been awaiting a more thorough airing of vital national issues of which it believes there are many fitted for campaign debate. But more and more it appears the decision will be made on the basis of which candidate personally is better fitted for the presidency.

The Knowles Campaign

By all accounts the contest for the governorship will be another in a series of extremely close decisions involving the most important office on the Wisconsin ballot.

In our own appraisal, Warren P. Knowles, the Republican nominee, comes into the competition as one of the best informed, most experienced and practical leaders in state affairs his party has offered for the chief executive office in many years. Precisely because he has had a long and useful record in the legislative branch at the state capitol, moreover, he has acquired a personal acquaintance with more rank and file voters and public affairs leaders than most first time nominees for the place.

Yet this campaign has not yet engendered that spark and response that local politicians look for at this stage of the combat. One evident reason is that his approach to campaign discussion has been diffused to such an extent that it has not yet shown a principal theme, at least in the recognition of the average voter. In our view, he must soon condense his message into a reasonably short series of main propositions and indictments, to remain the position of the favorite in an election that is more important to his party than any the Wisconsin Republicans have conducted in a generation.

Gov. Reynolds, strenuously fighting for the second term which most governors of reasonable aptitude have won in the past, has found a certain weakness in his candidacy in Milwaukee County, that most sensitive of the normal centers of Wisconsin Democratic party muscle.

But the Republican foe would be rash to assume too much on the basis of the governor's showing there in the primary election. The governor will have the benefit of the impact of his total party campaign in the largest Wisconsin city which has shown an unswerving allegiance to the Democrats for many years.

The governor also has a considerable advantage in the fact that he occupies the high office of governor. Possession is a strategic benefit in such matters as publicity. The governor makes news in the routine of his executive office performance. His challenger must fight hard for the attention of the news wires, in competition with scores of others equally anxious.

Mr. Knowles is a man of splendid stature in private life, of rich experience in state government, of attractive personality. But his drive needs something it has not yet shown, in a campaign season in which the voters are so obviously uncertain and puzzled that positive forecasts will be reserved for the foolhardy.

County Library Appropriation Would Be Aid to City Taxpayers

Editor, Post-Crescent:

I recently wrote Appleton Supervisor Eugene Kloes asking him to correct the erroneous impression made by him in an interview published in your newspaper on Aug. 12, but he has not acknowledged my letter in any way.

Mr. Kloes raised a point in his interview that apparently a great many people do not understand. Therefore, I would like to emphasize again that an increased county library appropriation would not penalize the city taxpayer since his city levy for library purposes would be decreased more than his county tax would be increased. However, the taxpayers in political subdivisions not now supporting libraries would have their taxes increased to cover their fair share of library costs. But even at this increased cost, the library services provided these people would be at bargain rates as compared to operating their own libraries.

I feel that it is deplorable for the Outagamie County Health, Education and Institutions Committee to recommend that the county, especially one

'You South Americans didn't have to go to all that trouble. . . I'

Dentists Believes Krebiozen Should be Given Impartial Test

Editor, Post-Crescent:

I wish to commend the editors of the Post-Crescent, and more specifically Mr. Jay Joslyn, for the courageous and forthright presentation of the little publicized aspects of the Krebiozen controversy. During the past several months, and as recently as September 12th of this year, I have had the extremely edifying experience of spending many hours with Dr. Andrew C. Ivy and Dr. Stevan Durovic in their several research laboratories observing the techniques in the isolation of the anti-cancer drug, Krebiozen, engaging in exhaustive discussions concerning all aspects of the current controversy, and talking at length with terminal cancer patients, who many years ago had been given up as hopeless cancer victims and who were alive today because of what they are convinced is the result of Krebiozen therapy. It is a most impressive experience.

Like many Americans, I have a several fold reason for determining the truth about Krebiozen. During the past six months, I have lost three patients to the heinous ravages of cancer. A very dear friend of mine died within one month of his diagnosis of lymphosarcoma. And now my father has been diagnosed as having cancer of the prostate gland. Due to a legislative maneuver on the part of the Food and Drug Administration none of these unfortunate victims had or has had the opportunity to receive what is at worst a non-toxic, harmless substance, but which, if Dr. Ivy and Dr. Durovic and literally hundreds of cancer survivors can be believed, can be of inestimable value in the control of this dread disease. But above and beyond these very personal considerations lay some deep and inherent desire to know the truth. The truth must be as progressive and prosperous as this one is, discontinue its library appropriation. My thoughts go out to the young people whose townships, villages or parents, as the case may be, decide they cannot individually provide the library services which are so important to our educational processes today.

It was only last year that the services of the Lawrence College Library were lost to the young student. Now some of them are faced with another, even greater, loss.

While most of us are (or should be) thinking in terms of excellent regional library systems, our County Board Education Committee would like to think in terms of townships. Going backwards now will only mean that library services will be more costly in the future.

Instead of expanding the tax base in order to provide more and better library services for all the people of the county, our County Board Education Committee would force us to consider reducing the present service.

I am very disappointed with our elected county officials, who, in this case, do not seem to be concerned with the welfare of all the people in the county.

Joseph Steger Jr.
Member, Kaukauna
Public Library

obtained at all costs. This desire to know the truth is what impelled me to cast aside all preconceived prejudices and personal considerations, and go directly to the source of all the Krebiozen controversy. This desire led me to Dr. Andrew C. Ivy and Dr. Stevan Durovic.

I have personally heard professional men label Dr. Ivy as a 'senile old man,' 'a quack and a perpetrator of a heartless hoax,' 'a mercenary scientist who is placing monetary considerations above human values.' And Dr. Ivy has most recently been branded a 'communist' because for the past three years he has been asked to bring Krebiozen to Russia. It is my deep and unswerving conviction that all of these allegations are without any substance or bona fide foundation, but on the contrary are the result of prejudice, misinformation, and, above all the greatest crime against truth and justice, non-information or the lack of desire to become truly informed.

If Krebiozen is without benefit in the treatment of cancer, then it is not due to a lack of integrity or dedication or human values on the part of Dr. Ivy and Dr. Durovic. This is my deepest conviction. Another deep conviction is that Krebiozen be fairly tested at the earliest possible moment. Not a moment should be lost in the effort to obtain this test. It is appalling to know that the Food and Drug Administration which continues to be so grievously lax in enforcing countless toxic drugs to be widely distributed to the unsuspecting public has placed a ban upon a non-toxic and harmless and quite possibly beneficial anti-cancer agent to the possible detriment of literally thousands of cancer victims. And let us suppose, as one of my medical colleagues has suggested, that Krebiozen, when it works, works by persuasion. Is Krebiozen, then, a much greater transgression against human morality and dignity than the much touted sugar and water pill? It is true that we are dealing with cancer when we treat with Krebiozen. But it is also true that by far the highest percentage of the approximately five thousand cancer patients who have been treated with Krebiozen have been hopeless, terminal cases who have nothing left but to die in as dignified and painless a fashion as possible. Is hypnosis immoral? Is Christian Science immoral? Is psychotherapy immoral? But this is presupposing that Krebiozen when it is effective, acts by persuasion. If Krebiozen acts by persuasion then it is one of the most fantastically persuasive drugs in medical history. And there are literally hundreds of cancer patients alive today who have been persuaded that cancer is ineffective against them and that the words 'hopeless' and 'terminal' have no place in their vocabulary.

It is another one of my convictions that Krebiozen is beneficial in the management of cancer from a purely physiological standpoint. I believe this because I have talked with cancer victims whose demise had been predicted to have occurred years previously by medical science. I believe this because my personal contacts with Dr. Andrew C. Ivy and Dr. Stevan Durovic leave me with little alternative but to believe in their dedication and integrity.

It is heartening to know that fifteen senators and congressmen believe that the existing evidence concerning Krebiozen calls for an immediate fair testing of Krebiozen now. Among these fifteen men are numbered Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois, Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, and Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin. I quote from a letter written to me by Senator Proxmire: "Dear Dr. Esbensen: It's good of you to write. . . I feel very strongly that the public should know as much as possible about Krebiozen. As you know, Doctor, I am co-sponsor of the Senate Resolution calling on the Food and Drug Administration to give a full and complete hearing to Dr. Ivy and his group! . . . Signed William Proxmire U.S.S." And then this missive from Senator Hubert Humphrey: "I have urged and continue to urge that there be a definitive, impartial test of Krebiozen. As my readers know, the National Cancer Institute and its advisory experts do not believe that such a test is justified. Nevertheless, I feel that the members of the profession and laymen — who strongly support the drug — should be given the opportunity — once and for all — to attempt to confirm its clinical value under carefully agreed upon scientific conditions. Cancer is so terrible a scourge that we should not lose the opportunity for a test, so as to try to resolve the longstanding questions about the drug. Senator Paul Douglas — for whom I have the highest personal regard — has emphasized that Krebiozen supporters do not claim it to be a cure. They state that, at the minimum, the drug has been helpful in relieving pain in some cases and in slowing the progress of the disease in other cases. Whatever relief, however limited, Krebiozen may provide certainly merits being examined by medical science. Many patients and their loved ones strongly believe that their lives literally depend on the continued availability of this drug, at least on an experimental basis. To deny them access to supplies of the drug raises issues which have troubled many observers. Federal law must, of course, be complied with, but human considerations must never be forgotten."

And then finally this letter from Dr. Andrew C. Ivy: "Dear Dr. Esbensen: Greetings! I thank you for your excellent letter. I can thoroughly appreciate your feeling for the hopeless cancer patient in relation to the Krebiozen problem. The frustration and irrationality of the matter is heartrending, especially when it could be settled for the welfare of all by a cooperative scientific test. The solution is so simple and inexpensive; yet the opposition is a damant against the performance of a test. All that you can do is to work for a cooperative scientific test to settle the matter. The only thing you can do for 'hopeless' patients is to work for a test. The supply of Krebiozen is very low. But, if we could get the promise of a test, then there would be plenty of money or it would not be hard to raise. . . Sincerely, A. C. Ivy, Ph.D., MD." Dr. Ivy informed me that if the National Cancer Institute and the American Medical Association thought that a test for Krebiozen would thoroughly discredit him and Krebiozen the test would be forthcoming immediately, but that both of these groups know Krebiozen to be actively beneficial in cancer therapy and therefore do not want to run the risk of a fair test. Regardless of on whose side the truth reposes, I, for one, would like to have a fair test

Governor Candidates Debate Fiscal Policy At Taxpayers' Forum

BY JOHN TORINUS

The two candidates for governor in the Wisconsin election spoke successfully from the same platform Thursday when the Wisconsin Taxpayers Alliance sponsored a forum for state newspaper editors on the fiscal issues in the campaign. Governor Reynolds arose from a sick bed to make the first appearance, and while Warren Knowles did not arrive from the Goldwater appearance in Madison until after Reynolds had finished speaking, the latter remained in the audience awhile to hear his Republican opponent. Thus it was not a debate in the strict sense, but the only time in the campaign that both will appear on the same podium.

Torinus

I drew the following general conclusions from their combined remarks:

1. Governor Reynolds, after three campaigns in which he made his anti-sales tax stand his main weapon, is de-emphasizing tax and fiscal issues this year. He takes the attitude that the state is in much better financial condition than two years ago and that with continued prosperity forecast he see no great problem in meeting the increased expenditures that will be required in the next biennium with our present tax structure and rates.

2. Mr. Knowles directly disputes this. He believes the state does face a serious fiscal problem. He is advocating the complete abolition of the personal property tax as a spur to business and agriculture. He would make up the $70 millions this tax now produces by expanding the selectivity of the state sales tax, excluding from it only items of food, clothing and drugs.

3. Both men agree that despite what either could accomplish as governor state expenditures must rise. The biggest demand for additional money will be for educational purposes at all levels. But the cost of present programs and of state aids and shared taxes will rise as our population continues to increase.

4. Both candidates urge the state to amend its constitution to provide for a four-year term for governor. They point out that a governor's first year in office is practically taken up entirely with budget and taxation matters, and that his second year must be devoted primarily to getting reelected. There is little time for dispassionate reflection on future state problems and goals.

5. Mr. Reynolds has acquired a good deal of poise in his year and a half as governor. This derives principally from his not intimate knowledge of the affairs of the state. Mr. Knowles, of course, has long been a poised campaigner, and while he speaks somewhat softly and gently he can hit hard when he needs to.

Both candidates are quite realistic in their positions on the possibility of reducing state expenditures.

Governor Reynolds declared flatly that we have done nothing about economy in government "because we don't have the guts."

He repeats his favorite theme that 83 per cent of the tax moneys raised in Wisconsin are spent by local units of government, and that this is the most fruitful field for cost cutting.

He advocates a three-point program in this direction:

1. Modify the structure of state government by providing a four-year term for governor, better enabling him to oppose power groups in tackling economics. Create a cabinet structure through which the governor would gain administrative control of the state's 80 independent agencies.

2. Adopt an honest debt policy. Amending the constitution to allow state indebtedness he believes would save one to one and one-half million dollars a year in interest.

3. Modernize local government. This would include a complete revision of state aids and shared tax formulas. He stressed the need particularly for modernizing county government.

Knowles is hitting hard at the lag between the growth in the state's economy and the increase in government expenditures. He hopes to avoid any increase in state income and property taxes by "exhausting every possible means of holding down the rate of increase in state expenses," but he stresses that he does not advocate defaulting on any of the real needs of our people or eliminating any present programs.

He recommends a program to stimulate economic growth by:

1. Eliminating the personal property tax, avoiding any income tax increases, providing for simplification in state income tax reporting and preserving the deduction to corporations for federal income taxes paid.

2. Holding state expenditures within present tax structures and rates.

3. Reexamining formulas for state aids and shared taxes.

4. Providing local governments with alternative methods of raising revenues beyond the property tax.

5. Considerable increasing the state's efforts in the field of occupational education.

Actually, Barry wants a TV debate. It's LBJ who says he'll cross that bridge when he comes to it. He expects to get there about Nov. 4.

Lacking any other opponent, Goldwater bought half an hour's time to debate with himself. The opinion of impartial judges was that it was not a fair match.

OSHKOSH — If you're driving down the highway and see a red and white "Mouster" with little pairs of eyes peering out at you, don't be alarmed. Take another look and you might recognize the Donald Below family of 1633 Doemel St.

It's not that the Belows like to scare people—they're just having a ball in their new, 10-ft. high, tri-level camper. Since they got the camper "home" on July 24, the ambitious travelers have covered 4,000 miles in the United States and Canada. Their most recent excursion was a 1,620 mile journey around Lake Superior.

"We searched for a year for a self-contained camper that would sleep six," Mrs. Below recalls. "We went to stores, wrote for catalogs and looked from Fond du Lac to Appleton. Finally we found a dealer in Waukesha who could get this kind of camper. A fellow in Milwaukee had one and when we looked at his we fell in love with it, hook, line and sinker."

Mr. Below picked the 1,850-pound unit up on a Friday and the family took off the next day for Shawano County Park. "He was so anxious to use the camper, he didn't bother to get the instructions and we didn't know how anything worked," Mrs. Below laughs. "The first time I let the water out of the sink it backed up in the bathroom!"

Compact & Tasty
There are many canned goods and dehydrated foods in the camper's cupboards. "These foods are tasty and they don't take a lot of space," the busy mother remarks. There are also plenty of plastic dishes on hand and a hefty supply of their favorite beverage. For safety while traveling, cupboard drawers don't open unless they are lifted up and then pulled out.

The camper sleeps six to eight and has a 30-gallon water tank under the sink, a 20-gallon septic tank, a four cubic-foot refrigerator that runs on gas or electricity, a gas stove with oven and broiler, a thermostatically controlled furnace, a linen closet, beds with storage space and an intercom system.

Mrs. Below rides in the camper with the three children: Billy, 5; Lori, 7; and Toby, 12. "Don can drive without being disturbed and if he sees something ahead that might be of interest he can tell me about it over the intercom," Mrs. Below remarks.

Snows and Warm
The Belows left Aug. 10 on their Lake Superior trip and were often greeted by rain and wind along the way. "To keep the kids entertained I have a toy box filled with books, crayons and games. We have fun playing pass-word, checkers and cribbage," Mrs. Below declares. The children were disappointed when they didn't see a "Royal Mountie" in Canada, but they loved the sign that read: "58 miles of Moose crossing" near Wawa, Canada.

A Day Off
What did the family think of their first long trip? "We can't wait to go again," Mrs. Below comments. "Campers are so wonderful and helpful. They all have the same things in common. No one really misses radio and television when they can have the soothing stillness of the woods." She indicated that the smell of bacon and coffee in the early morning isn't hard to take either.

BY TOM RICHARDS

Well, we've got another Miss America, haven't we? I watched on television as Vonda Kay Van Dyke, Miss Arizona, was given the honor in Atlantic City.

She has brown hair, brown eyes. She is 5-6, 124 pounds, measures 36-24-36. She is attractive and talented.

As she walked down the runway carrying an armload of roses, tears streamed from her eyes.

Matter of fact, she was crying so hard, she even had trouble with her automatic, push-button smile.

I think she was crying because she was able to hear Bert Parks singing.

There was a football game in Kimberly, awhile back that must have been pretty inspiring. At least, according to two contributions I got, it made comedians of a couple of youngsters.

One, a first grader, was at the game with his parents when Wayne Hull, elementary school principal, passed the family and greeted the father, whom he knew.

As he walked by, the six-year-old piped, "I know that guy. He goes to my school."

The other boy, an eight-year-old, watched awhile before he commented, "Boy they sure have some good fumlbers on their team."

The other one is about the two potatoes who got married. Sure enough, one day they had a little baby girl potato. Little Sweet Potato grew to be a lovely thing.

"One day," she said, "I'm going to marry David Brinkley."

"You can't do that," her parents said.

"Why not?" she asked.

"Because," the status-conscious parent potatoes said, "he's just a common 'tater."

No Time for Beach Boys to Visit Beach!

BY SIDNEY SCOOP

The Beach Boys have a problem.

They can't find time to go to the beach anymore.

Now this may appear to be a minor crisis in my life and in yours, but this is not the case with the Beach Boys, according to Brian Wilson, one of the three brothers in the group.

Brian, who told me the quintet would make its first appearance on "The Ed Sullivan Show" today over CBS-TV, (Sullivan's first show of the new season) said, "Beach Boys is big business; not as big business as Beatles, mind you, but big business nevertheless. We're the top selling group in this country (at the moment anyway), and the more popular we get, the less freedom we have."

Big Surfers

"Before we got the group together," said the youngest brother, Carl, "we were all big surfers. We were used to picking up our boards at the drop of a hat and heading straight for the beach. Now it's practically a national holiday when one of us takes off to go to the beach, and when we all go together, it's a miracle."

Carl and Brian's brother, Dennis (the middle) Wilson told me that when they first got together they didn't expect anything to come of it. "It was all just a big game," he pointed out, "We liked to sing and decided we should do something about it."

"Surfing," broke in Mike Love, "is what brought us together and surfing music is what's keeping us together now that we don't get a chance to surf. The first year or so we still had all the time in the world to do whatever we wanted. The last couple of years have been a different story. If we're not on the road, we're kept busy with interviews, personal appearances, recording sessions, getting together to work out new songs, business meetings and getting ready for the next tour."

Formed Corporation

Al Jardine, the fifth member of the group, told me they've formed a corporation in which each has an equal say about what they do and where they go. "We found it was the only way since there are so many of us," Al said. "We are now in merchandising with Beach Boys tennis shoes, sweatshirts, tee-shirts and surfboards."

Brian does the producing on most of the record sessions, and besides his duties for the Beach Boys, finds time to write songs and arrange for other recording artists.

So you see, Beach Boys really is big business.

Outlook

For 1964-65

BY JAMES AUER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

The contenders have lined up at the post; the American viewer has signaled the start of the race with a twist of the wrist, and now, at last the 1964-65 edition of the annual network TV sweepstakes is underway.

No less than 33 new shows will be competing for front-running position this autumn by the time all of the networks' new offerings have had their premieres.

The new season officially began Sunday, Sept. 13, with the initial airing of NBC-TV's suspense series, "The Rogues." It will be in full swing by Oct. 5, when "Profiles in Courage," based on the book by the late John F. Kennedy, is introduced following the Presidential election.

Stakes High

The pot is large; the stakes are high; the possibility of success or failure, staggering.

In all, ABC is offering 14 new programs; CBS, 12, and NBC seven. Of the 34 programs renewed from last season, 22 have been repositioned for, it is hoped, greater audience strength.

The success of situation comedies in general last season has brought about an upsurge of comedy production. Of the incoming efforts, 22 (24 if NBC's 90-minute "90 Bristol Court" is considered three shows) may be broadly classified as comedies.

The remaining new shows cover a broad spectrum of audience interest—variety "The Entertainers," with Carol Burnett and Bob Newhart; horror, "The Munsters" and "The Addams Family;" drama, "The Reporter" and "Slattery's People."

There are no big-money quiz shows, no new dramatic anthology shows without continuing characters.

Instead, viewers will discover new programs with such familiar labels as "Voyage to the Bottom of the Sea;" "Peyton Place," and "12 o'clock High," all adapted from motion pictures of proven popularity.

They will also meet again such favorites of past seasons as Dick Van Dyke, Andy Griffith, Lucille Ball, the Farmer's Daughter, the Cartwrights of "Bonanza" and the Alfred Hitchcock hour.

Hitchcock, Danny Thomas and Jack Benny have made the trek from CBS to NBC. Joey Bishop has made the opposite journey, from NBC to CBS.

Feature Films

There will be feature films—plenty of them. NBC has scheduled both Wednesday and Saturday night movies at 8 p.m. ABC returns to its familiar 8 p.m. Sunday night movie.

The films will be recent United Artists, 20th Century Fox and Paramount productions, many in color. NBC will also present "See How They Run," the first full-length movie intended primarily for TV. It stars John Forsythe, and was filmed by Universal-TV.

If the forthcoming season lacks the electricity of last year—with fewer first-magnitude stars making their first attempt to succeed with the great TV audience—it nevertheless offers the dependable staples of family entertainment.

There is a discernible trend toward fantasy and tongue-in-cheek adventure featuring large-scale sleuths and villains of the James Bond mold. Robert Vaughn plays a Bond-style intelligence operative in "The Man from U.N.C.L.E."

Richard Basehart descends weekly to the bottom of the sea on a super-submarine sent on the most sensitive of missions.

Johnny Quest, a pre-teen hero created by the Hanna-Barbera cartoon studios, copes bravely with an assortment of broadly-sketched villains as he goes about the earth with his scientist father.

On the following pages, VIEW offers a comprehensive survey of the new TV season. Separate articles are devoted to the networks' comedy, dramatic, adventure and horror shows, as well as to the stars who appear in them.

A complete log of the coming week's television shows, weekly and daily, may be found at the center of this special issue.

TV Outlook for COMEDY

Comedy is king in the 1964-65 television season.

Of all 96 shows carried by networks during the evening hours, 46 are comedies. Of the 46 comedies, 22 are new this year.

But statistics don't convey the kind of laughter TV's comics will be creating, or the audience at which they are aiming.

Let's consider the stars first.

CBS has the biggest stable of established comics. Lucille Ball, Dick Van Dyke, Danny Kaye and Andy Griffith will be returning in substantially the same formats with which they won high ratings during 1963-64.

Ray Walston is back as "My Favorite Martian," and Joey Bishop is joining CBS in the 8:30 p.m. Sunday slot, following "My Living Doll," starring Bob Cummings and Julie Newmar, another of the network's new offerings.

Lovely Robot

In this half-hour outing, Cummings plays a scientist who creates a lovely robot, played by Miss Newmar. The laughs follow from there.

CBS' new comedy shows include "Many Happy Returns," featuring John McGiver as the manager of a department store's complaint department; "The Cara Williams Show," in which the lovely Cara portrays the red-haired half of a married couple employed by a firm that doesn't employ married couples; and "Gomer Pyle, U.S.M.C.," an offshoot of "The Andy Griffith Show," in which Gomer takes on the entire Marine Corps as a recruit.

Two other CBS entries, "Gilligan's Island" and "The Baileys of Balboa," seek to emulate the success of the broadly popular situation comedies "Beverly Hillsbillies" and "Petticoat Junction."

"Gilligan's Island," which will be seen at 6:30 p.m. Thursdays on Channel 2, on a delayed broadcast basis, concerns a group of seven people who are aboard a charter boat when it is shipwrecked during a routine sightseeing tour. Bob Denver stars as Gilligan, the total crew of the good ship Minnow.

Alan Hale is the skipper; Jim Backus is millionaire Thurston Howell III, and Tina Louise is Ginger, a glamorous movie starlet.

"The Baileys of Balboa," pre-empted by Channel 2 during the football season for the "Vince Lombardi Show," will be seen here later in the year.

The show stars Paul Ford as Sam Bailey, salty captain of a charter boat, and Sterling Holloway as his crew. Ford is engaged in a constant feud with Commodore Cecil Wyntoon, haughty yachtsman. There's a love interest when Cecil's daughter, Judy Garne, becomes romantically involved with Sam's son, Les Brown Jr.

Hour Long Revue

Comedy will also be a highlight of "The Entertainers," an hour-long revue starring Carol Burnett, Bob Newhart and Caterina Valente. Producer Joe Hamilton (Miss Burnett's husband) promises that the show will have no rigid format, but instead will simply feature a group of talented people who will "entertain." Each of the stars will appear on three out of four programs.

NBC has a triple-threat up its sleeve for Monday evenings. "90 Bristol Court" is a 90-minute show consisting of three 30-minute situation comedies, all set in a Southern California motel.

The comedies — "Karen," "Harris Against the World," and "Tom, Dick and Mary"—mark a programming innovation in which the stories are woven

TV Outlook for DRAMA

If you're looking for hard-hitting drama, you'll find it on television this season.

Although such widely-acclaimed anthology shows as the Richard Boone hour and "Playhouse 90" are no longer in evidence, plenty of contemporary dramas with continuing characters have appeared to take their place.

"Bob Hope Presents," an hour-long production alternating original plays with comedy specials, promises to continue to maintain its high level of quality with 25 serious scripts.

Show Returning

Also being continued into the new season are "Mr. Novak," with James Franciscus and Dean Jagger encountering problems typical of today's high school system; "Perry Mason," with the great attorney defending a variety of the accused; "The Defenders," father-and-son team of attorneys, exploring a different controversial theme each week; "Dr. Kildare," with Richard Chamberlain and Raymond Massey roaming the halls of a big-city hospital, and "Ben Casey," with Vince Edwards as the terrible-tempered Dr. Casey.

Challenging these long-running favorites are an intriguing assortment of new dramas, as well as a hold-over show with a revised format.

A veteran show with a new title and new continuing characters is "The Doctors and the Nurses," formerly "The Nurses." Michael Tolan and Joseph Campanella have joined Shirl Conway and Zina Behune as stars of this dramatic program, set in a large metropolitan hospital.

Tolan and Campanella portray two different types of doctors who approach medicine from individual standpoints. Tolan plays a young resident, Dr. Alex Tazinski, who frequently finds himself at odds with American medicine. Campanella, as Dr. Ted Steffens, is attending physician on the neurological staff who is beset by moral doubts.

Dramatic Series

Craig Stevens returns to network TV as Mike Bell, a successful and sophisticated New York public relations man, in "Mr. Broadway." Each week Stevens, who lives in an expensive Manhattan town house and wears suits costing $250 each, becomes involved with his p.r. clients in scenes filmed at some of the city's most fashionable places. An impressive number of marquee names have been signed for guest star roles.

'Dr. Kildare'

The question, "What makes Danny Taylor run?" will be answered on "The Reporter," new full-hour dramatic series starring Harry Guardino in the title role. Taylor, as portrayed by Guardino, is an aggressive young newspaperman on a New York daily.

His great zest for his profession leads him to total physical and emotional involvement in every story he covers. Garry Merrill co-stars as Taylor's city editor. The series was created by Jerome Weidman, distinguished novelist and playwright.

James Moser, creator of "Ben Casey," has come up with an entire milieu for "Slattery's People," starring Richard Crenna as a young state legislator. Moser spent two years studying a state legislature at work, then translated his findings into the stories viewers will see on CBS at 9 p.m. Mondays.

Dramatic incidents in the lives of airmen both on and off duty during World War II are portrayed in "12 O'Clock High," starring Robert Lansing as Brigadier General Frank Savage of the 918th Bombardment Group, 8th Air Force, based in England.

Its weekly hour-long segments focus on the men flying B-17s in saturation daylight bombing raids on Nazi-occupied Europe. John Larkin also stars in the series, with Frank Overton and Lew Gallo.

Unusual Experiment

Perhaps the most unusual experiment of the season is "Peyton Place," first serial-type drama to be offered twice-weekly, Tuesday and Thursday at 8:30 p.m. on network TV. Based on the best-selling novel by Grace Metalious, it stars Dorothy Malone as Constance Mackenzie and Mia Farrow as her daughter, Alison.

Warner Anderson plays the local newspaper publisher, who keeps tabs on the romantic indiscretions of the residents of Peyton Place, and Ryan O'Neil is the troubled playboy, Rodney.

If "Peyton Place" succeeds in attracting a large, continuing audience, we can expect that more serial drama will be brought to the prime-time evening hours.

Taking a tongue-in-cheek attitude toward the deriding of the James Bond-style intelligence agent is "The Man from U.N.C.L.E." Robert Vaughn plays top cloak-and-swagger agent Napoleon Solo, whose assignments take him from Africa to the Arctic.

"U.N.C.L.E.," incidentally, isn't a man, it's an organization—secret in nature, and forever fighting the forces of evil around the globe.

TV Outlook for ACTION

Where do most viewers dial for escape and relaxation? To Westerns and mysteries, of course. And these hardy TV perennials are available once again following a summer of re-runs.

Returning to the Western locales where the living is far from easy are "Wagon Train," "Bonanza," "The Virginian," "Rawhide" and "Gunsmoke." No new Westerns with the exception of frontier drama "Daniel Boone," are being introduced this season.

David Dotort, producer of "Bonanza," reports that the Cartwright clan will have deeper family crises this year than in the past.

"The boys are growing up, and they'll be faced with greater adult problems," says Dotort. "But the show will continue to point up the moral importance of strong family ties. And there'll be comedies. We'll continue to show the lighter side of the old West."

"The Virginian" enters its third season with James Drury in the title role and Lee J. Cobb playing Judge Henry Garth, owner of the Shiloh ranch.

This year will find a new face around the Garth place, when Clu Gulager joins the action as Emmett Ryker, the hard-as-nails Deputy Sheriff who seems much too fast with a gun to have always been on the side of the law.

Now in its eighth season, "Wagon Train" again stars John McIntyre as the wagonmaster, guiding emigrants on the long and rugged trek from St. Joseph, Mo., to California. Robert Fuller plays scout Cooper Smith. Frank McGrath, Terry Wilson and Michael Burns are featured.

"Wagon Train" has returned to the 60-minute format for the 1964-65 season, and is no longer telecast in color.

Fess Parker, best-known as Walt Disney's "Davey Crockett," has changed characterizations and is now portraying another frontier notable, "Daniel Boone." Parker and Patricia Blair, who plays his wife, head a cast that features Ed Ames as the pioneer's Indian friend, and Albert Salmi as another of Boone's companions.

'The Rogues'

On the suspense front, the most intriguing newcomer is undoubtedly "The Rogues," starring David Niven, Charles Boyer, Gig Young and Robert Coote as a family of brilliant con men. Known collectively as the Fleming-St. Clairs, the family functions on a world-wide basis.

True to tradition, the Rogues choose their targets only from those who can afford to be robbed, or deserve to be. It's not how much you steal, they firmly state, but how you play the game.

"The Alfred Hitchcock Hour," a TV mystery staple for many seasons, makes the jump from CBS to NBC, where it is aired at 9 p.m. Monday.

"The Fugitive," weekly cliff-hanger in which David Janssen continues his flight from Inspector Gerard, and continues his search for the one-armed man guilty of slaying his wife, continues at 9 p.m. Tuesday.

However, "Burke's Law," ABC's other top-rated suspense show, has been moved from its Friday night spot to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday. Aaron Spelling, the producer, promises to continue his policy of using loads of guest stars as suspects in this tongue-in-cheek detective series starring Gene Barry and Gary Conway.

Top guest stars will continue to appear on Suspense Theater as this color series continues in its 9 p.m. Thursday spot.

Barry Takes Stump On Campaign Trail

BY ARTHUR EDSON

EN ROUTE WITH GOLDWATER (AP) — In Eugene, Ore., Julie Keith, a cornetist for Sheldon High School band, had Sen. Barry Goldwater autograph her hand.

Proudly holding up "Barry" for all to see — Goldwater uses a brush-stroke Japanese pen for these chores — Julie said excitedly:

"I'm not going to wash it until he gets to be president."

On Atlanta's famed Peachtree Street a group of teen-agers had their arms in slings with this explanation:

"We'd give our right arm for Goldwater."

Along with the dedicated, the serious, the curious and the cheering crowds, there was an unusual reminder that politics has at least two sides.

Other Side

In Klamath Falls, Ore., a defecting dachshund came to a Goldwater rally wearing a kelly green sweater and this slogan: "I'm Long For Lyndon."

In Minneapolis, after a rousing Goldwater plea for law and order in the cities, his followers rushed the stage and snatched at a large bouquet of gladiolas.

So the 1964 presidential campaign, Republican Barry Goldwater against Democrat Lyndon B. Johnson is in full cry.

Much Feeling

Not since the early days of Franklin D. Roosevelt has there been such feeling.

Those for Goldwater think he alone can change the course of history and save the nation from what they believe will otherwise become a fully socialized, centralized government.

Those against Goldwater are as loudly certain that his election would be unmitigated disaster, at home and abroad.

Let's look at the way the Republican candidate is going about the business of battling for the presidency.

"I realize," Goldwater said recently, "that it (the presidency) is the most challenging job in the world."

Gimmicks

In reaching for this challenging job, he is using all the latest electronic inventions to spread the Goldwater gospel that the country must achieve plainer, simpler governmental ways.

With the gadgets on his plane, Goldwater can keep in constant touch with his vice presidential running-mate, Rep. William E. Miller. If he chooses, Goldwater can hold a small news conference and have it filmed while in flight.

But it isn't only that these modern improvements are available; it's more that Goldwater delights in them.

One morning in Seattle his caravan dashed away from his hotel early — unheard of in presidential campaigns — leaving behind two newsmen trying to gulp a cup of coffee. The reason for hurry: Goldwater's amateur radio set wasn't working, and he wanted to tinker with it.

Almost every day he will proudly refer to his campaign plane, the "Yai Bi Ken," Navajo for "House in the Sky."

This Boeing 727 jet is quite a plane.

On the flight from Great Falls, Mont., to Minneapolis a message was chalked on the blackboard up front:

"Present ground speed, 693 m.p.h. Help!"

The 727 is designed for short runways, making it particularly valuable for candidates who wish to visit smaller cities.

A jet pilot himself, Goldwater admires the technique used on the Yai Bi Ken. The moment the plane touches the ground, the brakes are jammed on, the flaps are opened, the power thrust is reversed, and the plane screeches down to taxiing speed.

This shakes up unjet-minded passengers, but pilots must be eternally entranced with the luxury of all that unused runway.

3 Compartments

The plane is divided into three unequal compartments.

Nearest the cockpit are the senator's quarters, complete with bunks in case he wants to rest.

Next come 20 first class seats for staff members. These may include everyone from Denison Kitchel, 56, Goldwater's campaign manager and close friend, to stenographers or Mrs. Goldwater's hairdresser, almost a necessity on these windblown airstrips. Mrs. Goldwater, neatly dressed, neatly coiffured, is introduced as "Peggy" at nearly every meeting.

In the rear, where three seats snuggle on each side of the aisle, ride the 54 reporters and overflow members of the senator's staff.

Goldwater likes to refer to the plane as "this fabulous bird," but those who go steerage are not quite so laudatory. Work can be done, if the elbow-to-elbow reporters remember to shift their typewriter carriages in unison.

But the plane travels fast, the time in the air is short, and, as the saying goes, it beats walking.

Pay Way

Reporters pay their own way. At $3,660 a seat, newspapers, magazines and broadcasting companies are putting up almost $200,000 of the $279,800 it costs to lease the plane from American Airlines.

Not much fraternization takes place on the Yai Bi Ken.

Karl Hess, 41, a Goldwater speech-writer who looks like a Buddha and laughs like a worldly Santa Claus, drifts back occasionally to exchange jokes with reporters.

Paul F. Wagner, 47, the news secretary, is always available.

Quiet and cigar-puffing, Wagner has the advantage of remaining calm in quasi-turmoil. His disadvantages are that neither he nor his assistant, Vic Gold, ever saw a campaign trip until this one, and that neither is a longtime confidant of the candidate.

Security

Reporters frequently glance up and see a Goldwater security agent — he has two with him at all times — making his way down the aisle, his coat off and his pistol and ammunition showing.

Security measures are much more noticeable than they were four years ago.

"Since Kennedy was killed," Wagner said, "everybody is scared to death."

Goldwater, usually in shirt-sleeves, comes out of his compartment to visit his staff, to grab a sandwich from the galley, or to pursue another of his hobbies, photography. He snapped Mt. Ranier as the plane whistled by.

Reporters are not allowed to go forward.

Approachable

The obliging Wagner totes questions to him, and Goldwater, a most approachable politician, can usually be reached for comment at airport stops.

Goldwater often remarks that on these flights he gets a chance to look at the newspapers. If he is a bookworm, neither he nor his staff mentions it. In this area at least the rival camps appear about even. Many adjectives have been applied to Lyndon Johnson, but "bookish" isn't among them.

Anyone who lours with Goldwater can't help but be surprised at the casual, almost carefree air that Goldwater wears most of the time.

Look back four years: Richard M. Nixon, frowning, concentrating on every detail; John F. Kennedy, so full of nervous energy that after a stop he would dash on to his plane, throw off his coat and pound his fist into a palm repeatedly as he let off steam.

Coolly Played

Whether Goldwater is shaking hands along the fence at airports, or being pushed by those trying to squeeze closer in Chicago's Polish Museum, or speaking in a giant hall, he appears to play it coolly.

Nearly everyone has noticed that Goldwater's words read more harshly than they sound when he says them.

His followers usually laugh approvingly, though, at the way he slowly drags out "Lyndon Baines Johnson."

Years on the platform have given Goldwater assurance when the unexpected arises.

"Don't worry about a little rain on an Arizona," Goldwater said in a chilly mist at the Great Falls, Mont., fair grounds. "We always have to travel to get our water — and we enjoy it."

As if encouraged, the rain fell faster.

"I know it's beginning to sprinkle again, and I enjoy it," Goldwater said. "If it sprinkles any harder I can't see my notes. I should have worn my glasses without the glasses in them. They're just like Lyndon Johnson's programs; they don't work either."

Turns Trick

Nor was Goldwater disconcerted in Seattle when some Democratic prankster, with great ingenuity, managed to sneak in two balloons, inflate and launch them with a big "Johnson '64" streamer just as he started to speak.

As an angry buzz swept through the audience, the balloon drifted to the front where no one could possibly miss it. When it finally was pulled down, the crowd gave its loudest cheer of a cheery night.

Goldwater remained unperturbed.

"You know," he said, "that reminds me, seeing that sign fall down, right here in Seattle when we had a Defense Department that was a Defense Department you turned out aircraft that shot down a lot of enemies — and you're going to do it again."

Thus his ad lib supported a familiar Goldwater argument that the armed bomber should continue to have an important role in defense.

Advance Plans

Wherever Goldwater has gone, his crowds, for the most part have been good. Often the faithful come by special bus. In Montana a check of license plates showed many had driven more than 100 miles through bad weather for the occasion.

Crowds aren't entirely spontaneous. Both parties use advance men who go ahead to smooth details, to whip up enthusiasm, to arrange for publicity.

On Goldwater's visit to San Diego and Los Angeles, five advance men cleared the way. They viewed their labor as highly successful. Everything went moderately smooth, and 53,000 paid $1 apiece to see the show at the Los Angeles baseball park in Chavez Ravine.

No Hoarding

Normally when you're with a candidate you sense that he is

Billie Sol Estes Tries Quiet Life

BY FINIS MOTHERSHEAD

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — Billie Sol Estes, whose West Texas financial empire crashed in a national scandal, now lives a quiet but busy life here, fighting attempts to put him in prison and interesting himself in dozens of potential new projects.

The boyish-looking tycoon, not yet 40, no longer has the $150,000 house in the little town of Pecos. Although bankrupt, he resides now in a $50,000 home, drives an air-conditioned Cadillac, and occasionally relaxes on a lawn sloping down to a private dock and fishing pier.

There is little time for relaxation. Estes is appealing two prison sentences against him, and further trials lie ahead. Frequent trips take him away from the handsome lakefront home in an exclusive Abilene subdivision, and his telephone rings constantly.

While avoiding direct comment on most matters, Estes and his comely blonde wife Patsy make no bones about wanting to live quietly and to maintain a normal home atmosphere for their five children — four daughters and a son ranging from 7 to 16 years old.

Campaign

Whether he is able to keep his name out of the current political campaign, however, may be a matter wholly outside his control.

For one thing, Sen. Barry Goldwater, the Republican presidential nominee, has said the GOP is certain to air the Billie Sol Estes and the Bobby Baker cases anew before the November election.

For another, an individual close to Estes pictures parts of West Texas as "literally alive with reporters and investigators asking politically slanted questions" of people who know and hoarding his rockets, blasting off one today, carefully saving another for tomorrow.

But not Barry Goldwater.

In Boise, Idaho, he announced he would attack the Democrats for enlarging (and, he claimed, endangering) the Social Security System. He did. But first he attacked the Supreme Court's decision on legislative apportionment. Each is complex and important enough for a major talk in itself.

In Oregon, Ill., where the region's No. 1 product, sweet corn, was being celebrated with a mammoth corn boil, Goldwater announced he would give a summation of his campaign thus far. He did. But then he launched into an attack on the Americans for Democratic Action and the Democratic vice-presidential candidate, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey.

Relaxed Plan

If Goldwater appears relaxed, there's a reason. His campaign has been planned that way. Ideally, his trips will be held to four days a week, with four stops a day, plus the big pitches on national television. Most candidates attempt far more.

Goldwater doesn't look at opinion polls as frequently as does the President — who carries copies in his pocket, and office downtown again," she sighed, with a good-humored grimace. "the way people keep phoning. We even had an unlisted phone awhile for our daughters (two are teen-agers), but everybody seemed to learn it without any trouble."

More Relaxed

Estes, black haired and bespectacled, looks physically trim and much more relaxed than during his 1962 and 1963 trials on charges of swindling and fraud.

He displayed interest but did not seem disturbed at the government's current move to revoke a $100,000 appeal bond and put him behind bars at once.

"As far as I know, my lawyers will handle that," he said. The government contends that since the U.S. Court of Appeals has refused to set aside his 15-year sentence for mail fraud and conspiracy, there is some question whether the bond still assures his availability pending appeal to the Supreme Court.

Additional bonds totaling $40,000 have been posted for Estes in state cases, including his conviction and eight-year sentence on a swindling charge. This one also is being appealed.

His next trial is set for Nov. 9 in Dallas. In this case Estes is accused of lying to the government about his finances in order to obtain additional contracts for storing surplus grain. Conviction could carry an added term of up to 15 years in prison.

Criminal charges and the demands of creditors caused the Estes complex of grain elevators, big cotton farms and fertilizer sales firms — once reputed to be worth as much as $150 million — to fold up in the spring of 1962. He testified in bankruptcy court that he owed $36 million and held only $20 million assets.

The Agriculture Department canceled grain storage contracts which would have paid him more than $5 million a year. Eventually the remnants of his business empire were auctioned for $5.3 million.

Still Interested

Despite the reversals, Estes has continued to display a promoter's unflagging interest in the possibility of profitable new ventures. Once, during a courtroom recess at his first trial nearly two years ago, there was mention of New Mexico in casual conversation, and he quickly observed:

"That's a state to think about. Take Santa Fe — it's a good town for business, and it needs some industry."

A couple of months ago his name went up in lights over a former pawnshop near the boundary between El Paso and Juarez, across the Rio Grande in Mexico. Owned by Paul W. Slone, it's now a shop dealing in souvenirs for the tourists.

Through an Abilene lawyer, Jack H. Bryant, Estes said it is merely a lending of his name and he has no financial interest in the shop. Commenting on talk about the business expanding delightedly whips them out to show callers — but he knows, they show that Johnson is ahead.

Well, pollsters have been wrong before. "I'm looking forward to a real big boo-boo on Nov. 3 for them," Goldwater says.

Middle Road

Right now Goldwater is pleased with the way the campaign is going, and he is able to joke about whether the truth is being told about Barry Goldwater.

As the plane neared Washington, his voice suddenly boomed over the loudspeaker:

"Now hear this! Liberal press to the left! Conservative press to the right!"

The newsmen filed out the back ramp. It's directly in the middle.

into a nationwide chain, Bryant said:

"With all the government tax agents who keep checking, it should be obvious that Estes can hold no financial interest in this or any other business."

Legal Pauper

Since Estes legally is a pauper, any holdings he might acquire clearly would be targets for claims by both the tax men and scores of creditors.

An actively in which Estes admits pride is the year-old International Love and Goodwill Corp., which he helped establish with some Negro friends. He describes it as a non-profit organization to help underprivileged groups.

From time to time since his troubles came to a head, Estes has said "business no longer is my God" and he is "out of the fight." He remains active in the Church of Christ, in which he has served for a number of years as a lay preacher.

Comfortable

Estes and his family live comfortably. A court ruling entitles him to an automobile clear of creditors' claims, thus the Cadillac.

Sources of income, however, are among the topics on which he has nothing to say. More than 18 months ago, while still living at Pecos, he drew wadded currency and checks from a pocket and volunteered:

"I don't care how many investigators check on where I'm getting my money now. My help now comes from the little people."

$350 Rent

Bryant purchased the Abilene house into which Estes and his family moved after someone fired a shot into their plush home at Pecos. The lawyer says Estes pays him $350 a month rent.

It's a handsome one-story dwelling faced with tannish limestone, at one end of the dam forming Lytle Lake. From a garden plot Estes has been harvesting a bumper crop of yellow squash and other vegetables.

"We've had so much squash that most of us are tired of it," observed his wife.

Children of neighbors romp in the yard or sprawl in the spacious living room to watch television with the Estes youngsters. In the group introduced to a caller the other day were half a dozen young cousins visiting from other cities.

Newsmen

Many callers are newsmen, and Estes said: "I've come to regard some reporters as among my best friends."

After two and one-half years of being besieged by newsmen, Mrs. Estes retains a sense of humor.

Speaking of eldest daughter Pam, 16, Mrs. Estes commented wryly:

"After all our troubles, wouldn't you know it — now Pam's a reporter on the high school paper."

Contino Seeks Comeback

Still Plays Accordion

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—In 1950, Dick Contino was one of the most popular 20-year-olds in America, entertaining with his accordion act at $4,000 a week or better. He couldn't fill all the engagements offered him.

A year later he came out of prison, his earnings zero and counting his friends "on one hand, from the middle finger back," and was drafted by the Army.

The young Californian, who had risen to national prominence on a popular radio show in 1947, was convicted of draft evasion in August 1950 and sentenced to six months in a federal penitentiary.

Married Singer

Now 34, Richard Joseph Contino is married to singer Leigh Snowden, who performs with him on night club dates around the country. They have five children.

"Without my wife I would have gone to the bug-house a long time ago," he says.

Reflecting during an engagement here on his return to show business in 1954, he says:

"When I first went back after the Army, people would come once, and on return engagements they stayed away. I guess they just wanted to see me, and once was enough, sort of like wanting to see some kind of freak."

"Somebody once told me I could never make it big again in show business because people don't want to see a coward on stage. I don't know if I'm a coward, and I don't think any man really does until there's some kind of a big test. I think the real reason for my unpopularity was I was like a mirror to people and they didn't want to face in themselves what they saw, or thought they saw, in me."

Contino is bitter about the publicity over the draft evasion charge as contrasted with what he feels was lack of publicity for his ultimate service in the Army.

"People come up to me all the time and ask me about my side of the story. None of them know that I did go into the Army after it was all over and served 16 months in Korea," he says.

Not the Reason

Although he has pondered much over what made him try to escape the Army, he is only a little closer to the answer now than he was in 1950.

"Everybody said the reason I didn't go into the Army was I didn't want to give up all the money I was making for soldier's pay. Well, who would? But that wasn't the reason.

"It was mainly the idea of being all alone I didn't like. People say everybody feels alone in or out of the Army, but I don't think they're talking about how I felt.

"From the time I was a kid, I wouldn't even go to the store alone. I wouldn't say I was scared to go alone, but I would always manage to get a cousin or somebody to go with me wherever I went," he says.

"It's funny," he muses, "if some guy has a broken arm — where you can see the bone sticking out through the skin—nobody blames him for not being able to lift a table. But with me, nobody could see how I was inside and everybody was ready to think the worst, and that's what really hurt."

He says now he has overcome most of his fears about being alone, of relying too much on his music for companionship.

"I used to come home every night after school and practice, practice, practice, when other guys were out horsing around or playing baseball. Now, I've got a little better perspective on things. I enjoy the accordion, but it's not the only thing in my life. I've got my family and some other outside interests to keep me going."

Although the Army incident took place almost 15 years ago, Contino still has people throw it up to him.

"I just wish, once and for all, I could make everyone understand. But what are you gonna do? Go and tell your story to 190 million people? There's just no way," Contino says.

Contino has come a long way from his post-Korea failures as a performer. He now enjoys a steadily increasing demand for his talent, although he has not regained the pay or popularity he enjoyed in his heyday.

'Blue Book' Is Big Best-Seller

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON, Wis.—A listing of books of wide circulation and regional appeal would show an official publication of the Wisconsin state government a consistent leader.

The official Wisconsin "Blue Book," which has just appeared in new biennial form, could not accurately be called a best seller although it has been published in an edition of 45,000 copies and its potential circulation is doubtless considerably greater.

Free of Charge

Most of the copies are distributed to readers free of charge, under terms of state law. The fat volume is the single most handy directory available on state and local government in the state in its multiple functions, precinct by precinct election returns, lists of public officials state and local, and dozens of other subjects that make it invaluable tool for students, libraries, public agencies of many kinds, writers, politicians and studious citizens.

Officially, the book is for sale by the state department of administration at $1 a copy. In practical terms, most persons desiring a copy ask for one from their representative in the legislature. Lawmakers long ago recognized the usefulness of the volume as a tool in making friends and wrote a law entitling them to a couple of hundreds of copies each for distribution in their localities.

Libraries and other public agencies are given copies without charge also, under the law, as are newspapers, heads of public agencies and others in public or quasi-public capacities.

Editor in chief of the book and the man principally responsible for the style and accuracy of content is H. Rupert Theobald, chief of the legislative reference bureau at the state capitol.

TV Outlook for HORROR

Beware!

The TV networks are on a monster binge!

Fortunately, it's all in fun.

ABC started it last year with "The Outer Limits," which featured a new, and ingeniously contrived, monster every week.

But this year, the monsters are not only fearsome—they're funny.

Addams' Clan

Comedy Shows Dominate TV's 1964-65 Season

around three neighboring families and are interlinked by a common theme.

Featured are Debbie Watson in the title role of "Karen;" Jack Klugman as "Harris," and Don Gallo-way, Steven Franken and Joyce Bulifant as "Tom, Dick and Mary." In all three stories the court handyman, Cliff Murdock, played by Guy Raymond, provides the connecting link between the segment.

NBC's "That Was the Week That Was" is being aired in color this year on a new night, Tuesdays, at 8:30 p.m. Heading the versatile company of satirists are David Frost and Phyllis Newman.

Aimed primarily but not exclusively at the children are two Saturday evening attractions, "The Famous Adventures of Mr. Magoo," in which the cartoon figure impersonates celebrated characters of history, and "Flipper," offering further adventures of the talented porpoise and his friends.

Dennis Weaver, of "Gunsmoke" fame, has himself a new vehicle in "Kentucky Jones," continuing story of a retired horse trainer who adopts a little boy—Dwight Eisenhower (Ike) Wong, portrayed by Ricky Der.

ABC, which last year launched a record number of new shows, continues in its chosen path by introducing no less than nine comedy shows this season.

Perhaps the greatest, and most durable star making the transition to weekly TV is Bing Crosby, who plays engineer Bing Collins in "The Bing Crosby Show."

Beverly Garland portrays Bing's wife, the mother of their two girls, and Frank McHugh is Willie Walters, Bing's war buddy who dropped in for dinner 19 years ago and decided to stay.

George Burns and Connie Stevens star in "Wendy and Me," a situation comedy set in an apartment building "owned" by Burns (who bought it so he could practice his singing unhampered). It's comedy in the true Burns style, with the ever-present cigar, the monologue and the Gracie-type dialogue delivered by Miss Stevens.

"No Time for Sergeants," the Andy Griffith movie of some years ago, has been brought to the home screen with Sammy Jackson playing the inimitable Will Stockdale. Ironically, Jackson's show is slotted directly opposite Griffith's show on Monday evenings.

Brennan Returns

"The Tycoon" brings Walter Brennan back into the limelight as Walter Andrews, founder and chairman of the board of a large holding company.

"Mickey" is, of course, a situation comedy built about the ebullient Mickey Rooney. In this series Mickey stars as Mickey Grady, a life-long Nebraskan who inherits a bay-front hotel on the Pacific ocean.

Elizabeth Montgomery stars as Samantha, a witch to the broomstick born, in "Bewitched." Agnes Moorehead is cast as Endora, her mother, a chic witch, and Dick York is the adoring but befuddled mortal whom Samantha marries.

Stage and screen actor Tony Franciosa makes his series debut as Valentine Farrow a debonair and dashing young bachelor-about-town, in "Valentine's Day." Jack Spoon co-stars as Rockwell Sin, who shares Val's bachelor pad.

"Broadside" is a spoof at the distaff side of the U. S. Navy in World War II. Four Waves—among them Kathy Nolan—are assigned to Kanakai, an island Paradise in the South Pacific, and it is the end of an era for the high-living commander, played by Edward Andrews.

"The Addams Family," based on a family of spooky eccentrics created by Charles Addams, stars Carolyn Jones as Morticia, with John Astin, Jackie Coogan, Ken Weatherwax and Lisa Loring. Suburbia, the network predicts, will never be the same.

(See center spread for a full-color sketch of the Addams Family.)

'Hazel' Breaks All Ties With New York

Shirley Booth has taken the big step.

The born and bred Gothamite is subletting her New York apartment and moving her possessions—bag and baggage—to her new house in Beverly Hills, Calif.

In June Shirley Booth quietly bought two houses—one for herself on a hilltop in Beverly Hills, and another for her sister in nearby Westwood Village. By the time her fourth consecutive season on NBC-TV's "Hazel" color series, is well under way, she will be settled in the rambling ranch-type house.

Ship Antiques

She is shipping her collection of antiques from her New York apartment to her new domicile. But she still plans on keeping her Cape Cod hide-a-way where she vacations every summer.

Prior to purchasing California real estate, the New York actress lived in an apartment hotel on the Sunset Strip with her two white miniature French poodles, Grazie and Prego.

Before moving into the house, she did some re-decorating and landscaping. Her carpeting is now a soft yellow. The walls are a lighter tone—good backgrounds for her collection of early American antiques. Miss Booth varied this in her bedroom, using shades of violet.

Variety of Paintings

The walls are hung with a variety of pictures—some by well known artists, others given to her by close friends who paint in their spare time.

Miss Booth's home does not follow the usual pattern of stars' homes in Beverly Hills.

It is relatively small, furnished simply with authentic Americana—and there is no pool. Her average-size rear garden is walled for privacy with white-washed brick.

She tries not to get involved in big projects. Her philosophy is simple: Do the best you can today; tomorrow will take care of itself.

Cara Plays Herself As Working Wife

BY ISOBEL ASHE

HOLLYWOOD—Among the rash of comedy shows coming into our living rooms this fall, one seems a natural for success—provided you like pretty, talented comedienne who insist on trying something new.

The comedienne: Cara Williams, who stars on her own new CBS series Wednesday nights.

If positioning of a show is all-important, as some experts maintain, on her time slot alone Cara can hardly miss. She follows the Dick Van Dyke Show, and precedes the Danny Kaye Show.

Then, of course, there's that pretty face under a zany brain. And let us not underestimate the power of a woman.

"I am taking wives out of the kitchen!" she proclaims happily. "There isn't a show on television with a working wife. They're either standing at the stove whipping up something adorable, consoling the kids, or helping their husbands be noble.

"Well, by gosh, I happen to think that working wives are noble, too, and we're going to show it on this show!"

Serious on Subject

It's not that Cara's carrying a message; she'd be one of the first to steal the legendary line from a movie producer, "If you want to send a message, call Western Union." But she is serious on the subject of wives working.

"I think the woman who works is a happier wife. She's got something to talk about to her husband at night besides what the butcher said about the rising price of meat, or what mischief the children got into.

"Now, understand, the working wife I play is not a mother. If she were, we probably wouldn't let her go to work.

"Want to know what the show's about?" she said, changing the pace of our conversation rapidly. She does everything that way. She walks fast, she talks fast. And she thinks even faster, in a sort of mental shorthand.

"Well, this is what the show's about: I play Cara Wilton, a file clerk in a big company called Fenwick Diversified Industries. I've got a husband played by Frank Aletter. He works for the same company and they have a strict rule that husbands and wives can't both be employed by the firm. So we keep the marriage secret. We get into various scrapes that way.

"For example, the single girls in the office try to get a date with him, because ostensibly he's an eligible and most attractive bachelor. And the boss suggests I be of aid to attractive single men whose accounts the firm might be wooing.

"But don't misunderstand—this isn't a one-joke premise on the show. We get into many other areas of the couple on the job—a subject very close to my heart."

It's possible that Cara feels strongly about working because she has worked hard herself, as a mopet actress and into adulthood, in movies, and then television. She had another series, "Pete and Gladys," also on CBS until two seasons ago.

"And boy, did we have a problem getting Gladys out of that kitchen to get some movement in the show," she recalls."

Purpose in Life

"That's why I'm so glad that on the new series I've got a purpose in life. I feel very seriously that every woman should have."

As for women whose husbands earn enough money so their added incomes might be depriving someone else of a needed salary, Cara counters with: "What's wrong with volunteer work? I never heard of the Red Cross or other service groups having too many unpaid helpers.

"Hospitals need women to help read to little kids. There are plenty of areas that a woman can work and be of service, believe me. Just look around!"

That Cara Wilton's job is needed on the television series is explained quickly in the scripts, since she helps support a widowed mother and a younger brother attending college.

"So we need my salary," she explains simply. "But I'm not a career girl on the show. I work because it's an economic necessity, as do most working wives in reality, but I never lose my femininity.

Hush! Don't tell! Cara Williams and Frank Aletter play a husband-and-wife team seeking to keep their marriage a secret from the boss, in the new Cara Williams comedy series seen over the CBS-TV network on Wednesday evenings.

"There will be shows where Frank and I are at home, and I do know my way around the kitchen. But I'm not shackled to the stove."

Supports Children

"I'm playing myself. I do it most honestly, you know," she says. "I feel the really dedicated career woman is not me. I work because I have to. I've two children and a mother to support. But I think even if I had plenty of money, I'd want to keep busy. I'm too restless to loll around the house or go shopping with the girls all the time."

In private life, Cara is semi-engaged to a man in the real estate business. After working long hours at a non-airconditioned studio in the San Fernando Valley, she reports to her fiancé's office in Beverly Hills and gets to work at a desk.

"Sure I do. I work a couple of nights a week and every weekend. I answer the phones and type up his listings. I just love the real estate business. In fact, I'm going to real estate school and get my license.

"As it is, I'm not allowed to show houses, and I just love it!"

Get married? "Well, yes, sometime soon," Cara Williams says slowly. "I don't really know when. And keep on working? But of course. All this energy, you know. And I just think it's healthier. If I were inactive for any length of time, I'd take it out on my husband. I'd be so cranky he couldn't live with me."

What about the wives who genuinely enjoy staying home, taking care of their houses and spending long hours in the kitchen. How does Cara feel about them?

"That's their privilege, of course. Heavens, I'm not setting myself up as a paragon. I think that MOST women would be better off with something constructive to do out of the house, because I feel that way.

"I know a lot of girls who enjoy PTA work, who get pleasure out of everything having to do with their homes, and naturally that's as it should be. It isn't my cup of tea, that's all. And I'm sure plenty of other women feel the same way.

Major Types of Color Film Are Easily Distinguished by Buyer

BY IRVING DESFOR

Sometimes the terms used in connection with color films are confusing to many camera fans. They simply ask for "color film for my camera." This leads the salesman to inquire, "Do you want positive reversal film or the color negative type?"

That does it. The amateur puts on a "Huh? What did you say?" expression and might be more bewildered than ever after an explanation. With some idea of how color films differ and the purposes for which they were intended, they could ask for a specific film for a specific camera for a specific purpose.

In general, there are two major types of color films: those that will provide immediate slide transparencies (these are the "positive reversal" films) and those intended primarily for color prints (the "negative" color films).

These two general type of color films can be distinguished by the way their brand names end:

1. Color reversal films mainly intended for slide transparencies end with the suffix "... chrome" such as Kodachrome, Ektachrome, Ansochrome, Agfachrome, Dynachrome.

2. Negative color films intended primarily for making color prints and enlargements directly are differentiated by the name ending in "... color" such as Kodacolor, Ektacolor, Ansocolor, Agfacolor.

However, you can have a color print enlargement made from a slide transparency film and a slide transparency made from a color negative film. But that is a secondary or fringe benefit use of the film, not its primary purpose.

In that respect, color negative film is the most versatile of all color material. As a negative it will make: 1—the highest quality color prints and enlargements in any number desired; 2—color transparencies in any size and quantity; 3—black-and-white prints and enlargements on special Panalure paper.

After deciding whether transparencies or color prints are wanted primarily, the camera fan must know his camera's film size: 35 mm., 127, 120, 620 subminiature or cartridge-loading.

Separate Type

While most transparency films are intended for daylight photography, there are occasions for shooting under artificial illumination, so a separate type is available. Color reversal film for artificial light has a higher speed rating so it is an advantage to get that type for indoor shooting. The same film may be used outdoors at any time by adding a filter over the lens to make it suitable for daylight photography.

If photography is to be done mainly outdoors, with possibly a few indoor pictures to be taken, an easier method is to use daylight type transparency (reversal) film with blue flashbulbs or electronic flash for the indoor shooting.

Photo fans with 35 mm. cameras may choose some color films for weekend shooting (special 12 - exposure rolls), 20-exposure rolls for normal use or 36-exposure rolls for more intensive or vacation shooting.

Amateur photographers who wish to process their own color film—either reversal or negative type—can do so by eliminating Kodachrome and those films which come with prepaid processing included. Kodachrome has a complex processing technique which is best done by its own laboratory.

Other decisions which the camera fan may have to make before he decides on a particular brand of color film may involve: 1. The ASA speed of the film (for certain occasions a higher speed film is advantageous); 2. The location of the nearest processing lab in case time is a vital factor, and 3. The cost.

Answer to Today's Puzzle

Success Surprises Spike

BY BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — After 20 years of successfully making fun of music, Spike Jones suddenly finds himself a hit with a new generation which doesn't even know of his knack for punctuating songs with pistol shots.

"It's crazy," says the man who made a fortune with his musical insanities. He may make another fortune by playing it straight.

Spike thought he had written the end to his career in the band business two years ago. It had been an exciting 18-year ride that began because of Igor Stravinsky's squeaky shoes.

The Long Beach, Calif., boy had become a successful drummer, playing in bands for the Bing Crosby, Eddie Cantor and Burns and Allen radio shows. One night he went to a longhair concert at the Shrine Auditorium.

Stravinsky was wearing a new pair of shoes," Spike recalled. "They squeaked as he was conducting 'The Firebird Suite,' and I thought that was hilarious. Everyone else in the audience, including all those people who came from Pasadena in their electric cars, thought the music was lovely. But I kept thinking how funny it would be to substitute an outrageous sound for a musical note."

Spike tried out his idea with some recordings which got nowhere. Then he clicked with the raspberry-studded "Der Fuehrer's Face," which swept across wartime America. Spike thought his success might be a fleeting novelty. Only when he hit again with his records of "Chloe" and "Cocktails for Two" was he willing to quit his radio jobs and form his own band.

The Jones style became a national trademark, and his wacky troupe made big money everywhere.

"Then two years ago I figured I'd had it with the band," he said. "There was no place to go with it; unless I could get a 20-week commitment out of Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe, it wasn't economically sound. I had done some recordings but nothing happened."

"I had made two television series without the band, so I decided who needs it? There didn't seem to be the audience for our kind of comedy any more. The trend was to low-pressure, spoken comedy with guys like Bob Newhart and Mort Sahl."

A year ago Spike got a call from a record company official who argued that Spike Jones was a household word with a commercial potential in the recording field.

He talked Spike into experimenting with a new sound: a combination of guitar-banjo folk music with authentic Dixieland.

The first record, "Washington Square," was a success, as were other records and albums. Spike was encouraged to form a new band of youthful players.

He didn't realize the impact of the new style until he played Disneyland in August.

"It was fantastic," he said. "Each night during the week they hold me they had set new records for attendance at the park."

Spike doesn't play everything in the new style. He still knocks out choruses of "Chloe," "Cocktails" and "Holiday for Strings" in his old, violent fashion. The Spike-foolery is still apparent as band members play trombone and bass fiddle while hanging from trapezes. And Ben Casey and Dr. Zorba perform an operation while a singer is seriously intoning "What a Fool Am I."

"That amazes the kids, but they really flip when we play the new numbers," said Spike. "It looks like we're in for a long run."

19 Years Ago MacArthur, Emperor Reshaped World

BY KENNETH ISHII

TOKYO (AP) — On September 27, 1945, in a sitting room of the American Embassy, there took place a meeting between two men that probably saved Japan for the Western world.

One of the principals was Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme commander for the Allied powers which had brought Japan to its knees. Only a little more than a month earlier, he had taken over as the country's occupation chief.

The other was Emperor Hirohito, in whose name millions of Japanese had fought and died.

The one concession the Allies had made in accepting Japan's surrender was to allow the emperor system to remain. Because of the emperor's influence on the lives of Japanese, the success or failure of the occupation depended to a large degree on relations with the Japanese sovereign.

19 Years Ago

As that September morning 19 years ago began, it was hard to imagine what possible good could come of the meeting. At least so thought the imperial chamberlains as they scurried behind the walls of the moated Tokyo palace, preparing their sovereign for the historic encounter.

Even when the feudal shoguns were at the height of their power and the emperor a puppet, no military ruler had dared ask the emperor to come to him. It was the shogun who went to the throne. By going to MacArthur, the emperor was setting a humiliating precedent that would irreparably damage the imperial image, the chamberlains believed.

Hirohito's chauffeur readied the maroon Benz. The five-ton limousine with bullet-proof windows and gold chrysanthemum seals on its doors was used only on official occasions. Garage attendants had been up since early morning polishing it.

Not A Word

The emperor rose, as usual, around 7 a.m. His morning suit had been laid out. Only he knew what he was going to do at his meeting with MacArthur; he said not a word to his chamberlains. It was he who had asked for the meeting. It had been agreed that the conversations at the meeting would be kept secret.

Even in defeat, the emperor's motorcade was an impressive sight. Passersby who saw the main palace gates swing open for the convoy of cars on that overcast day must have wondered where it was bound.

Slowly the 1932-vintage Benz and the black Packards with the chamberlains rolled through the nearly deserted streets, past bombed out buildings until they arrived, 1½ miles later, at the gates of the American Embassy, where MacArthur lived.

No Mac
The car halted at the embassy's front porch. American MP's snapped to attention. But where was MacArthur?

The emperor's attendants had expected to see the general waiting at the door as a gesture of courtesy due even a defeated emperor. But the general chose to wait in his sitting room.

Michio Kinoshita, then one of the chamberlains, recalled the occasion:

"We were against the emperor going to see General MacArthur. We would have much preferred it the other way around. But under the circumstances what could we do? We had never known a situation in life to promote a new understanding between Japan and the United States. The general quickly put the suggestion aside.

Kinoshita, though not present, said he learned later that MacArthur was so moved by Hirohito's feelings "that he went up to the emperor and almost kissed him."

Waiting chamberlains sighed with relief.

In two more meetings, details of which were likewise kept secret, the groundwork for the occupation was laid. The two men became better acquainted. There developed a deep respect and attachment, all the more interesting because these two leaders came from such different backgrounds and cultures.

The tall, erect general and the diminutive, slouch-shouldered sovereign couldn't have been more different, even in their walking gaits. MacArthur's was sure and confident. Hirohito hesitant, as if groping for stairs that weren't there.

In Common

They had one great thing in common — they both sought peace.

Toshikazu Kase, who accompanied Prime Minister Mino Shigemitsu to the surrender signing aboard the battleship Missouri and later became Japan's U.N. ambassador, recalls MacArthur at that memorable ceremony on Sept. 2, 1945:

"We were astounded, to say the least. The general, having led his forces in a long and hard-fought battle against Japan, was not talking in terms of revenge, but of 'liberty, tolerance and justice.'"

When Hirohito was told of MacArthur's remarks, "There were tears in the emperor's eyes," Kase said.

Ordered Surrender

In fact, it was Hirohito himself who, having decided he had been hoodwinked by the militarists long enough, personally overrode the government and ordered the surrender, insiders to the imperial council meetings say.

Said the general after his retirement:

"I have believed since I first saw the emperor that he is the person who has contributed most to the welfare of postwar Japan — the emperor's effort to bring peace to his country has not been fully understood. This is a matter of great regret. Yet when the time comes to rewrite properly the history of Japan, the emperor will be looked upon as the father of the new Japan."

SCHUBERT

Symphony No. 4 in C Minor (The Tragic), No. 5 in B-Flat Major; Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra. Karl Munchinger conducting. London CS 6378 (Mono CM 9378).

Vienna has been the home of many great composers, including Beethoven, Mozart and Brahms, but none has so insinuated himself into the hearts of the Viennese as Franz Schubert. Inevitably, the Viennese have developed their own special warmth and sparkle in performing his music, all of which are on display in this delightful album. An utterly charming performance.

Symphony No. 8 in B-Minor (Unfinished), Overtures to Des Teufels Lustschloss, Fierrabras and In the Italian Style in C, Vienna Philharmonic, Istvan Kertesz conducting. London CS 6382 (Mono CM 9382).

Kertesz is not a Viennese and doesn't have their touch for this great work—in fact, it's hard to realize the same orchestra is playing. Kertesz not only wrings the symphony dry of pathos but stifles it with such a heavy hand it is scarcely able to breathe. Of more importance are the included overtures in their only available recording. The same criticism applies.

HAYDN

Symphonies No. 82 (The Bear), No. 83 (The Hen); New York Philharmonic, Leonard Bernstein conducting. Columbia MS 6609 (Mono ML 6009).

There are many fine things about these performances of two of the most famous "Paris Symphonies," including vigorous pace, sharply delineated structure, vast good humor and some lovely violin and woodwind passages. Unfortunately, much of this is undone by a brusque hand on the full orchestra, which blunts the delicacy of the works. Perhaps the ensemble is just too big and the miking too brilliantly close.

BEETHOVEN

Quartet No. 13 in B-Flat Major, Op. 130; Fine Arts String Quartet. Concert-Disc CS 240 (Mono CM 1240).

Quartet No. 15 in A Minor, Op. 132, Fine Arts String Quartet. Concert-Disc C 241 (Mono CM 1241).

Except for recordings by the Budapest Quartet these are the only performances currently available outside albums of the complete canon. Furthermore, the readings measure up strongly to those of the better known Budapest and may even be more palatable to many tastes.

Their release at this time also offers Fine Arts fans what may be a last opportunity to acquire recordings by the group before the departure of violist Irving Ilmer. Here is the distinctive Fine Arts sound at its best, projected in carefully engineered sound by an intelligent and fully integrated group. Both are very fine recordings and excellent interpretations.

The Concert-Disc and Concertapes labels of the Fine Arts, incidentally, has now become an affiliate of Everest Records after almost a year of virtual inactivity. Everest has a fine record for quality products and it is to be devoutly hoped that Concert-Disc's quality will be maintained.

MAHLER

Symphony No. 8 (Symphony of a Thousand) in E-Flat Major; Utah Symphony with soloists and University of Utah choruses, Maurice Abravanel conducting. Vanguard VSD 71120/1 (Mono SRV 1120/1).

The most remarkable thing about this recording is that it was made at all. The "Symphony of a Thousand" means pretty much what it says, and to produce the performance here Vanguard assembled over 900 singers and players to do the job, something no other record company has attempted since the advent of stereo. In fact, there's only one other complete recording of the work, a European monaural version of several years ago.

Like so many of Mahler's sprawling creations, Symphony No. 8 has ups and downs, very beautiful portions alternating with mediocre work. Since Abra-

Even Player Piano Is Making Popular Comeback

BY W. R. DOBERSTEIN

Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Before the ultimate in home entertainment became watching the World Series or a TV spectacular on a color set—a long time before—the big excitement was the player piano. There also was an economy version using an adapted harmonica device, which also yielded "music" from a perforated roll.

New Zealand's 1962 telegraph centenary stamp issue dramatized a more recent usage of coded perforations on the eight-penny value (illustration), the design of which shows sending and receiving units involving perforated tape with automatic application. Much of the word copy transmitted by this method in newspaper wire service is devoted to syndicated column material which is primarily informative entertainment.

Color Obsolete?

Technology will someday produce equipment making color TV obsolete, something akin to the "feelies" satirized by Aldous Huxley in his "Brave New World," novel of some 15 years ago. Performance coded tapes may well be utilized in such equipment, a good idea with a new adaptation.

The truth of "nothing really new under the sun" gains more validity it seems. Now comes the full-circle aspect of popular appeals.

The cumbersome player piano faded from the competition of less fatiguing means of getting canned music. So with electronics having reached a zenith in compactness and ease in music transmission, what's happening?

The player piano is making a comeback.

London has issued some splendid examples of Nilsson's artistry but this isn't one of them. The orchestra blankets the voice, which seems to be coming from some distance behind it, the recording is not of top quality and only a singer of unusual power could project at all.

Weaver Hopes 'Kentucky' Will be Permanent Role

BY CYNTHIA LOWRY

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Dennis Weaver has been job-hunting for the past four years under the happiest of circumstances: While very gainfully employed.

Now, after 10 years of limping around Dodge City and CBS' "Gunsmoke" range, he has found what he wanted, the title role in NBC's new "Kentucky Jones," which had its premiere Saturday, Sept. 19.

As Marshal Dillon's admiring, naive assistant, Chester, it was most often Weaver's fate to set the show's story lines by hopping into the Long Branch saloon crying, "Mister Dillon, come quick!" or to inquire anxiously, "What are you going to do now, Mister Dillon?"

Contemporary Man

Now Weaver emerges as a contemporary man, a former horse trainer and veterinarian, whose interest is horse racing and whose life is complicated by a foster son, a 9-year-old Chinese orphan.

The boy, who in a sense will be Weaver's "Chester," is played by a cute, 11-year-old, Rickey Der, born in San Francisco's Chinatown.

With children and animals notorious scene-stealers, this could make Weaver the world's bravest actor, for he has both to contend with

The Missouri-born performer began to get restless in his part as Chester at about the time he won an Emmy as the best supporting actor in a television series

At one point a variety show starring Weaver almost was sold, but Weaver reluctantly limped back to "Gunsmoke" for another season. Then he made another show pilot, "Giant Step," but that one also wound up out of the money and out of the network schedule.

No Laugh Track

Although "Kentucky Jones" is classified as a comedy, Weaver feels this is a misnomer.

"Well, we don't have any laugh track," the tall, soft-voiced actor said. "So we're not trying to tell people when they should howl. I think the show has more of a 'Mr. Peepers' flavor than anything else—heart and sentiment."

As Weaver spoke, he was sitting in the shade of a building on the dusty backlot of the Desilu Culver City studio. A few yards away, a real horse trainer was trying to persuade a donkey to sit beside actor Harry Morgan, who plays the hired man, on a bale of hay for a comedy scene. The donkey was not cooperating.

"This show is ruled by donkeys and children," Weaver said with resignation. "Rickey is wonderful, but we're not allowed to use him more than four hours a day—the rest of the time he has to go to school."

Weaver can put some authority into his horse-trainer role because he is a lover of horseflesh and the owner of three thoroughbreds that race at California tracks.

He made his Broadway debut in 1951 with Shirley Booth in "Come Back, Little Sheba," moved on to Hollywood and a budding film career, eventually landing in CBS' "Gunsmoke."

The role never was taxing enough to absorb Weaver completely. He started an actors workshop that for several summers presented off-beat plays. Some played to full houses for a full season.

Weaver and his wife have been married for almost 20 years and they have three sons, Rick, 14, Rob, 9 and Rustin, 5.

Coal Yard Gave George Burns His Name, Veteran Comedian Recalls

What's in a name?

George Burns, whose new ABC-TV comedy series, "Wendy and Me," is seen at 8 p.m. Mondays, answers that question with a shrug. The veteran comedian has used so many stage pseudonyms that he can't remember them all.

"When I first broke into show business I'd use any name for my act," he explained. "If the act flopped, and most of them did, I'd start again with new material and another name. That way I was always a fresh new talent so far as the trade was concerned."

Burns once joined a vaudeville act billed as "Goldie, Fields and Glide." The newcomer, he was "Glide." Eventually, when another quit the act, Burns moved up to become "Fields."

First Billing

"Finally," he said, "by right of succession, I became 'Goldie.' I like that. At last—first billing!"

There's also a story of how George acquired the name of Burns.

"When I was a kid on New York's lower east side," he said, "there was a coal company called 'Burns Brothers.' A friend and I used to sneak up behind the wagon and swipe coal. We'd stuff the coal into our knickers to take home to our mothers.

"People on the block got wise to us. When they'd see us waddling down the street, all smudge and our knickers full of lumps, they'd say:

Feature Film's Premiere on TV

"See How They Run," a feature-length film of suspense and international intrigue, will have its world premiere in color on NBC-TV's "Wednesday Night at the Movies" at 8 p.m. Oct. 7. Starring are John Forsythe, Santa Berger, Jane Wyatt, Franchot Tone, Leslie Nielsen, Pamela Franklin and George Kennedy.

Based on the novel "The Widow Makers," by Michael Blankfort, who also wrote the screenplay, it is the first of two films produced by Universal Pictures for introduction by NBC-TV's Project 120 during the 1964-65 television season.

Filmed partially on location in New York City and at Universal City studios in Hollywood, "See How They Run" tells how three orphaned children block the best efforts of a clandestine international cartel to cover up its crooked dealings.

"If You Can't Stop . . . Smile When You Go By!"

Herzog. By Saul Bellow. Viking. $5.75

Because this is the big novel on which the highly regarded Bellow has been working for some years, it should be said right at the start that its publication is no occasion for light-headed females, entertainment-seekers or curiosity-collectors.

In short, it is a literary novel: a demanding exercise of the reader's mind; a test of an accomplished author's ability to communicate with his intelligent peers: an equal test of the reader's comprehension.

It is a story about Moses Elkanah Herzog, a middle-aged professor with an Old World heritage, with a pardonable weakness of Adam-descended flesh and with a groping devotion to his world of scholarship and learning.

Crucial Time

So far as the narrative is concerned, we find Moses at a crucial time. As a scholar he has not fulfilled his early promise, but may yet. As a man, he has been through a first divorce (Daisy and their son Marco are mere figures in the background) and more recently, a second divorce (a devouring member of the intelligentsia named Madeleine, with their daughter June) and is vulnerable to another entanglement with a sexy New York widow.

Moses is right on the edge of irrationality at this point, as he knows full well. Compulsively, he writes letters (but doesn't mail them) to many diverse figures, large and small, living and dead—and to himself. He makes a visit to Chicago to see little June, and undergoes a serio-comic adventure there. Finally he retreats to a decaying old house in the Berkshires to collect his wavering wits.

New Moses

Herzog is more than the usual author's mouth-piece for social philosophical comment, though he serves that purpose wonderfully. He is partly a new Moses, perhaps doubting if there is a Promised Land; partly a new Everyman on a newly dangerous pilgrimage; partly Modern Man, battered by the pressures of our time (a perpetual loser to forces stronger than he can muster as a worried, overwhelmed individual); but particularly he is the present day intellectual, trapped before the humane sense and a confused perplexity over shattered 20th Century values.

The writing is superbly done, much of it a dialogue between man as a person and man as a mind. It is a novel that is not easy to read, for it is anything but shallow. It also is a novel that is not easy to forget.

Miles A. Smith

'Chairman of Bored' Tours Europe

Along the Ridge. By Edward Streeter. Harper, $4.95.

The trip actually began in Paris, but its main purpose was to follow the mountain country from northwest Spain across to Andorra, into southern France, Switzerland and northern Italy, on down into Yugoslavia.

The author is a retired banker who for years has been writing books on the side, the most recent one a light, frothy examination of the perils of retirement, called "Chairman of the Bored."

Little Economy

His three companions, presumably of an age close to his own, are identified in the text only as Charles, Anne and Sally.

Although they started from New York at what the airlines call economy rates, there was little evidence of economy thereafter. They had been booked very carefully into the best hotels available in each location, and constantly were on the alert for gourmet type restaurants. They drove a brand new French station wagon.

Naturally, Streeter's narrative is conditioned by the type of touring that had been planned. It is no knapsack-and-youth-hostel adventure.

His material is fairly familiar—cathedrals, monuments, scenic spots, native folkways. He has a pleasant touch of humor, most of it on such well-known topics as language mishaps, European plumbing and utilities, currency exchange, bureaucratic red tape and local eating habits.

But he also has a knack for the amusing incident, the colorful personality and the savory anecdote. It adds up to a nice trip.

Howard Fast Brilliantly Re-Creates Agrippa's Life

Agrippa's Daughter. By Howard Fast. Doubleday. $4.95.

In a brilliant recreation of the ancient world, the author of "Spartacus" and "Moses, Prince of Egypt," traces the story of Berenice Basagrippa, Princess of Galilee, daughter of Herod Agrippa, granddaughter of Herod the Great.

The people are vivid and real. "Agrippa entered . . . He was a large man, going to flesh and paunch in his middle years, a wide, heavy mouth under his small, trimmed beard, the nose red and swollen from too much wine and under the shaggy brows, the same translucent green eyes—implacable here—that were so extraordinary and captivating in Berenice. . . ."

In a moving and provoking love story, we follow this green-eyed, red-haired woman, given in marriage at the age of 16 to her father's brother; widowed, her sons dead, accused of evil; her second marriage annulled; finding love at last with her third husband.

Yellow Sunlight

Her introduction to Shimeon Bengamaliel could never be forgotten. Lying in the darkened room, willing herself to die, ". . . she opened her eyes and realized that a man was in her chamber, a very tall, wide-shouldered man, clad in sandals, white linen trousers and a sleeveless white coat. He was a madman, and he went about his work as a madman would. He tore down her drapes . . . rended them when they resisted his large and powerful hands . . . then he attacked the blinds . . . and these he ripped down and flung aside . . . allowing great, terrifying slabs of yellow sunlight into the room.

"She lay there a moment and stared at him, her green eyes blazing, her loose red hair framing her magnificent head, the coppery skin so pale now and drawn so tightly over the high cheekbones. . . . Shimeon watched her, he wondered whether there was indeed the most beautiful woman in Israel, or, some said, or perhaps only the most devilish."

This "madman," the physician who was to become her third husband, was of the House of Hille where they preached that God was love. Under the influence of this teaching, Berenice began to change.

She gave bread to the hungry. She went with her husband to treat slaves dying from plague. "She learned how to dress wounds, how to clean open sores, how to set broken bones, and how to minister to the dying." The people regarded her as a saint.

Perceptive View

Told in narrative style, this is a perceptive view of the civil war within the holy city of Jerusalem where the Jews became part of their own destruction. When the battle was over, the Temple lay in ruins, Shimeon was dead, and the Roman, Titus Vespasianus held 150,000 Jews in his slave pen. And he loved Berenice, the Jewish Queen.

Under the pen of an accomplished writer, the story lends itself well to drama. Love, politics, war and faith provide the ingredients. This imaginative portrayal of the romance and life of an extraordinary woman may provide the basis for another wide-screen spectacular.

'First Negro President' Gives Wallace Vividly Topical Theme

The Man. By Irving Wallace. Simon & Schuster. $5.95.

Wallace likes to write novels that are as big as a mountain and as vivid as a volcano. In the 766 pages of this book he has turned loose an eruption of words on a hotly topical theme.

The time is a few years in the future. The U.S. Senate, as a political sop to his race, has elected an unobtrusive Negro Senator as its president pro tempore. Then a heart attack kills the vice president, a freak accident eliminates the President and the speaker, and the United States has its first Negro President, Douglass Dilman.

Impossible Situation

Dilman is in an impossible situation, bound to create trouble in some quarter, no matter what he does. He is faced with a civil rights issue and a crisis over a racial Negro organization. There is a Soviet threat to a small African nation which the U.S. is backing. The Cabinet, led by a pompous secretary of state, is determined to force Dilman into following its version of his predecessor's policies.

There are problems in Dilman's personal life too—a daughter who has left the family to pass as a white woman and a son who is an unruly college student.

Before long a rabidly segregationist Congressman has launched a vicious attack on the President, and the climax comes in a tense impeachment trial.

Neurotic Belle

A neurotic Southern belle, an idealistic Chicago lawyer and an heroic but disillusioned Secret Service man are among the many characters Wallace has packed into his story.

Once again the author is working with sensational material, but he succeeds in giving a veneer of plausibility to the action. "The Man" has more dramatic unity than "The Prize" or "The Three Sirens." Its main character, portrayed very sympathetically, is a strong one.

Here is a great big, gripping novel for the popular market, and undoubtedly it will be popular.

Miles A. Smith

BY MORT HOMMES

Curious and unpredictable events are in store for readers of today's mysteries. The renowned playwright and novelist, Joseph Hayes, best-remembered for his successful novel "The Desperate Hours," which became a motion picture and Broadway play, has written another bestseller.

A favorite, Mary Stewart, known for her skill in combining mystery with expert storytelling, has chosen the island of Corfu off the west coast of Greece for her latest setting. Patricia Moyes opens her mystery on a movie set, while Wimbledon provides a colorful background to serve more than a tennis ball.

The Third Day. By Joseph Hayes. McGraw. $4.95.

He did not recognize the face that stared back at him from the mirror. Who was this man with hunched and weary shoulders, sagging body and loose tie, face darkened by a beard, hair matted and wet, looking like a drunken bum?

This was the beginning. A name and address in his pocket. A memory which began 11 years ago. Walking gingerly, Charles Bancroft returns home, watches, waits, observes. Fact by fact he rebuilds his life, wondering at the man he must have been. "It was like taking part in a play and witnessing it at the same time . . ."

A story of amnesia with mounting tension as Bancroft faces the charge of manslaughter when a young girl drowns; as his wife Alexandria believes him guilty of infidelity; as his brother-in-law pressures the sale of the family business.

Then terror rides by his side as he drives swiftly through the night in a desperate attempt to save Alex's life. The young man had said, ". . . there's only one way for you to get yours. Just the way I got mine."

A gripping novel where a man searches frantically for the past he cannot recall and for the woman he loves. A novel of intrigue so compelling that the reader must share the desperate search for a release from a nightmare existence.

Falling Star. By Patricia Moyes. Holt. $3.95.

The scene was an underground station platform. The man jammed his glasses on his nose, and looked wildly around for his girl. But this "take" would never appear on a movie screen, because Bob Meakin tripped on the stairs and fell directly under the wheels of the incoming train.

From her own experience as a screenwriter, the author creates the make-believe world of the movies where temperamental stars and technical experts lead the police a merry chase with false clues. But a waxed candle and a little heat make things too hot for the culprit, and a neat puzzle is solved in an excellent who-dunit.

This Rough Magic. By Mary Stewart. Morrow. $4.95.

A story of breathless excitement in the romantic atmosphere of a sun-struck island in the Ionian Sea. Take an Adonis-like Greek youth, a dolphin, two drownings, add an ancient castle complete with dungeons and hidden hillside caves; import a Shakespearean actor and his handsome son, and into this bring a young British actress.

This unusual combination, plus fast dialogue and a series of mystifying and frightening events, makes a satisfying novel with something for everyone. Spirited characterization, vivid description, glowing romance.

Two Sets to Murder. By Ludovic Peters. Coward-McCann. $3.95.

For a fast play, where good clean sport draws the attention of the narcotics traffic, watch this match. When one more bright tennis star shows signs of going sour, Firth is called in to investigate. The trail leads far from the center court at Wimbledon through the danger-filled underworlds of San Francisco, New York and Morocco. An ingenious plot.

Auto Gave Americans Incentive to Build Roads, Make Travel Easier

BY CHARLES HOUSE
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

One May day in 1829, four men started off on a trek which would take them across the broad face of Wisconsin, from Green Bay to Prairie du Chien, a highway distance of 235 miles. It was the first time in history that white men moved overland in Wisconsin to so distant a place.

Traveling by horseback over a maze of Indian trails which criss-crossed the country, the four men were the first civilized people in our state to use a

Fourth in a Series

"road" for such a distance. They were James Doty, Morgan Martin, Henry Baird and an unidentified Indian guide who was not sure of the way. The journey required "about seven days," according to Martin.

Until that initial overland trip had been made, all previous travel in Wisconsin had been made via rivers and lakes. The water trail over the Fox and Wisconsin rivers, Green Bay to Prairie du Chien measured some 400 miles; nevertheless, it was the "only way" because it was the easiest.

Petitioned Congress

Six months after that historic journey, the citizens of Green Bay held their first public meeting. One of the results of that meeting was a petition to Congress to build a road from Green Bay to Chicago.

The Federal government was impoverished and reluctant to make internal improvements in such a hinterland.

For military defense of the territory, however, three frontier forts had been established. At Prairie du Chien stood Fort Crawford; at Green Bay, Fort Howard, both established in 1816. And at the long portage between the Fox and the Wisconsin rivers near what is now Portage, Fort Winnebago was established in 1828. It became necessary to improve the supply lines and communications between the forts and thus, in 1835, the building of the roads commenced. Soldiers performed the labor and the road was completed in 1836. It was the first road of consequence built in what is now Wisconsin.

The first road which was erected in the Wisconsin section of Michigan territory, however, was built—strangely enough—by Indians. It bisected the military road which ran from Green Bay's Fort Howard to Fond du Lac-Portage. It happened like this:

George W. Lawe, a Kaukauna pioneer who had arrived there in 1839, has described the area then as "a veritable wilderness . . ." The only trails were Indian footpaths.

Sought Ferry

Seeking to open a wagon road to Green Bay from which he obtained his supplies, he urged Hoel Wright, the founder of Wrightstown, to establish a ferry across the Fox River so that the military road might be reached. Wright agreed only if a road were to be built from Kaukauna to Wright's ferry.

Lawe then sought to urge his neighbors to help build a road, but they were adamant. In desperation he went to a Menominee chieftain, Tyometaw, who lived at Little Chute. Tyometaw talked 50 braves into helping to cut the road through.

They managed the job in two days. In the following week, Lawe and his unlikely workmen constructed another road, all the way to Appleton. These roads were primitive, for they were of wagon-width and consisted of a mere trail from which trees and brush and deadfalls were removed. It is strange that this road, the first territorial one cut in the Wisconsin section of the Territory, is not recorded in the Acts of Michigan Territory.

However, there were three Michigan Territory

Acts which authorized the establishment of roads in the Wisconsin section (west of Lake Michigan). The first, in 1834, went from Milwaukee through Lincoln County to the Mississippi. The others, both in 1835, authorized roads from Milwaukee to Lake Winnebago (near the village of Calumetville) and from Brown Mounds (Dane County) to the northern boundary of Illinois.

This, then, was the genesis of the Wisconsin road movement.

It is almost beyond belief that it required 30 years from the time of the Marquette-Joliet water route trip to the Mississippi, until the white men decided that he could make the same trip overland more quickly and easily.

It is equally astounding to realize that he made little effort to build good roads until the advent of the automobile some 80 years after the Doty-Martin-Baird overland visit to Prairie du Chien.

The automobile and only the automobile deserves the credit for creating the need to diminish travel horizons. It has cut down the travel time from Green Bay to Prairie du Chien from seven days to only a half day.

Travel Expands

At the turn of the century when automobiles were still a scarcity, American citizens traveled only about 500 miles per year and seldom ventured beyond the next village. Today, the average American motorist moves a whopping 10,000 miles by automobile annually. In 1963, for example, motorists traveled an awesome total of 798 billion miles.

In these small 60-odd years since the advent of the automobile, Wisconsin alone has built almost 100,000 miles of highways of which only 7,000 miles are today unsurfaced. The nation, however, has built a total of almost 4 million miles. It is a far cry from the 154,000 miles of surfaced roads of which Wisconsin boasted exactly 60 years ago.

Now we are engaged in the building of a 41,000-mile Interstate network of freeways which are scheduled for completion in 1972. Transportation specialists forecast that the I-system will save 75,000 lives. Furthermore, it is projected that the system (which costs $41 billions) will save users of the system some $5 billions per year through lower vehicle operating costs—about $30 to $70 in annual savings for the average motorist.

A study by the traffic research team of William Smith & Associates indicates also that, by 1980, the I-system will save almost four billion hours per year in travel time for the nation's automobilists.

Tire manufacturers are keeping in time with expanding highway systems by bringing out improved tires. Synthetic materials used in tire manufacture, like styrene butadiene blended with oil synthetics, have produced greatly superior tire tread.

Life Expectancy

Soon after the turn of the century when the automobile was merely a horseless carriage, the average motorist could expect a maximum of 2,000 miles from his tires. By 1912, the tires had improved greatly that their life expectancy was up to about 5,000 miles.

Today's ordinary tires have a life expectancy somewhere between 25,000 and 30,000 miles although some tires are "luckier," said a spokesman for a tire manufacturer and might last up into almost 40,000 miles. One specially-made tire, said a spokesman, can be used up to 60,000 miles.

It has been a long, long road since Alexander the Great wept because he had no new worlds to conquer. His trouble was that he preceded roads—the automobiles which have given them to us.

Next Spring, Why Not Plan To Visit State Across Lake?

From blossoms to beaches, there is no place quite like southwestern Michigan in springtime.

Driving around the lower end of Lake Michigan from Chicago, we started our weekend tour at Benton Harbor and St. Joseph. The twin cities are faced by wide, flawless beaches and are backed by seas of fragrant pink and white blossoms. This is Michigan's rich fruit belt with some 52,000 acres of apples, peaches, pears, plums, cherries and apricots.

Lively Colony

Benton Harbor is home of the House of David, a religious colony of which all members are vegetarians. The long-haired menfolk wear flowing beards. The colony maintains an amusement park with a miniature steam railway, pony rides, an open-air stage for polka dancing and entertainment, and shaded picnic grounds.

The route north follows the shoreline, offering glimpses of the wooded high clay cliffs that shelter long stretches of sandy beaches. In Saugatuck, long a favorite Michigan resort town, we wandered through the antique shops and for blocks along the waterfront where luxury yachts and sailing craft are tied up.

Every kind of entertainment is available in the area. from summer stock with a professional cast at the Red Barn theater to exciting roller coaster-like rides up and over the giant sand hills in specially-constructed dune schooners with oversize tires. A marker notes the lost city of Singapore, buried for decades beneath the restless sands from Lake Michigan. It once was a flourishing lumber port.

Holland's past, traced to the Dutch immigrants who first settled here, can be seen in the Netherlands Museum (admission) where remnants of the original "kolonie" are on display. Of particular interest is the symbolic clock showing the construction of the Netherlands' government by carved wooden figures situated at different levels; a strange horse-drawn Dutch vehicle, called a Friesian Chaise, which taxied wealthy farmers to and fro; and a room dedicated to centuries of delftware, exemplifying the pottery for which Holland is famous; and exhibits of the life and crafts of the people of Indonesia (formerly the Dutch East Indies).

Nearby are the Western Theological Seminary and Hope College, both of which evolved from the founding fathers' efforts over a century ago. Out of the ordinary in Holland are the Baker Museum for Furniture Research where you can see a history in furniture from antique and the ornamental to the modern, and The Wooden Shoe Factory where you can be fitted with a pair of klompen. Some 20,000 pairs, fashioned by hand from white poplar logs are turned out annually. As a final touch, the city's largest hostelry goes by the name of Warm Friend Hotel!

Furniture Capital

From Holland the Magic Circle route curves northeast (Mich. 21) to Grand Rapids, furniture capital and regional shopping center. The city boasts a foremost furniture museum, many city parks and Indian burial mounds. The museum carefully portrays the furniture craft that made Grand Rapids famous, and includes originals, reproductions of period pieces, and furnished display rooms of contemporary design.

Mammals native to Michigan are featured at the public museum with life-sized dioramas. There is a fascinating wood carving display where antique tool and lumbering equipment exhibits trace the area's history through the first settlers, plus a large collection of costumed dolls. Of unrelated importance, but interesting, are a large whale skeleton and a German ME-109 fighter from World War II. Another footnote to history is the Norton Indian mounds on the outskirts of town, the largest surviving group of prehistoric burial mounds left in Michigan.

Taking the new superhighway (U.S. 131) south, a section of the Mackinaw trail, we drove to Kalamazoo, whose pride still continues for Burdick Mall, said to be the first permanent civic installation of its kind in the nation. The park-like appearance of the pedestrian mall has put new life into the downtown business area; fountains, flowers, grass and soft recorded music—where once there was a street—give a sense of leisure, so uncommon in most cities this size.

The city's three institutions of higher education—Western Michigan University, Kalamazoo College and Nazareth College for Women—are among its proudest attributes. Kalamazoo, oldest college in the state having continuous sessions, has a classic arrangement of Georgian brick buildings, while nearby Western Michigan's landscaped hillside campus is growing by tens of buildings, many of attractive contemporary design.

Your windshield is a pastel colored movie screen as you complete the tour back via new Interstate 94. The blooming Van Buren County fruit orchards are particularly spectacular around Hartford and Lawrence.

DEAR HELOISE:

For your friends who have pressure cookers, tell them to try this:

Wrap different vegetables separately and loosely in foil, then cook. Turn the little individual heavy foil containers up around the edges to form sort of a bowl so that the water does not get into the vegetables. Just place these on top of the grate in your pressure cooker. You save all the vitamins, and the vegetables have a wonderful flavor.

Put what is left over into the refrigerator in the same piece of foil and warm it the next day. Even warmed-over potatoes are real good this way.

A Bachelor

That's great! I just tried cut carrots in one foil container, potato wedges in another and fresh green beans in a third.

I rolled the vegetables in the foil as if I were going to bake a potato, then took a knife and cut an "X" in the top, folding the top gently back to allow for cooking, and punched a hole in the bottom of the foil. Thanks a million, bachelor, and welcome to the clan.

WATERPROOF PLANTS

DEAR HELOISE:

Here's one for you . . .

House plants that have to be watered make a mess on window sills, table tops, etc. What did I do?

I bought a rubber bath mat (may be left as is or cut with a pair of scissors to suit any size) and put it under the house plants. The bath mat catches any spilled water or dirt and it can be washed. Pastel-colored bath mats are beautiful for this purpose.

BIRTHDAY CAKES

DEAR HELOISE:

Remember the days when our mothers used to put pennies, nickels and dimes in our birthday cake batter. I have tried this for ten years and finally found a better idea . . .

First bake the cake, then after it has cooled and before you ice it, wash some dimes or nickels, or other little surprises, wrap them in foil, then take your knife and make some slits into each layer of the cake and insert the items.

By using this method, none of the surprises will sink to the bottom of the cake. Also, you will know exactly where each surprise is, and you can divide them evenly when you serve the cake.

Of course, the children should be told to look for the surprises so they won't bite down on one by mistake.

CLOTHESLINE METHOD

DEAR HELOISE:

When taking clothes from your clothesline leave two pillowcases hanging open.

Into one throw all the socks, etc. Into the other put all the clothes that have to be ironed!

This eliminates the need for sorting.

I also fold clothes as I gather them from the line, so that I won't shake lint in the kitchen. Presto! the laundry is ready to be put away or dampened, with no muss or fuss.

EASY ICING

DEAR HELOISE:

I have been bothered at times by cakes that come out of the pan too crumbly. When I attempt to ice them, either the icing lumps or the crumbs stick to the icing on the knife.

A very simple remedy, if one has sufficient freezer space, is to put the cake into the freezer until it is firm . . . then ice the cake. The frosting goes on smoothly, the crumbs stay in place, and no one ever knows it wasn't the perfect cake.

Mrs. James Chamberlain

Well, well, well. It works, and the cake thaws out fine again!

Electronic Device Stars in Series

A complete House of Representatives chamber fully equipped with electronic aides found only a few of the most modern state capitols, has been constructed in Hollywood at a cost of more than $100,000 for a new, hour-long political series titled "Slattery's People."

The series, produced by Bing Crosby Productions, stars Richard Crenna in the role of a crusading legislator who wears no man's halter. It premieres on CBS-TV at 9 p.m., Monday.

Tally Board

Among the installed electronic devices is an "instantaneous" vote tally board which only a handful of real-life state assembly rooms possess.

In most capitols across the land, votes are counted laboriously by voice "aye" and "nay."

In "Slattery's People," the "legislators" will merely by throwing a switch on their individual desks.

Their votes appear opposite their names on illuminated panels flanking the rostrum.

The "ayes" and "nays" are counted electronically by the computer and the tally clerk can read total within 30 seconds.

Rocky Mountain Park Vacation Proves Delightful for Traveler

BY CLARA HUSSONG

Our vacation in Rocky Mountain National Park in mid-August was as enjoyable as we had expected it to be. My sister and I decided on the train trip returning home. The weather was wonderful and we "took in" everything that appealed to us.

There are no accommodations except for camping in the park itself, and we stayed in a motel at Estes Park, located at the eastern edge of the park. The Fall River was just 40 feet or so from our front door, and a high rocky cliff rose directly behind our cabin.

In the five days we were there, we took three bus tours and one long hike on our own. Whenever there was an hour or two of spare time, Ruth urged me to go hiking with her, and hike we did. By taking the easiest route we managed to get to the top of the high cliff near us.

View of Peak

From this spot we had a wonderful view of Long's Peak and other high mountains. We took a number of shots of mountain scenery from here, as well as flowers which were in bloom. These included wild mountain sunflowers, blue penstemon, ferny wormwood and Indian paintbrush.

Birds we saw on the cliff and along the noisy, rocky Fall River included pine siskin, Canada jay, yellow and Audubon's warblers, house finch, flicker and tree swallow. At another cabin near us we found and photographed broad-tailed hummingbirds sipping a sweetened liquid from a glass feeder.

Our first bus tour into the park took us along the Trail Ridge Road across the Continental Divide and then south to Grand Lake. This was an all day trip, with a number of stops along the way. Yes, the driver did advise us to shut our eyes whenever we came to hairpin curves and steep drops, just as he did.

We photographed chipmunks and other ground squirrels that took nuts and other food from the hands of bus passengers. A Clark's nutcracker, a large gray, black and white bird related to crows and jays, took food too from outstretched hands. Other birds at the high altitudes along the way were Stellar's jays, gray-headed juncos and the Canada jay.

Alpine Meadows

The Alpine meadows above timberline were not as colorful as they are earlier in summer, but we did find such blossoms, often only an inch or two high, as bistort, sulphur flower, fireweed, arnica, Alpine harebell and star gentian. But no little red elephants, which I had looked forward to seeing.

A forest tour in a jeep to Panorama Park, east of Estes, was in some ways the most enjoyable and at the same time most frustrating trip of all. Enjoyable because we saw a dusky grouse, watched a mountain climbing demonstration, and through telescopes were able to see five states from atop the tower.

The frustrating part came on when a woman from Kansas, the "life of the party" kind, took over the driver-lecturer's job of explaining the sights. Quaking aspens, which we saw along the way, grow only at 7,000 to 9,000 foot altitudes, she said.

When I told her it grew at less than 600 feet in Wisconsin, she gave me a pitying smile. Other bits of misinformation she passed out included the "fact" that sunflowers did not grow at this altitude; a jamesia (wild syringa) bush was dogwood; and that loco weed and nightshade belong in the same family. Ruth's shaking head kept me still, but I nearly burst.

Sheinwold on Bridge Some Good Hands Are Just Works Of Imagination

Some of the best bridge hands may not stand up under close scrutiny. They are works of fiction and were played only in the imagination.

There's a standard sequence for most of these tales. Monday night Joe Doakes misplays a simple four-spade hand. Tuesday, at the office, Joe tells how he almost made the hand—which by this time has become a small slam needing a very complicated play.

Wednesday at lunch Joe tells his friends about the grand slam that he brought home by a triple grand coup. "I almost missed it," Joe modestly admits, "but I had a hunch about that queen of trumps."

Is Joe a fibber? Not at all. By Thursday he believes that story himself and would swear to it in a court of law. Nobody contradicts his story because those who saw him miff the hand are waiting for a lull in the conversation so that they can tell their own fishy bridge tales.

Friend Is Hero

That's why I have never been able to decide whether my old friend Charlie Goren is a hero or a public enemy. For several years he has assembled famous experts and public figures on his TV program "Championship Bridge"—with all of their mistakes in full view of several million kibitzers.

If you make a mistake on this program you can't cover up. If a few of your friends miss the boner on the original showing, they'll see it sooner or later on a re-run.

Sonny Moyse, editor of The Bridge World, has spent some of the best years of his life explaining just why he led the kind of diamonds in one unforgettable hand. His reasons are wonderful, but it's hard to overlook the flaw in his reasoning: his lead was almost the only card in his hand that would permit declarer to make the contract.

The hand appears in Goren's new book "Championship Bridge," based on his famous program The book is full of heroes and goats, but some of the most interesting hands are those in which the fish got away.

Declarer was Ace Gutowsky, famous some years ago as a fullback with the Detroit Lions and some years earlier as an All-American back at Oklahoma City University. Gutowsky sometimes says that his new hobby, tournament bridge, is a rougher sport than football.

The defenders were Charles and Peggy Solomon, two of the top ranked experts in tournament bridge. Just a few months ago Solomon was elected president of the World Bridge Federation.

Mrs Solomon opened the jack of diamonds, taken by dummy's queen. Gutowsky cashed the queen and jack of clubs and then led a spade from dummy, losing the ten to the queen.

Mrs. Solomon looked for a weak point. Clubs and diamonds were clearly hopeless, and declarer had gone after spades himself. Hence she switched to the queen of hearts.

Solomon signalled enthusiastically with the eight of hearts. He could get four heart tricks if declarer took the first round of hearts with the king.

Gutowsky was too old a bird to be caught this way. He refused the first heart trick. Mrs. Solomon led her other heart, and the defense collapsed.

East could take the ace of hearts but could never regain the lead. Gutowsky had time to set up a spade, making game with four clubs, three diamonds, one heart and one spade.

Wonderful Story

The defenders could have told a wonderful story if the hand were not on the record. Solomon might relate: "When the queen of hearts held the trick, Peggy made a brilliant play. In spite of my signal to continue hearts, she switched back to spades. And now we were sure of three spades and two hearts. That'll teach Gutowsky not to monkey around with us."

In another corner of the same room, Gutowsky might be telling his version of the hand: "I took the first trick with the ace of diamonds and led the nine right back. Mrs. Solomon had to cover with the ten, and I won in dummy with the queen. Back to my hand with a club, and another diamond for a finesse with dummy's five. You don't often get a chance to finesse with a five-spot—and it was fun to do it to the Solomons."

If you happen to be in that room, listen to both stories and don't blow the whistle on my friends. Pretend to believe their tales, and maybe you'll have the chance to tell about that Vienna Coup you executed three years ago in the Monday night game.

Soviets Score Propaganda Coup in India

Rushing in Where U. S. Won't Tread Opens Easy Path

BY CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — In five months the Soviet Union has scored a public relations victory in India at minimum cost.

The job of helping feed hungry India and propping up its tottering economy — an effort that costs billions — is left to the United States.

Moscow's campaign essentially revolves around two propaganda coups.

The first came May 3 when the Soviet Union announced it would lend $420 million to finance India's controversial Bokaro steel mill. The United States refused to back it on the grounds it is a Socialistic government-owned enterprise and might not be economically feasible.

Arms Business

The second came this month when Moscow agreed to sell India about $110 million worth of light tanks and MIG21 jet fighters. These are similar in capabilities to the F104 jets Washington refused to provide.

The Soviet deals were business deals, though easy credit terms were granted. But Bokaro and the MIG's had become highly emotional in the future.

subjects in India and by shrewdly moving in where the United States refused to tread the Soviet Union is reaping a harvest of favorable headlines, kind words and influence.

Last Saturday, Moscow and New Delhi, for the first time in history, issued a joint statement signed by the Indian head of state and Soviet leaders. It marked the conclusion of Indian President Radhakrishnan's visit to Moscow.

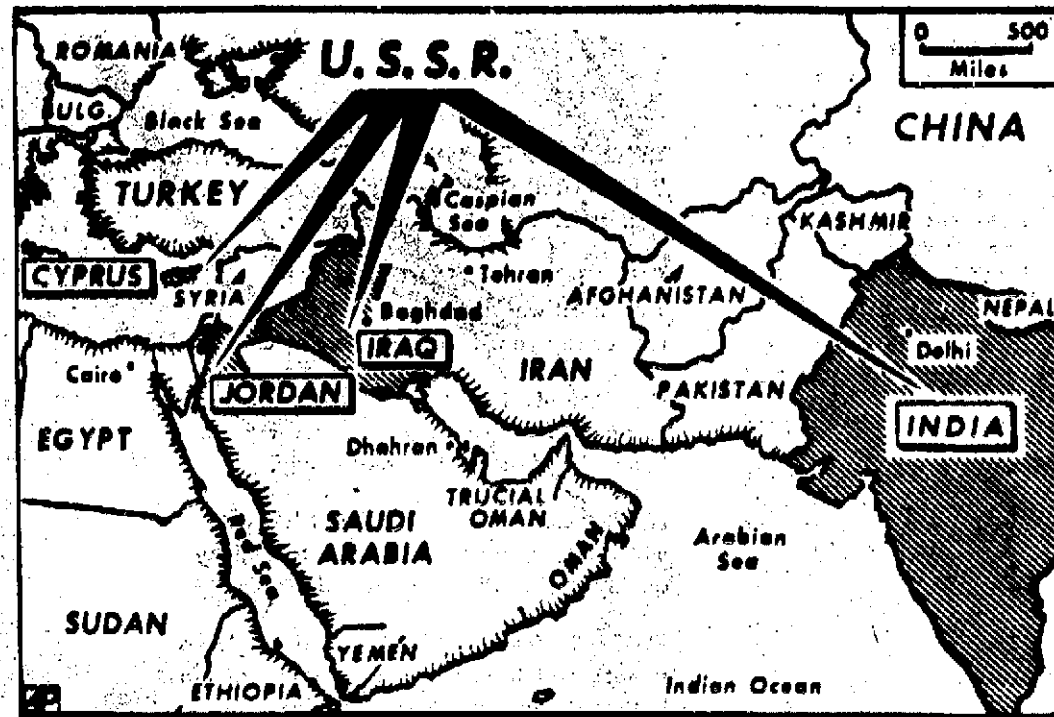

Soviet Premier Khrushchev announced acceptance of an invitation to visit India some time in the future and said he looked forward to a visit by Indian Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri.

In recent years, the Soviets have lost influence in almost every Asian country from Japan in the north along the coast of mainland China to Pakistan, India and Indonesia were the two countries where they had a chance to hang on against Communist China.

Because of the MIG deal, Moscow will have a strong influence in the Indian air force. An informed source said the Russians will control certain spare parts and technical assistance. That could give them virtual veto powers over how and when the Indian planes will fly.

Nevertheless India looks on its recent deals with Moscow as a great stroke for this country's so-called nonalignment. In Indian eyes the deals balance off earlier military aid deals with the United States.

In addition New Delhi finds comfort in the deals because they are taken as an assurance of Soviet support against possible Communist China threats in the future.

Power Politics Victories

Middle East, Scene of Extensive Red Success

BY WEBB MCKINLEY

BEIRUT, Lebanon, (AP) —

The Soviet Union again is scoring points in the great Middle Eastern game of power politics.

Moscow's fortunes, if not necessarily Moscow's brand of communism, are on the rise while the West strives to hold on to what it has left in this ever-changing part of the world.

The Soviet Union's most publicized gains have been scored this year in Cyprus. There the bearded Archbishop Makarios, variously described as the wildest and most naive of politicians, has thrown out his arms in friendship to Moscow after failing to find satisfaction elsewhere.

Somewhat doubtfully, Soviet Premier Khrushchev has promised to give aid.

Red Fear

The Soviet arming of Cyprus would be a consequence of trends long seen. Even in the days of British rule, Cyprus turned out a 38 per cent Communist vote. Fear of Red domination of the island has been one motivation of Turkish policy toward Cyprus.

Strangely enough, it also has been the mainspring of the policy of Greece, whose leaders decided last winter to give all-out support to Makarios to keep him out of the Soviet embrace. The policy has not worked, and Moscow continues to chalk up gains on the embittered island. If it remains independent, Cyprus almost surely will become a leftist neutral in the manner of President Nasser's Egypt.

and Britain's key bases there will soon be gone.

While the Cypriot minister of trade and industry talked in Moscow about arms and aid, Premier Aly Sabry of Egypt arrived to do the same. His main purpose was to discuss the Soviet offer of a $280 million long-term loan offered the United Arab Republic during Khrushchev's trip to Egypt last May. Sabry may also have discussed a project currently favored by Arab leaders: The equipping of the newly planned Arab Palestine army with Soviet weapons, via the Egyptian supply line.

This in Western eyes could turn out to be a propaganda victory of major proportions.

Pro-Soviet Trend

The Soviet Union also has made gains in Iraq, whose policy has shifted from violent anti-communism under the ousted Baath government, to emotional neutralism under President Abdel Salam Aref. Western diplomats foresee a growing pro-Soviet trend in Baghdad as Aref and his associates strive to promote unity with Nasser's Egypt.

Even little Jordan, for long under sturdy King Hussein the most pro-Western of the Arab states, has been making noises about getting support from Moscow. More than once recently Hussein has said if Jordan's 30,000 strong Arab Legion could not get enough arms from Britain and America, it would turn to the Soviet Union for them. At the recent Arab summit conference in Alexandria, the Jordanian information minister, perialism," the doom of colonialism, the rising nationalism that sees foreign bases as insults and the Soviet Union as the force that opposes them.

All this has made the Middle East an ideal arena for raw power politics. In the eyes of many thoughtful observers, the men from the Kremlin are playing the game too well for Western comfort.
